Wilson Cannot Proclaim Peace

questions, so far as I myself am concerned.

Affects Only Ratifying Powers

Permit me to answer your fifth question by saying that the provisions of the treaty to which you refer operate merely to establish peace between the powers ratifying, and that it is questionable whether it can be said that the league of nations is in any true sense created by the association of only three of the allied and associated governments.

In reply to your sixth question, I can only express the confident opinion that the immediate adoption of the treaty, along with the articles of the covenant of the league as written, would certainly within the near future reduce the cost of living in this country as elsewhere, by restoring production and commerce to their normal strength and freedom.

For your convenience, I will number the remaining paragraphs of this letter as the questions to which they are intended to reply are numbered.

Seven. I have had no official information as to whether Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland or Switzerland will join the league.

Eight. I answered your eighth question in reply to a question asked me at our conference the other day. (This question referred to licensing of exports to Germany.)

Spain Represents U. S.

Nine. In February, 1917, Spain was requested to take charge of American interests in Germany through her diplomatic and consular representatives, and no other arrangement has since been made.

Ten. The committee to prepare plans for the organization of the league, for the establishment of the seat of the league, and for the proceedings of the first meeting of the assembly, has been appointed, but has not reported.

Eleven. Article 118 of the peace treaty, part IV, under which Germany renounces all her rights to territory formerly belonging to herself or to her allies, was understood so far as special provision was not made in the treaty itself for its disposition, as constituting the principal allied and associated powers the authority by which such disposition should ultimately be determined. It conveys no title to those powers, but merely entrusts the disposition of the territory in question to their decision.

Trustees of Colonies

Twelve. Germany's renunciation in favor of the principal allied and associated powers of her rights and titles to her overseas possessions is meant similarly to operate as vesting in those powers a trusteeship with respect of their final disposition and government.

Thirteen. There has been a provisional agreement as to the disposition of these overseas possessions, whose confirmation and execution is dependent upon the approval of the league of nations, and the United States is a party to that provisional agreement.

Fourteen. The only agreement between France and Great Britain with regard to African territory, of which I am cognizant, concerns the redisposition of rights already possessed by those countries on that continent. The provisional agreement referred to in the preceding paragraph covers all the German overseas possessions in Africa as well as elsewhere.

Fifteen. No mention was made in connection with the settlement of the Saar basin or the service of an American member of the commission of five to be sent up there.

American on Border Commission

Sixteen. It was deemed wise that the United States should report by one member of the committee for settling the new frontier lines of Belgium and Germany because of the universal opinion that America's representative would add to the committee the useful element of entirely disinterestedness.

Seventeen. The choice of the commission for the Saar basin was left to the council of the league of nations because the Saar basin is for fifteen years to be directly under the care and direction of the league of nations.

Eighteen. Article LXXXIII does in effect provide that five of the members of the commission of seven to fix the boundaries between Poland and Czecho-Slovakia should be nominated by certain countries because there are five principal allied and associated powers, and the nomination of five representatives by those powers necessarily means the nomination of one representative by each of those powers.

Polish Commission Unchosen

Nineteen. No such commission has yet been appointed. (The commission referred to is that for the fixing of the Polish boundaries.)

Twenty. It was deemed wise that the United States should have a representative on the commission set up to exercise authority over the plebiscite of upper Silesia, for the same reason that I have given with regard to the commission for settling the frontier line of Belgium and Germany.

Sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

More Testimony on Shantung

Today the foreign relations committee occupied itself again with the treaty provision giving Japan control in Shantung.

Dr. J. C. Ferguson, adviser to the president of China, continuing his testimony, told the committee that, while there was a difference between the Chinese text of the Lansing-Ishii agreement as made public in Pekin by the Japanese and American legations, he attached "no importance" to the circumstance because the English text was recognized as the official one. He said that while the English text recognized Japan's "special interest" in China, the Japanese translation gave the idea also of a "special influence."

The witness expressed belief that the guarantee of "regional understandings" in the league of nations covenant might involve "an indirect indorsement" of the Lansing-Ishii agreement by the Senate.

An hour after the committee met Senator Knox called attention that Senator Swanson, of Virginia, was the only Democrat among the eight members present, and suggested that "we send out for some of our Democratic brethren to help expedite the treaty."

The committee proceeded, however, without calling the absentees.

Tomorrow the committee will hear Professor E. T. Williams, formerly head of the State Department's far eastern division, who resigned as an adviser to the Versailles conference because, it was reported, he disagreed with the Shantung settlement.

FALL'S TWENTY QUESTIONS WHICH WILSON ANSWERS

Senator Fall's twenty questions on the peace treaty, answered today by President Wilson, briefly stated, were as follows:

First. Have you authority to restore peace by proclamation?

Second. Could not Congress, joined by the President, declare peace?

Third. Is not the war terminated by the filing of the first process verbal?

Fourth. Could you not resume governmental relations with Germany?

Fifth. Will the league be established when three allied powers ratify the treaty? Will the state of war terminate for the non-ratifying powers?

Sixth. How will ratification reduce the cost of living?

Seventh. Have you heard from Sweden, Denmark, Holland and Switzerland whether they will join the league?

Eighth. Are you allowing business with Germany?

Ninth. Have you requested consular agents of other countries to represent America in Germany?

Tenth. Was a committee appointed to prepare plans for the league, has it reported?

Eleventh. To what nations does territory renounced by Germany go?

Twelfth. What title does the United States receive to German overseas possessions?

Thirteenth. Has there been any agreement as to the disposition of German overseas colonies?

Fourteenth. Has there been an agreement between France and Great Britain for disposition of German possessions in Africa?

Fifteenth. Why should America be represented on the Saarre commission?

Sixteenth—Why should America be represented on the Belgian-German frontier commission?

Seventeenth—Why was it not provided that three of the Sarre boundry commission members be nationals of other powers than France and Germany?

Eighteenth—Why was it not provided that certain countries should nominate all members of the commission to fix the boundaries betwgen Poland and Czecho-Slovakia?

Nineteenth—Has the Poland-Czecho-Slovakia commission been appointed?

Twentieth—Why is the United States to appoint one of the four members of the commission on the Upper Silesian plebiscite and the decision of the commission left to a majority vote?

Pittman's Blunder Unites Republicans

tations which are in effect amendments to the covenant. And once that is done both sides will face the necessity of compromise. That compromise will have to be upon the lines of reservations included in the resolution of ratification, but so phrased as to avoid the necessity of the acceptance by other powers. On this point the President will yield.

The Republican senators are beginning to hear from their constituents on the subject of delay. Western senators are receiving telegrams daily approving their inquiry into the treaty and the idea of reservations that will make the position of the United States clear and safe, but insisting that action shall be taken promptly.

A political observer, who has just returned to Washington from a long trip through the West, reports that everywhere the question was asked him, "When will the Senate get through with the treaty?" It was asked in an impatient, critical way. It indicated that the voters felt the Republican leaders were quibbling over trifles, and it made plain the desire of the country that the Senate should dispose of the treaty as soon as possible.

Will Look Like Wilson Victory

The Republican leaders in the Senate, however, played their hand. They have created a foreign relations committee that does not represent the Republican majority in the Senate. They and certain Republican newspapers throughout the country have put the party into the position before the people of demanding the amendment of the treaty. The treaty is not going to be amended. And when only interpretative resolutions are accepted it will look to the country in spite of his repeated yielding as though the President had won a victory.

The older and more prominent Republicans have let themselves be so blinded to their personal dislike of the President, that they are sacrificing the plain political advantage of the situation.

articles in the covenant the construction of which has been delegated to the league.

"The council acts for the league in such cases. It consists of nine members—the United States, Great Britain, Italy, France and Japan will therefore, constitute a majority of the council.

"If all these countries pass a similar resolution to the one I introduced, it will constitute a pledge of each of these countries to give the construction set forth in the resolution, whenever the construction of such articles may arise in the future. These nations should all adopt the resolution before we act upon the treaty, then the debate upon reservations would be avoided and the treaty could be immediately ratified without change.

"These are the reasons why early action should be taken."

PITTMAN TO PRESS MOTION, HE ASSERTS

Wants Allies to Adopt Resolution Similar to His

Washington, Aug. 21.—(By A. P.)—In a formal statement today Senator Pittman said he had not abandoned his purpose to press his resolution for reservations apart from ratification of the peace treaty later and would attempt to get action as soon as possible.

"My resolution went over under the rules," he said, "subject to being called up de novo at any time. I did not call it up today because a number of senators requested an opportunity to examine the resolution. I intend to attempt to obtain the earliest possible action. It was introduced for the purpose of hastening the ratification of the treaty.

"I interpreted the President's statements at the conference with the foreign relations committee to mean that he and the other framers of the covenant gave to the articles mentioned in my resolution substantially the same interpretation that it is attempted to be given to the resolution. The President had no knowledge of the resolution or of its introduction. Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan will undoubtedly have no hesitation in passing resolutions of similar purport.

"While the construction to be given to Article I, dealing with the withdrawal from the league, and Article X, with regard to protection of government, members of the league, against external aggression, and other articles, are subject only to the separate construction of each government, there are

GETS 2 WAR CROSSES FOR DEED HE FORGOT

Sergeant 'Nick' Manvi, of Camden, Saved Three U. S. Soldiers

Two war crosses were given "Nick" Manvi, of Camden, today for a deed of valor in the war which he had forgotten.

Manvi, who is twenty-three years old and lives at 313 Cleveland terrace, came back from France and went to work in the yards of the New York Shipbuilding Company.

Today Sergeant Peck, of the Camden recruiting station, went to him with two war crosses, one sent by the Italian Government and the other by the French Government. There were also papers containing praise for Manvi from distinguished army officers, including General Pershing.

In the Argonne battle Manvi had gone far ahead of the front line to save three American soldiers. To his mind it was all a part of a soldier's duty and he thought no more of the matter. But while he forgot that he was a hero, three great governments did not, and so Manvi is being honored in Camden today.

He was drafted in 1918 and sent to Camp Dix. He went to France with the 309th Infantry. Manvi was born in Italy and came to this country six years ago.

HEINZ 'MARKS TIME' PENDING FOOD LAWS

Former Administrator Goes to Pittsburgh—Will Not Return Here for a Month

While Washington decides what shall be the next step in the national fight against food profiteers, the men who served in the wartime food administration here are taking a breathing spell.

Howard Heinz has returned to Pittsburgh. He left Philadelphia last evening, and does not expect to be back for a month, unless there is some important new development.

There has been no decision concerning the appointment of the fair-price committees for Philadelphia and other counties. It is not expected that appointments will be made until Congress has acted on the proposed food legislation.

Though prosecutions for hoarding will continue, there is not likely to be any effort to reach the small profiteers, since they cannot be punished under the present law. The suggested change in the Lever law would force dealers to take out licenses, which could be revoked for profiteering.

GOVERNORS MAY MEET HERE

1920 Plans Not Announced Officially. Sproul on Committee

Special Dispatch to Evening Public Ledger

Salt Lake City, Aug. 21.—While no formal announcement has been made, the governors attending the conference here have virtually agreed that the 1920 conference shall be held in Philadelphia.

The conference elected Governor Sproul to the legislative committee. The others elected were Governors Robertson, of Oklahoma, and Bamberger, of Utah. This committee will choose a chairman and select the conference city for 1920. Governor Townsend, of Delaware, was elected treasurer and M. C. Riley was re-elected secretary of the conference.

BANKS BUSINESS COLLEGE
AN "ACCREDITED" COMMERCIAL SCHOOL
919 WALNUT STREET

William Penn Charter School
No. 8 South Twelfth Street
PHILADELPHIA

Founded in 1689 and chartered by William Penn on the same day as the city of Philadelphia. The Penn Charter School has maintained an uninterrupted corporate existence. During the past 44 years, the school has graduated over 1300 pupils, of whom more than 1200 have continued their studies in a score of universities and professional schools. The unusual proportion of alumni who have taken one or more university degrees is due largely to the character and permanency of the teaching staff, numbering over 30 members. Of these the six senior members have given to the school an average term of service of 26 years. For three years there have been no changes in the staff, save additions to meet the requirements of increased enrollment, which has already taxed to capacity the new building added to equipment last year. Magnificent playing fields of 22 acres afford ample facilities for the exercise of a school of 500.

The 231st year begins September 23rd. The Prospectus for 1919-20 is ready for distribution. Buildings are open for inspection and classification of pupils September 9th.
