ENGLISH BANK RATE UP

Minimum Discount Advanced to 6 Per Cent—First Change Since 1917

Much to the surprise of the banking and financial world the governors of the Bank of England today advanced the minimum discount rate from 5 to 6 per cent.

This is the first change made in the English discount rate since April 5, 1917, when it was reduced from 5½ to 5 per cent. The lower rate was maintained throughout the war period.

The action furnished convincing testimony of the growing tension in the international money markets.
