WALL STREET IS IN VERY GLOOMY MOOD

Country Must Take Bitter Pill of Inevitable Adjustment of Credit Situation

New York, May 15.—The Evening Sun in its weekly financial review today says:

The securities market moved this week through the darkening shadows cast by the portentous labor situation, transportation congestion, commercial transition and lesser substances of more or less importance. It was one of those periods in which Wall street gives way to indulgence in gloomy foreboding and submerges the spirit to look for signs of hopeful things. It was a period, in short, reflective of forces, economic and social, working through mists in order that the mists may ultimately be cleared away. How much time this operation may consume is the question the financial community is concerned with. It cannot be answered now and apparently the street has determined to settle back and await light on the subject.

Indications have multiplied of late that the country is in revolt against high prices for commodities of all kinds. The individual buyer no longer pays a price unquestioningly. This attitude has coincided with the arrival of the credit problem at the doors of mercantile establishments. The result has been in several notable instances that such establishments have revised their prices downward. The process of credit liquidation has been carried far in Wall street; that process has now been extended to commercial and business channels. There is seen in this a beginning of the inevitable adjustment which the country must experience before it can start anew on a sound and normal basis.

Some take the view that the sooner a beginning is made the better it will be for everybody concerned. This is a long range view which is constructive because, as in the case of the patient undergoing painful treatment, it points straight to recovery and strength. Others can see only the bitterness of the medicine. This class may be said to represent the professional element in the stock market. It is the class which at present is making market sentiment. Six weeks ago that class was bullish because the public was in the market to some extent and day to day business in stocks was in a comparatively flourishing condition. Today it is bearish because there is no public trading in stocks and there is scant profit in the give and take between the traders. The public has learned that the country must take a pill. It stands aside to see how the pill will work.

The United States has a sound constitution and should respond readily to treatment. To look for calamity is to invite it. The country will require all its resources, but, as a banker of note remarked a week or more ago, it has the resources and a panic is not to be thought of. An interval of business depression can scarcely be regarded as too high a price to pay for the victory achieved over autocracy. These are the terms in which Wall street leaders are thinking. The technical position within the stock market is not lacking in elements to encourage. Prices are dragging along the bottom. It was stated that liquidation of the week was pretty well absorbed by investors who bought and took the stocks out of the market. There is a sizable short interest still, although it is probable that it is spotty rather than uniform. The yield in stocks and bonds alike has been brought more nearly in line with the cost of capital.

Money was tight, but rates were not high under the circumstances. Call loans rates indeed advanced to as high as 12 per cent at the end of the week, mainly because of government withdrawals of some $57,000,000 against the payment of interest coupons due on the second Liberty Loan today, but they ruled around 7 and 8 per cent. It served to show the sensitiveness of the demand money market at a time when demand and supply alike were moderate. That investors have money with which to buy securities when the interest rate is at all commensurate with the present cost of capital was proved conclusively by the eagerness with which new offerings were taken. There were Northern Pacific equipment trusts and Pacific Fruit Express Co. notes, both paying 7 per cent, which sold quickly. The Morgans offered $7,500,000 Louisville and Nashville ten-year 7 per cent gold notes and other similar projects were in the air.

The foreign trade situation has some aspects to recommend it. While it is true that our exports to more important destinations continue to increase, a circumstance deprecated in some quarters because credits here are largely paying for them, it is equally true that imports from Europe are also increasing steadily. For example, Great Britain's exports in April were nearly double those of 1919 and more than double those of 1913. The same is approximately true of every month this year. The increase in her imports, particularly from this country, was made up mainly of materials and partly manufactured goods to be used for further manufactures. In March, the United Kingdom, France and Italy increased the value of their exports to the United States by 500 per cent, as compared with January, 1919. England has shown the most consistent gain. France makes a very good showing, while Italy has been a bit sporadic, but the trend toward restoration of a more normal balance of trade is not to be ignored.

Women of Lafayette Chapter Join "Patch 'Em and Wear 'Em Club"

Atlantic City, May 15.—The Lafayette Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution, including in its membership some of the foremost society women of the city and county, today joined the "Patch 'em and wear 'em club" in the fight against old H. C. L. When obliged to purchase new apparel, members are pledged to get inexpensive material and garments are to be plainly and simply made.

A resolution was adopted pledging members of the chapter "to conserve every necessity in every consistent manner; also to dress in what clothing we now possess, as far as practicable, patching if necessary, buying new only when positively needed, until such time as production shall again meet the demand."

CENSUS RECORD BROKEN

Two Detroit Suburbs Multiply Population Many Times

Washington, May 15.—(By A. P.)—All records for increases in population as reported in the 1920 census were broken today by two Detroit suburbs, Hamtramck and Highland Park, which since 1910 have increased 1266 and 1031 per cent, respectively.

Neither Hamtramck nor Highland Park had more than a few thousand inhabitants ten years ago. Detroit's automobile factory workers sought the two towns for homes, and today the Census Bureau reported a population of 48,615 for Hamtramck and 46,599 for Highland Park.

Prior to today's report Kenmore, O., with an increase of 712.5 per cent, held the record for population growth. Kenmore, however, is smaller than the two Michigan cities, having only 12,683 inhabitants.

BONOMI INDICATO A SUCCEDERE A NITTI

La Proposta Sarebbe Stata Suggerita al Re dall'On. Nitti Stesso

Published and Distributed Under PERMIT NO. 341. Authorized by the act of October 6, 1917, on file at the Postoffice of Philadelphia, Pa.
A. S. BURLESON, Postmaster General.

Londra, 15 maggio.—Il suggerimento che l'On. Bonomi, ministro borghese della Guerra sotto il dimissionario Gabinetto, sia chiamato a formare il nuovo Ministero in Italia, e' stata fatta dal l'On. Nitti in una conferenza che lo stesso ha avuto con Re Vittorio Emanuele alle ore 6 della scorsa sera, cio' secondo un dispaccio da Roma all'Agenzia Reuter.

L'On. Nitti avrebbe rifiutato di riprendere l'incarico per la formazione del nuovo Gabinetto.

Roma, 14 maggio.—I giornali si diffondono a commentare le trattative per risolvere la crisi ministeriale e la maggioranza propende per un ministero di coalizione Nitti-Meda-Bonomi.

Pero' si osserva che l'On. Meda ha ripetutamente dichiarato di essere contrario a partecipare al Governo, per ragioni personali, ma si crede che le sue riluttanze potranno essere vinte.

All'ultima ora nei circoli giornalistici circolava la notizia che tanto Tittoni quanto Orlando avevano indicato la riconferma del mandato a Nitti, ovvero cederlo all'On. Giolitti. Si assicura pero' che l'On. Nitti abbia rifiutato recisamente di accettare il mandato, mentre Giolitti si mantiene riluttante.

La quinta sessione della Lega delle Nazioni si e' riunita presso il Ministero delle Colonie e, sopra mozione di Leone Bourgeois, l'On. Tittoni, presidente del Senato, fu eletto a presidere la sessione e pronunzio' il discorso inaugurale.

Secondo quanto stampa la Tribuna il concilio avrebbe discusso la replica a M. Chicherin, ministro per gli affari esteri dei bolscevichi, decidendo di rispondere che la commissione della Lega deve essere ricevuta in Russia incondizionatamente.

DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

"CATS IN BIRDLAND"

By DADDY

Thomas, Tiger and Blackie Cat go to Birdland to hunt birds. Peggy and Billy make a sticky trap in which they catch the cats.

CHAPTER VI

Good-by, Cats

ALL the birds in Birdland came flocking to the little valley to see the bird-hunting cats that had been caught in the sticky trap made by Peggy and Billy. The yowling and wails of the cats were like good music to them, while the struggles of the cats to get free were as funny as a show.

And the cats really were comical. Tiger Cat tried to get the burrs out of his face by rubbing his head in the pitch, and before he knew it his head, as well as all four of his paws, was stuck tight. Blackie tried to tear himself loose by pulling backward, and in doing so he sat down in the pitch and he couldn't get up again. Thomas Cat struggled so hard he fell over on his side and the pitch held him so tight he could scarcely wriggle.

"Let's eat the cats," screamed Blue Jay. "That's a good idea," agreed King Bird. "Eat 'em! Eat 'em!" screamed the other birds. "That's what they were going to do to us."

"Before we eat them, I want some fine cat fur to line my nest," chirped Yellow Chat. Hopping on Tiger's back he began to help himself to Tiger's hair, pulling it out by main strength while Tiger yowled and squirmed.

"So do we want hair for our nests," shrieked other birds, and in less than it takes to tell, a dozen warblers and sparrows were plucking hairs from the backs of the helpless cats, who set up a terrific squawking. It hurt to have hairs pulled out that way.

"Now, let's eat 'em," shrieked Blue Jay. "I want to see how cat meat tastes." "So do I," shrilled King Bird. "And so do I," cried Reddy Woodpecker. And with that they hopped on the backs of the cats and each took a nip of cat meat with his sharp beak. That made the cats squall louder than ever.

"Ugh! I don't like cat meat," shrieked Blue Jay. "Neither do I," shrilled King Bird. "I like bugs better," cried Reddy Woodpecker.

Peggy and Billy now thought the cats had been punished enough, so they drove the birds away.

"Will you be good if we let you go and never again try to kill birds?" asked Peggy.

"We'll be good! We'll be good!" promised the cats.

So Peggy and Billy tried to free them from the pitch, but soon found they were stuck too tight.

"We will have to soak you loose," said Billy. "We will dam the brook and let the water loosen the pitch." The cats didn't like that idea a bit, for they were not fond of water, but it seemed the only way.

The dam was built in a hurry. But, my, how the cats did squall and struggle when the water began to creep up around them! They pulled and tugged, tearing their own fur even harder than the birds had done. And the birds, laughing at them, had more fun than if they had been watching a clown in a circus.

As the water rose higher and higher, the cats pulled harder and harder, and at last they pulled themselves free.

"Er-ow! Er-ow! Let's get out of this awful place!" they squalled, and away they went all wet and bedraggled, three much sadder and wiser cats. They'd never go hunting in Birdland again.

Peggy and Billy chased the cats all the way home to be sure they didn't try any more tricks, and Peggy was so tired when she got there she promptly dropped into the hammock and fell fast asleep.

When she awoke, she happened to look over the hedge. There were Blackie, Tiger and Thomas, all sitting in the sun and looking meek and innocent as they sleeked themselves and tried to remove all traces of their hunting trip.

"Clever, clever cats, you're not so clever as you think you are," laughed Peggy. But she didn't say anything to Blackie, Thomas and Tiger. She thought they had been punished enough.

(Next week will be told another Birdland story.)
