FLEEING FUR THIEVES SHOOT AT PATROLMAN

Three Robbers, Foiled in Two Attempts, Escape Bluecoat's Bullets in Motorcar

Three thieves who had attempted to rob two fur shops on Baltimore avenue near Forty-eighth street engaged in a revolver fight with a pursuing patrolman early last Sunday morning and escaped in a motorcar. The facts were made public by the police today.

The robbers tried to force an entrance to the fur shop of Mrs. Catharine Anlung, 4810 Baltimore avenue. They could not open the door and turned attention to the tailoring and fur shop of William Brooks, 4808 Baltimore avenue.

Brooks was aroused by the noise and shouted and fired several shots in the air to summon help. The shots were heard by Patrolman Hindermark, of the Fifty-fifth and Pine streets station.

The patrolman saw the thieves jump into a motorcar. Another car happened to pass and Hindermark commandeered it. The patrolman fired seven shots after the fleeing men, who returned the fire.

The thieves' automobile was of a high-powered type and they quickly outdistanced the pursuing machine. None of the shots took effect.

The Anlung fur shop was robbed of $8000 in furs in February, 1918. Police say the robbery was the indirect cause of the death of Henry F. Anlung, who was proprietor of the store now conducted by his widow.

Laborer Hit by Train

While Gaetano Briamand, forty-three years old, of 1024 Reese street, was walking along the elevated tracks of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway at Eleventh and Vine streets, this morning, he was struck by a passenger train. Briamand, who was hurled thirty feet, was taken to the Hahnemann Hospital, where it was found his skull had probably been fractured and his body cut in many places. He is expected to live. The man is a laborer, employed by the railroad.

Search Fails to Find Man of 80

A city-wide search of hospitals has failed to solve the mysterious disappearance of Patrick Whalen, eighty years old, who started for church early Sunday morning and has not been seen since. He lived with his daughter, Mrs. Margaret McAvoy, at 3556 Morton street, and was released from a hospital three weeks ago. Sunday morning he left the house to attend services at St. Vincent's Catholic Church, Chelten avenue and Chew street. When he failed to return a search was started, which led to every police station and hospital in Philadelphia.
