PER RISOLVERE LA VERTENZA FIUMANA

L'Italia Invia una Delegazione di Deputati per Convincere D'Annunzio

Published and Distributed Under PERMIT NO. 341.
Authorized by the act of October 6, 1917, on file at the Postoffice of Philadelphia, Pa.
A. S. BURLESON, Postmaster General

Roma, 3 dicembre—Una via di uscita per raggiungere un accordo tra D'Annunzio ed il Governo Italiano sembra che sia stata trovata. Una delegazione di influenti deputati partirà questa sera alla volta di Fiume, ove cercherà di persuadere il poeta. Detta delegazione farà comprendere a D'Annunzio il sentimento della nazione verso il trattato di Rapallo, già approvato dalla Camera dei Deputati ed in procinto di essere ratificato dal Senato, e lo pregherà non ad esporsi ulteriormente al trattato, evitando così spargimento di sangue, in vista che il Governo è nella piena decisione di eseguire fedelmente le clausole del trattato stesso. Ciò dimostra' anche che il Parlamento è stato ai servizi resi da D'Annunzio alla causa di Fiume.

Il Governo ha poi dato ordini al Generale Caviglia, comandante delle truppe regolari italiane che hanno stabilito il cordone intorno a Fiume, di evitare tutte le complicazioni o pensi incidenti, secondo una dichiarazione dell'On. Giolitti. La delegazione di deputati inviata a Fiume comprende 16 membri dei varii partiti ad eccezione dei socialisti.

L'On. Giolitti ha informato la Delegazione che l'Italia vuole occupare le isole di Arbe e Veglia, assegnate dal trattato di Rapallo alla Jugoslavia, non per scopo conto ma come rappresentante dell'Intesa, facendo dette isole parte della zona d'armistizio. Inoltre egli ha osservato che le isole non erano incluse nel patto di Londra come territorio da essere assegnato all'Italia. L'evacuazione di Arbe e Veglia non rappresenta un principio di applicazione del patto di Rapallo, ma un atto di necessità da parte dell'Italia per raggiungere le sue aspirazioni.

Philadelphia — In Onore dell'Avv. Paolini

Imponente manifestazione fu quella tributata al giovane avv. Salvatore Paolini, recentemente promosso ad esercitare la professione presso le locali Corti, con il banchetto offertogli domenica scorsa per iniziativa di un comitato di cittandini di Sulmona, capitanato da uno dei più forti ed intelligenti lavoratori italiani, Michele Colamesca, il quale funzionò ottimamente da maestro di cerimonie. L'avv. Paolini, un degno figlio del forte e gentile Abruzzo, già laureato nelle R. Università di Roma, dopo aver esercitato qualche tempo l'avvocatura in quella capitale e collaborato nel giornalismo indipendente, venne in America, ed ora, e nonostante le difficoltà della lingua, la preoccupazione per la sua cara donna, scopo con volontà ferrea affermarsi nell'Università di Pennsylvania e conseguire con onore quella laurea che gli ha dato diritto di entrare nel Foro Filadelfiano.

Baltimore, Dec. 4.—James A. Gary, retired manufacturer and capitalist, who died recently, left an estate of a little more than $1,600,000, according to inventories filed in the Orphans' Court yesterday. The grand total of his holdings, including real and personal property, amounts to $1,691,683.57.

How I lost myself in the corridors at 10 Downing Street, the liver-colored residence of the prime minister, where I lived for a long time—the house where the secrets of the world are locked up. "I never knew what prevented any one from coming into the house at any time."

"A great deal of nonsense has been talked about Lord Kitchener. I was one of the few who regretted Henry making him his minister of war. I had a row with him about the English as well as the Irish soldiers. When he refused to let the bands play at recruiting stations I went to Buckingham Palace to appeal to the king to accomplish that end."

"A far greater figure than Lord Kitchener or Lord Milner was General Botha. He was one of the biggest men I have ever known."

MARGOT ASQUITH
wife of the former British prime minister, tells the inside story of England's most trying days in her intimate diary, another chapter of which is published in
