COUSINING.—A country gentleman lately arrived in Boston, and immediately repaired to the house of a relative, a lady who had married a merchant of that city. The parties were glad to see him and invited him to make their house his home, as he declared his intention of remaining in that city but a day or two. The husband of the lady, anxious to show his attention to a relative and friend of his wife, took the gentleman's horse to a livery stable in Hanover street.

Finally the visit became a visitation, and the merchant, after the lapse of eleven days, found besides lodging and boarding the gentleman, a pretty considerable bill had run up at the livery stable.

Accordingly, he went to the man who kept the stable, and told him when the gentleman took his horse he would pay the bill.

"Very good said the stable keeper, "I understand you."

Accordingly, in a short time, the country gentleman went to the stable and ordered his horse to be got ready. The bill, of course who presented.

"Oh!" said the gentleman, "Mr.—, my relative will pay this."

"Very good sir," said the stable keeper, "please to get an order from Mr.——. It will be the same as money."

The horse was put up again, and down went the country gentleman to Long wharf where the merchant kept.

"Well," said he, "I am going now."

"Are you?" said the merchant, "well, good bye, sir."

"Well, about the horse, the man says the bill must be paid for his keeping."

"Well, I suppose that's all right, sir."

"Yes—well, but you know I'm your wife's cousin."

"Yes," said the merchant, "I know you are, but your horse is not!"
