John Hancock School Exercises Held This Afternoon

Exercises for the graduating class of the John Hancock School were held in the main building, Twelfth street and Fairmount avenue, this afternoon. Seventeen girls and twenty-four boys graduated. The program arranged by the teacher, Abraham Fagles, included: Medley of songs, by the class; reading of class history, Albert Bechtel; prophecy, Charles Keasky; poem, Isadore Shobet and May Hayden; presentation of gift to the school, picture of Beethoven; violin solo, Clara Zagor; sketch, "The Boy Who Was a Coward."

Addresses were made by Edwin W. Adams, superintendent of District No. 6, and by Robert MacMillan, principal of the school. The concert closed with the presentation of gifts to the pupils and the reading of the valedictory by Gregory Moses.

Rudolph Ayers, Sr., Dies

Rudolph Ayers, Sr., father of Judge Ayers, of Camden County District Court, died last night at his home, 817 Chestnut street, Camden, after an illness of several weeks. He was seventy-two years old. His death was due to heart disease. In addition to his son, Judge Ayers, Mr. Ayers is survived by a widow and one daughter, Jennie May Ayers.

CENTRAL HIGH GIVES DEGREES

152 Graduates Awarded Diplomas and Certificates at Commencement Exercises

LARGEST CLASS IN HISTORY

Central High School held its 136th commencement exercises today in the school building at Broad and Green streets. There were present members of many past graduating classes, in addition to the friends and families of the students.

There were 117 graduates who were awarded degrees by the High School, while thirty-five youths received certificates. The exercises were held in the assembly room of the school, in accordance with old custom.

The valedictory was delivered by Henry Warren Parker, while other orations were delivered by other classmen. These follow: "Education," Manuel Trachtenberg; "The Development of High School Education in the United States," Willard Kriebel Heebner; "Philadelphia, a City of World Fairs," William Philip Heuchert; and "The Unity of Spirit and Purpose," by Jacob Morris Honikman.

The four honor men, in their order, follow: Mr. Parker, Louis Schlisman, Edwin de Beer and William Heuchert.

David Louis Hurowitz, 323 South Sixth street, fourteen years old, is the youngest member of the class and one of the youngest students ever graduated from a Philadelphia high school. He supported himself while at school and will enter the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania in the fall.

Dr. John Lewis Haney, president of the school, presented the degrees and certificates. He said in his address that it not only was the largest class in the history of the High School, but the largest proportion of any class, 60 per cent, was going to go to college. The graduates, when receiving diplomas and degrees, broke precedent by squarely facing the audience.

Associated Selling

There are many associations advertising nationally.

While they may be classified in two groups,—(1) those associations that undertake the entire responsibility of marketing, as, for example, Sunkist Oranges or the Walnut Association and (2) associations of which individual members undertake their own marketing in competition with fellow-members, as in the Cement, Magnesia or Southern Pine Association,—

Both types of associations are alike, whether the actual selling is combined or competitive—both combine to "sell an idea" to the public.

If the public is "sold" the desirability of eating more oranges, prunes, raisins or cranberries or using a certain lumber or granite or cedar chest—the actual "selling" has been accomplished—what remains is a comparatively simple problem of distribution.
