Nancy Wynne Tells of the Rankin Tea and the Samuels' Dance at the Merion Club—She Regrets the Death of Miss Dutilh

THE buds who have been introduced this week have certainly been blessed with fine weather. Even though it was a bit too cold for comfort on Tuesday and Wednesday it has been clear and the sky has been unusually beautiful. I just feel as if I could not drink in enough of this wonderful air myself.

Yesterday I went out to Ambler to Cornelia Rankin's tea and it was certainly pretty. Just as I said the other day, it's impossible to say which affair is the prettiest for they are all lovely and I really do decide after each one I go to, that that one was the best.

Cornelia is absolutely as pretty as a picture, or rather no picture could make her quite as pretty as she is, for her coloring is wonderful. She has blue eyes and golden hair, and her skin is like velvet, so soft and pink and white. She is just a little shy and has the sweetest manner imaginable. She was entirely in white, her little French frock being made of chiffon. Mrs. Rankin looked wonderfully well in a gown of gray chiffon velvet combined with lace of the same color.

Eleanor Hart, just home from Europe, a daughter of the William Harts and a most attractive girl, was among the debutantes receiving and Alberta Reath and Evelyn Drayton were there too.

It strikes me we have come upon a singularly pretty group of buds this season. Many of them are indeed extraordinarily pretty.

THE other debutante affair yesterday was the dance at the Merion Cricket Club, which Mr. and Mrs. John B. Samuel, of 2015 Pine street, gave for their two daughters, Lois and Maria. By the way the Samuel girls are not twins. There is a year's difference in their ages, but they have always been perfectly inseparable and are both blondes, so a great many people have thought they were twins. They are extremely attractive girls and were lovely in their white lace frocks which were made over pink satin slips. Mrs. Samuel wore a smart black lace gown.

There were several dinners before the dance. Mrs. Alfred Paul Morris gave one for Priscilla, her second daughter, who is a debutante this year. You know she is a sister of Ottilie Morris, who came out last year. Mr. and Mrs. William A. Lippincott, Jr., gave a dinner for the Samuel girls. Mr. and Mrs. Lippincott are their uncle and aunt, you know. Mrs. Lippincott and Mrs. Samuel being sisters. Mrs. Samuel was Miss Marie Robb and Mrs. Lippincott, Miss Ann Robb.

THE death of Miss Emily Dutilh, which occurred yesterday at her home on Broad street just below Spruce, marks the passing of a charming old lady long an active figure in Philadelphia life, though of late years she was confined much to the house because of infirmities.

Miss Emily was the second daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Dutilh, and she lived at 311 South Broad street, near the City Club. In fact, her house is the one remaining private residence on Broad street between Market and Pine streets. She was a sister of Mrs. Samuel Bell, of 268 South Sixteenth street, and of the late Mrs. Grugan, of New York and this city.

Miss Dutilh's father was long prominent in affairs in this city and was president of the Pennsylvania Company for Insurances on Lives and Granting Annuities for many years. He was identified with many business transactions and was a highly important man in this city sixty or seventy years ago. Miss Emily had passed her four-score years and was a very handsome, stately woman. She did many charitable acts in her life, but was of that old school of Philadelphians who never let their right hands know what their left hands do.

She is survived by her sister, Mrs. Bell, and by five grandnieces and nephews—Mr. Dutilh Grugan and his sister Emilie, who married a New York man; Mr. Samuel Bell, Jr., Miss Florence Bell, of this city, and her sister, Mae Bell, who is married and lives in Norristown.

I WAS interested yesterday in hearing of the engagement of Eleanor Daingerfield Carter, of Baltimore, and Morgan Edward La Montagne, of New York, for the Carters and La Montagnes both have Philadelphia relations, and Eleanor has visited here on various occasions. Eleanor Carter is a niece of the Rev. George Calvert Carter, of Bryn Mawr, and Mrs. Ernest Law, of St. Davids, and Lady Acheson, of England, is her aunt. Ned La Montagne is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rene La Montagne, of New York. His mother was Miss Laura Morgan, and she is closely related to the Morgan family of this city and to the Fishers, Carsons and other families here. It is altogether a very delightful match, and I understand the wedding is to take place in November in Baltimore.

GRANDPA brought the two boys a little pail and shovel to play with in their garden. In fact, it was really Dickie who played with them, for Dickie, you see, is four and baby brother is only two, so he can't play quite so hard. The boys were much delighted with the present and could hardly wait to play with it next day. So when they came down to breakfast and daddy remarked to mother, "I think baby brother is a little pale," Dickie spoke up and said very quickly, "and I'm a little shovel." NANCY WYNNE.

MISS ELEANOR ROBB WEDS T. LINEAWEAVER

Marriage of Miss Mary Elizabeth Elliott and Mr. Arthur Pew

A wedding of much social interest was solemnized at noon today, when Miss Eleanor Robb, daughter of Mrs. Henry Burnett Robb, of 1726 Spruce street and Acrefair, Haverford, became the bride of Mr. Thomas H. Lineaweaver, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas T. Lineaweaver, of Lebanon, Pa.

The ceremony was performed in the Church of the Redeemer, Bryn Mawr, which was artistically decorated with autumn flowers and foliage. The Rev. J. Poyntz Tyler, Bishop of North Dakota, officiated, assisted by the Rev. George Calvert Carter, the rector of the church. Bishop Tyler also officiated at the wedding of the bride's parents. The bride was attired in a smart frock of ivory white satin, elaborately embroidered in pearls. The corsage was trimmed with old family lace, which adorned her mother's and grandmother's wedding gowns. The long court train, extending from the shoulders, was embroidered in pearls. Her veil of tulle was edged with old family lace and was surmounted by a coronet of lace and clusters of orange blossoms arranged on either side. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of orange blossoms and white gardenias edged with a frill of lace.

Mrs. John Howard Whelen, Jr., attended as matron of honor, and Miss Mary Starr Griscom was maid of honor. They were attired in quaint frocks of golden yellow taffeta, trimmed with net of the same hue. The round, full skirts were effectively adorned with flowers composed of the taffeta. They wore large black velvet picture hats, gracefully draped with black lace falling from the brim at one side in long streamer effect. They wore silver slippers and stockings and carried old-fashioned bouquets of small blue flowers and tea roses. The bridesmaids included Miss Peggy Rosengarten and Miss Susan B. Stewart, of this city; Miss Elizabeth Lineaweaver, of Lebanon, Pa., sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Mariand C. Hobbs, of Brookline, Mass. They were attired in frocks similar to the matron and maid of honor, only of a deeper shade of golden yellow, with silver slippers and stockings, black velvet picture hats and carried old-fashioned bouquets.

Mr. William E. Studdford, of New York, attended Mr. Lineaweaver as best man. The ushers included Mr. Thomas Robbins, Jr., and Mr. Anson W. H. Taylor, of New York; Mr. Harry Thompson and Mr. David K. E. Bruce, of Baltimore; Mr. Grant Lineaweaver, of Lebanon, brother of the bridegroom, and Mr. W. Beaumont Whitney, Mr. John H. Whelen, Jr., and Mr. Wister Randolph, all of this city.

A breakfast followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's mother.

On their return from a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Lineaweaver will live in Lebanon.

PEW—ELLIOTT

The wedding of Miss Mary Elizabeth Elliott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Jr Elliott, of 317 South Seventeenth street, and Mr. Arthur Edmund Pew took place at noon today at the Calvary Presbyterian Church.

The chancel and church were attractively decorated with white chrysanthemums and ferns.

The Rev. Andrew Mutch, of the Bryn Mawr Presbyterian Church, performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory white satin and rare old point lace. The long sleeves were of shirred tulle and extended to points over the hand. Her veil was composed of old cream-colored point lace draped very simply in cap effect and fell in graceful folds to the end of the long court train of satin, where it was caught with clusters of orange blossoms.

She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and white orchids. Mrs. J. Murray Mitchell, Jr., and Mrs. Allan McLane, Jr., of New York, attended the bride as matrons of honor.

They wore smart frocks of autumnal colors, shading from a rich dark brown to gold color of chiffon over gold-color satin fashioned on simple lines. They wore gold-colored slippers and stockings. Their picturesque hats were composed of soft wood-brown velvet adorned with long ostrich plumes, shading from brown to gold, falling to the shoulders. They carried arm bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums, dahlias and autumn leaves.

Miss Hannah Marim Elliott attended her sister as maid of honor. She was gowned in a frock of cream and gold lace over a foundation of gold-color satin with a girdle of gold. She wore gold slippers and stockings and carried yellow autumn flowers and autumn leaves.

The bridesmaids included Miss Martha Dodgson Baker, Miss Caroline S. Barclay, Miss Josephine Primrose Reeves, of this city, Miss Louise Harkness, Miss Katharine Van Ingen, of New York, Miss Susanna Wood, of Boston, Miss Katharine Ordway, of St. Paul, Minn., and Miss Edith Cummings, of Chicago. They were attired alike in two-toned gold-color chiffon frocks over gold-colored satin and wore gold-color slippers and stockings and carried bouquets of yellow autumn flowers and foliage. The hats of the maids of honor and bridesmaids were similar to the matrons of honor. Mrs. Elliott was attired in an attractive gown of fawn-color lace embroidered in blue and a black velvet hat trimmed with a blue plume.

Mr. Walter C. Pew attended his brother as best man. The ushers included Mr. William L. Austin, Jr., Mr. Burnham Lewis, Mr. William S. Newlin, Dr. David C. Sloane, Mr. James A. Devlin, Jr., Mr. John Bell Hubbs, Mr. Mr. David B. Smith, Jr., Mr. Wayne Evans, Mr. John H. Mason, Jr., of this city, and Mr. Allan McLane, Jr., of New York. A small breakfast followed at the home of the bride's parents.

ORCHESTRA OPENS SEASON BRILLIANTLY

Franck-Elgar-Wagner Program Rendered by Augmented Organization

THE PROGRAM

Symphony D minor ..... Franck
"Enigma" Variations ..... Elgar
Wotan's Farewell and Fire Music ..... Wagner

The Philadelphia Orchestra, renewed by the long vacation and increased to more than 100 men on the personnel, opened the season of 1921-22 at the Academy of Music yesterday afternoon with Mr. Stokowski on the conductor's stand and a capacity audience in the house.

Mr. Stokowski made even more radical changes in the seating of the organization than that which he introduced at the close of last season. The first violins and tympani remain where they have always been, but nearly every other instrument in the orchestra has been changed. The second violins sit now next to the firsts, on the left-hand side of the stage, with the violas next to them, the cellos next and the entire wood-wind section on the extreme right in the position formerly occupied by the second violins and violas. The ten basses still stand at the rear of the stage, but they have been moved to the left a considerable distance. The brass stretches along one row nearer to the front of the platform than the basses, with the tubas at the left, then the trombones, trumpets and French horns in that order.

Due perhaps somewhat to the new arrangement in seating and somewhat to the fact that the orchestra has been augmented in numbers, the playing yesterday had an unusual sonority. The program opened with the beautiful D minor symphony of Cesar Franck, the one really great French contribution to the literature of the symphony. It was finely performed and read by Mr. Stokowski with all the reverence which this work inspires in both listener and performer. The marvelous detail which makes the composition stand as unique in symphonic music was very clearly brought out, and indeed was emphasized by the new seating arrangements. To the same cause may be ascribed a curious feeling of aloofness in the solo passages on the winds and horns when accompanied only by the strings, although the general effect of this was piquant and by no means displeasing.

The "Enigma" variations of Elgar have been so infrequently played here that they came in the nature of a semi-novelty. Many of the fourteen follow what seems to be the first principle of modern variation writing—that the variation shall be as far removed from the theme as possible. They are meant to display musically the characteristics of fourteen friends of the composer and they doubtless do to those who knew the persons so described, but not to the casual hearer. A composition of this sort must represent a definite mood and the variation form is too short to allow such a mood to be thus established. They are principally interesting from the standpoint of the orchestration, which is very skillful and effective.

The concluding number was Wotan's Farewell and the Magic Fire Music from "Die Walkuere." Mr. Stokowski is always en rapport with the sonority of the Wagner orchestration, which can be massive and colorful without being heavy, and the orchestra gave the music a fine performance. The huge audience greeted the conductor with great applause, both upon his appearance and at the close of the program.

Considering the new members and the difficulty of the program, the orchestra played exceedingly well, although there were those unmistakable evidences of the long vacation, which are always apparent at the opening concert or two.

MUSIC NOTES

At next week's concerts of the Philadelphia Orchestra the features will be the Philadelphia debut of the Hungarian violinist, Emil Telmanyi, and the American premiere of a work by Walter Braunfels, entitled "Fantastic Variations on a Theme of Berlioz." The symphony is the second of Brahms, and Debussy's "The Afternoon of a Faun" completes the program. Mr. Telmanyi will play Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole."

Notable among local musical activities will be the series of five subscription concerts by the New York Symphony Orchestra, of which Walter Damrosch is the conductor-in-chief, and which will be heard at the Academy of Music on Thursday evenings, October 27, November 17, December 15, January 19 and February 23. The coming season will mark the thirty-seventh of Mr. Damrosch as conductor of the orchestra.

The Federated Music Clubs of Pennsylvania will give five concerts on Monday afternoons in the foyer of the Academy of Music on November 28, December 12, January 23, February 6 and February 20. The series will open on November 28 with a piano recital by Yolando Mero.

"Peek-a-Boo" at the Casino

It takes two special cars to carry the elaborate scenery for "Peek-a-Boo," the offering at the Casino next week. This is one of the star shows on the burlesque wheel. There are sixty members of the company, not the least of whom are the twenty pretty chorus girls. The featured players are the Kelso brothers, comedians; Florence Darly, who has been recruited from the vaudeville ranks; Howard Morrissey, Ed Quigley, Al Dayton, Baiser Trio, Gertrude Mullen and Maurice K. Cummings.
