JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Tells of the Accident to Charles E. Mather, Jr.—She Hears of Several Sailings for Europe—Other Bits of Interesting Doings in the Social World

WELL, it is a good thing we had a chance to breathe yesterday and Sunday after last week. My goodness but Saturday was a strenuous day! For after it cleared off in the afternoon, of course a great many went to the races. Then there were Eleanor Hart's tea and the Stotesburys' housewarming and the Lineaweaver-Robb wedding and Betty Elliott's too.

I just slid on to a couch when I reached home from all the goings on, a thoroughly exhausted woman. I can tell you. And I feel today as if I would not have energy enough even to think of going to any other affairs this week. But after a couple of nights of sleep I'll be up and going just as hard as ever, you can bet.

I FELT so sorry for the Victor Mathers yesterday when I heard of little Charlie's accident. It's the second bad fall that child has had in a year, but this one is by far the worse. Mr. and Mrs. Mather were visiting in Long Island and Charlie went up to his grandfather's farm in West Chester and joined in a hunt ride on Saturday morning. He was thrown while riding with Brandywine Hunt Club members and his horse stumbled in a ditch and threw him over the fence.

He was perfectly unconscious and was rushed at once to the Chester County Hospital, he only regained consciousness for a short time. And his condition is at present very, very serious.

His mother, you know, was Miss Katherine Earle, the eldest of the Earle girls and considered to be one of the most beautiful of our Philadelphia women. He has a sister and brother, Katherine and Victor Mather, Jr.

IT'S interesting to note that a great many people are going abroad now for the winter and quite a good many of them debutantes of next year. Among them Mary Geary, for instance, and Helen Hope Montgomery. Then Emma Dorr is going to sail next week for France. Emma's brother, Ashton Dorr, is in Paris and has been there for several years. He is in business there, connected with the Baldwin Locomotive Works of this city. Emma will spend the winter with him, and I can't help being glad for both, as they are a devoted brother and sister and will have such good times together. Emma has many other friends on the other side, so she won't get bored while Ashton is at business.

I saw Emma the other day, looking very smart in a dark blue jersey blouse embroidered in front in dark blue silk, and a tricotine skirt of dark blue with tiny white checks in the pattern. Her hat was of black velvet and exceedingly becoming. Emma spent the summer in Jamestown with her aunts, the Misses Ashton, who live on Twenty-third street near Spruce.

SPEAKING of Emma makes me think of her close friend, Hope McMichael, or I should say Madame Ezio Garibaldi. I had not heard of her for some time till just the other day. She is living in Mexico City, where Captain Garibaldi is connected with the Italian Legation. They have a beautiful villa there and Hope has had most of her furniture expressed down there. You remember, she had some lovely things in her apartment at Fifteenth and Pine streets. Then she has added a good many other things in the way of furnishings appropriate to Mexico's climate, and she has certainly achieved an artistic home. She is very well, I hear, and most gloriously happy. She was married last April, you remember, in Washington. A number of us went down to the wedding, which was quite foreign. Hope you know, carrying out the Italian ideas in using bright red in her little attendant's frock.

DICKIE, grandpa and baby brother went out in the barn to find fresh eggs the other day, and while Dickie was hunting around, baby brother discovered the nest egg of china and came running with it in his hand to Dickie. "Here'th one," he said. "No," replied Dickie, "that's a china's egg, you must let it say in the nest till it gets ripe and then you can gather it."

NANCY WYNNE.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

An engagement of interest to society in this and other cities has been announced by Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Travis, of Garden City, L. I., of their daughter, Miss Adelaide Travis, to Mr. George S. Emory, son of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Emory, also of Garden City. Miss Travis served overseas during the war with the Red Cross at Chantilly, France, where she was engaged in canteen work. Mr. Emory was graduated from Yale in 1918. He was a lieutenant in the aviation service with which he served overseas. Miss Travis' father was national golf champion three times.

MARY GARDEN SHY OF CUPID

Prima Donna Cites Others' Woes and Stays Single

Chicago, Oct. 11.—Mary Garden knew what she was talking about when she said that an artistic career and a husband do not mix well. In an interview Mary Garden once said:

"When I have finished my career then I will marry. But hearken to the applause of an admiring audience and to the commands of a husband? My ears would be confused. One thing at a time for me."

Galli-Curci, Geraldine Farrar, Ganna Walska and others made the same statement at one time or another, but one by one they weakened. They sang, they loved, they listened to the pleas of Dan Cupid and they ended up in the divorce courts, or near them.

Comfortable and Good Looking

When you walk in stocking feet, every muscle of the foot flexes. Cords, that run from your toes up the legs, contract and relax. The small bones of the foot, set together to form an arch, move in obedience to the pull of tendons. The blood flows through every tissue, nourishing and strengthening the foot, which, of course, is perfectly comfortable. The same comfort can be enjoyed by wearing shoes which harmonize with the foot.

Ordinary rigid-soled shoes are uncomfortable because they check a large part of this natural movement and circulation. But the Cantilever Shoe is flexible. There is no stiff shank-piece hidden in the sole. Instead the shank bends WITH the foot. There is no binding, no restraint. The foot is free to move to exercise and grow strong as you walk. Weak arches are often the result of shoes which restrict the action of the muscles. The Cantilever keeps the muscles supporting the small bones of the arch alert and healthy, and so prevents and corrects flat foot and other foot troubles.

The Cantilever last is graceful and good-looking, patterned from the outline of the foot. The heel is sturdily low and broad, is set to encourage good posture. The tie is complete harmony between foot and shoe. And Cantilevers are good-looking shoes. Try them this week. Widths from AAAA to E.
