Letters to the Editor

Philadelphia's Greatest Opportunity

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—Now that the Mayor has set a worthy example and acted real practical interest in the proposed Sesqui-Centennial Exposition, it is up to the rest of us to do our "bit" and helpto make this project the biggest kind of success, which will not only dispel the illusion that we are sleepy and slothful, but prove splendid tribute to the memory of those brave men who gave us lasting liberty and so be a power for good such as the world as never known.

It should not be simply a national affair. Every nation should be invited to make this Peace Celebration and Liberty Exposition a huge success. Philadelphia is the logical place to start a movement which will bring about the dream of the ages—universal brotherhood.

But before the present war-mouthful name has taken root, why not simplify it, take a word from the old cracked bell for a name, call it the "Liberty Fair" and make the message that rims the bell a living reality.

Perhaps Uncle Sam may be induced to use as a cancellation stamp on our mail a small outline of the bell not yoke, with the words

Liberty Fair
Philadelphia
1926

This would start the hellishing and prove the greatest possible publicity agency.

Then let the rest of us "attack all "hard times" and "strike" thoughts and focus our attention upon Philadelphia's greatest opportunity, pledging ourselves to do what we can to make the Liberty fair the biggest and best of its kind and make all of us proud to be known as Philadelphians.

Not only will the Liberty fair be a source of lasting benefit to the entire human race, but it will leave us with many glorious monuments of this great event—a beautiful boulevard lined with splendid municipal buildings, an imposing People Palace, with free recreation and entertainment all the time for all of the peoplesthe finest Art Gallery in America, and a Delaware River Esplanade extending from Fairmount Park to League Island Park.

Now as the doughboy usedto say: "Let's go." W. NEUNNINGS.

Phoned His Love Song to Her

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—May I seek a large, uncomfortable niche in the Palace of Telepoem Poets for the undoubted queen of a numerous tribe? Recently I had occasion to call up a number. Busy. Five minutes later, still busy. Ten minutes, still busy. Another call—and it is a residence party line—still busy.

So I hopped into a taxi, ode two miles and entered the house, to find the blithe, young telephone user seated before the instrument with a far-away lok on her face. "Keep quiet!" she admoished sharply. "Some one is playing music for me."

For forty-five minutes thi young woman had been holding up a telepone wire while an addle-pated specimen of he genus homo was tinkling a ukulele over he wire to her.

Patrolman Who Died In France

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—Will you do me thecourtesy of correcting an error of statement which occurred, no doubt quite unintentionally, in the editions of your paperpublished on October 18.

In the publication of thefuneral of a policeman who died in battlein France it was stated that this patrolman was the only member of the Philadelphia police force to die overseas.

Ah! How true, how poignant, are our memories that such is not a fact. My dear friend, Ellwood G. Hall, 5959 Armainge street, laid down his life in France on November 4, 1918, in the fastnesses of the Argonne forest, in thathell of gunfire. He was a patrolman of theTenth District police station, at Tenth and Master streets, and full of the spirit which prompts good deeds, enlisting early in 1917 my departed friend was among the flag-bearing pioneers into France, and there where he fell will his body remain forever.

Where Fair Should Be Held

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—To the best of my knowledge, up to the present time no definite place has been set for the holding of the Sesqui-Centennial in this city in 1926. I think the most desirable spot should be at the southern end of the city, between the built-up section and the League Island Navy Yard. There would be ample of room here, and there are several small lakes in this vicinity that would add much picturesqueness to the grounds. The river front should be one end of the grounds, and it would thus afford the opportunity for aquatic sports and the visit of foreign navies, and it would give the opportunity to foreign exhibitors to unload their displays at the exhibition grounds. It would be quite possible to run several railroad switches into this section that could carry excursionists and other visitors to the grounds with much convenience. There is no section of the city, I believe, that would be more desirable than this tract, with its wide boulevard to be reached from every section of the city and its natural advantages.

It might be felt that this would be too much in one section of the city, but this could be likewise true of any other section, for the city is so built that no place could be found that would be a central location as regard from every section is about an equal length of time and convenience.

Europe's Need of Credit

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—There is an almost universal hope in Europe that commercial credit extension will continue until Europe is nearer being on her feet. The countries there owe us some $2,000,000,000 on floating account now, besides, say, $10,000,000,000 funded. They may need, or would like, to roll up another $3,000,000,000 of credits or floating debt before they can begin to whittle down the gross debt.

And that whittling will involve two things, as appreciated by every European merchant and banker with whom I talked. One is the need to sell us more manufactured goods with their hoarded gold stocks so low and their industrial or colonial gold resources now being tapped. And here comes in their wonderment as to our Fordney bill and our general tariff policy.

The European manufacturers expect to invade with their goods all the neutral markets, South American and Oriental, that fell into our laps during the war. How are they pay us interest and principal? If need be, coffee, rubber, hides and tea and rice will have to come to us in increased value from the countries that raise these things, with Europe, not the United States, supplying their wants in manufacture.

A Wastd Opportunity

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—No more significant words have been uttered since the process of war reconstruction began than those contained in the report of the committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce just returned from personal contact with European affairs. These words cut across the cloud of provincialism which darkens this land and let in some of the blessed sunlight of truth.

The Product of Greed

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—The railway workers' strike has been averted. This threatened strike has been sputtering like a bomb with a disjointed fuse for quite quite a time, and now is just as good a fuse for the explosion as any other.

The effect, if it goes into effect, will have a more or less clarifying effect on business and business men all over the country. It will, more than anything else, force both sides to lay the cards on the table and open their hands. There has been too much of the Gompers brand of autocracy on the one side and too little of the spirit of fair play on the other side.

To sum it up, there has been entirely too much greed and malice on both sides to benefit either or the country at large. The railroad worker has been [illegible] his head off about the high cost of living but has not been willing to [illegible] the consumption to a [illegible] The railroads, on the other [illegible] have crossed the continent by automobile and which is the best and most direct road.

Poems and Songs Desired

Locates Old Song

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—In reply to a request of Gertrude T. Blake for the title of an old song, may I tell her it is "Tit for Tat"? I do not know if the song is still published. As a tiny tot I learned it thirty years ago from a volume of songs belonging to my mother.

"Donberry Beck"

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—I will appreciate it if you will print in your People's Forum the words of the song containing the following as the refrain:

"Oh, Mr. Donberry Beck, how could you be so mean
I told you you'd be sorry for inventing that machine.
For long-tailed cats and Thomas-cats will never more be seen,
For they've all gone up in sausage meat in Dunberry Beck's machine."

Wants to Know Author

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—I should like to know who wrote the following lines and in what poem they can be found:

"I build my nest on the mountain crest,
Where the wild winds rock eaglets to rest,
Where the lightnings dash and the thunders crash
And the roaring torrents foam and dash,
For my spirit free henceforth shall be
A type for the 'Sons of Liberty.'"

From Campbell's "Exile"

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—In the EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER People's Forum of the 1st inst. "A. H. B." asks for the poem containing these lines:

"Tears, like the raindrops, may fall without measure,
But rapture and beauty they cannot recall."

They are the closing lines of the fourth verse of the "Exile of Erin," written by Thomas Campbell. Will you please give space to this little extract from "The Life of Campbell"? It may be interesting to "A. H. B."

As soon as his poems had but money in his pocket, an early predilection for the German language and a thirst for seeing some of the continental universities induced him to visit Germany. He set sail for Hamburg, where, struck with the sight of so many Irish exiles in that city, he strung his harp anew and sang that touching song "The Exile of Erin," which will endear his name to the heart of every honest Irishman.

"Will You Ever Think of Me?"

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—A few weeks ago a lady asked for a little poem, and so far no one has sent it in. I think it is this:

Will you ever think of me when the lamp of life burns blue,
And wonder if I'm living yet, to dream and think of you?
Will you wear long for some date when the shadows cleare the glen,
Recalling the sweet happiness we knew so long ago?

Comes never a thought to vague you in the shape of a wee regret
That you've made some one love you who will never, no, never, forget
Will the ghosts of the past forever cling to me in the future years
And sadden the eyes that love you and chasten my soul with tears?

So if you ever know sunshine and the lamp of life burns blue,
Remember the world of tenderness that lies in my heart for you.
I may have to pay a price for all that I have dared,
But I would not, it goes to show you how I knew I loved.

"October's Party"

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—I would appreciate it if you would print for me in the People's Forum the poem entitled "October's Party."

JANE T. CLEMMENS.

West Chester, Pa., October 18, 1921.

OCTOBER'S PARTY
By George Cooper

October gave a party;
The leaves by hundreds came—
The Chestnuts, Oaks, and Olmen
And leaves of every name.
The Sunshine spread a carpet
And everything was gay
Miss Weather led the dancing
Professor Wind the band.

The Chestnuts came in yellow
The Oaks in crimson dressed
The lovely Maples Maple
In scarlet looked their best
All balanced to their partners
And gaily fluttered in
The night was like a rainbow
Newfallen from the skies.

Then in the rustic hollow
At hide and seek they played
The party closed at sundown
And everybody stayed.
Professor Wind played louder
Then down along the ground
And thus the party ended
In jolly "hands around."

"Love's Chidings"

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—Please print for me in your People's Forum the words of the old chief song entitled "Love's Chidings."

MARY [illegible]

Philadelphia, October 18, 1921.

"LOVE'S CHIDINGS"

Why thus coldly [illegible]
Why thus do you [illegible]
Why thus deny me
Day after day?

CHORUS

Have I not been [illegible]
To see me kneeling
My love revealing
Day after day?

Thee have I loved [illegible]
Yes, loyally, sincerely
But thou hast nearly
Made hope grow [illegible]

All then must we [illegible]
Parted forever!
And will thou never
Think, love, of me?

Questions Answered

Percentage on Liberty Bonds

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—How is it figured that a 4¾ per cent Victory bond bought at $97.26 yields 6 per cent? H. W. L.

Philadelphia, October 19, 1921.

A $100 Victory bond bought at $97.26 yields $5.74 profit on the transaction. Since the bond is not payable for about two years, this would amount to a profit of $1.57 each year. Added to the $4.75 interest, it amounts to $6.12, or 6.12 per cent per annum.

Origin of Name "London"

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—What is the origin of the word "London" as applied to the English metropolis? G. W. L.

Philadelphia, October 19, 1921.

The derivation of the word "London" is obscure. Some authorities believe it to be a combination of the old British words "lin," meaning "lake," and "don," meaning "town," possibly because until recently the southern side of the River Thames was virtually swamp.

First College Newspaper

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—Please let me have the name of the first college paper printed, also the name of the editor and in what year it was printed. H. L. C.

Daniel Webster edited the first college paper. It was called the Dartmouth Gazette, and was published in 1800.

A Question of Propriety

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—Is it ever proper for a young lady to invite a young man to stay all night at her home when it is inconvenient for him to get back to the city by train or other conveyance? Please answer in the People's Forum. J. W. L.

Philadelphia, October 11, 1921.

It depends on the intimacy of the parties concerned. If the young man is a friend of the family, is a frequent visitor at the house and, through permission of the parents, it may not be improper to ask him to remain, but it is not the usual thing, even where the couple are engaged, for the courtesy to be extended to a young man visitor, and it should come from the parents unless under the most extraordinary circumstances.

A Nonsense Version

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—I will appreciate it very much if you will print for me in your interesting People's Forum the nonsense version of "This House that Jack Built." It is known as the Boston version. H. W. L.

Philadelphia, October 14, 1921.

This is the chanticleer whose matutinal manipulations of his vocal powers aroused from his somnolent condition the ascendant personage whose capillary cranial growth and hirsute facial adornment were respectively abridged and removed; that launched into the matrimonial abyss the anthropomorphic tatterdemalion that operated the lachadaisical specimen of femininity that extracted the lacteal fluid from the bovine with the corrugated cranial protuberances; that elevated the sanguinary canine that harassed and made weary the prolinic that violently appropriated the rodent animal that mastricated the germinated saccharine principles of a plant that reposed in the domicile that was fabricated by Johannes.

Who Wrote It?

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—Can any of your readers give me the name of the author of the following:

"The style of Canning is like the convex mirror, which scatters every ray of light which falls upon it and shines and sparkles in whatever position it is viewed. That of Brougham is like the concave speculum, scattering no indiscriminate radiance, but having its light concentrated into one immense and tremendous focus."

TRAINED NURSE

A profession in which the supply is not equal to the demand

An Independent Career

Many of the professions open to women and young women are overcrowded, with the result of decreasing wages. Trained nurses are always in demand and the shortage is tending to increase their earning ability. In this profession you can be entirely independent and not confined to time or place. Your standing in the community, because of your service to humanity, gives you high rank equal with that of the physician or other honored professions. Many other kinds of employment are open to assistance of the nurse. As a trained nurse you create a position.

A Permanent Position

Should you prefer to accept a permanent location instead of working independently many such positions are available and new ones are constantly being created. Nurses are wanted in the public schools, private boarding schools, large manufacturing and other business organizations, on steamships and in social service work; but above all, there is a demand for Community Nurses in increasing numbers throughout the country. In such work you have opportunity for great service in a permanent position under most congenial conditions.

Greater Public Interest Is Desired

The only provision that has been made to protect the public in the way of trained nurses to supplement the work of the physician is in the Hospital Training School. Will YOU interest some deserving friend in this noble profession?
