Nancy Wynne Tells of the Donner Tea to Be Held This Afternoon—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Benedict to Give Dance at Ritz-Carlton

THERE will be two large debutante affairs today. Dorothy Rodgers will be introduced at a large tea which her parents, the William H. Donners, will give at their home, 345 South Eighteenth street. Dorothy is the elder of Mrs. Donner's two daughters by her first marriage. Her sister Katherine is at boarding school this winter and will come out in a year or two. They are attractive girls.

About twenty-five debutantes and some of last year's buds will receive at the tea, while Mrs. Donner, of course, has asked several ladies to pour tea and otherwise assist in receiving.

THE second debutante event is the dance which the Robert Benedicts will give at the Ritz-Carlton in honor of their daughter Alice, whose tea was given last month out at their place in Devon. The dance will be preceded by many dinners. Mrs. Alfred Paul Morris will entertain for her two daughters, Priscilla, who is a debutante of this year, and Ottilie, who came out last season.

The Stacy B. Lloyds will give a dinner for Ellen, and the Horace Nixons will entertain for Mary. Virginia de Morat Smith will be the honor guest at a dinner given by Brigadier General Littleton W. Tazewell Waller. Mary Miller will be given a dinner by the Samuel Dexter Warriners, and Mr. and Mrs. William Harmon George will entertain for their daughter, Martyn George.

DID you know that Princess Cantacuzene is coming up here next week from Washington, where she is spending the winter, to stay for two days with Mrs. George Lorimer and to attend the two-day bazaar which her committee of the Emergency Aid will hold at the Aid rooms on November 30 and December 1? It started out to be a Russian Rag Fair, and there have been so many beautiful ideas put into being, besides the rummage part of it, that it's going to be an honest-to-goodness fair and sale as well.

The Princess will be at the table where Russian cross-stitch embroidered dresses and bags will be sold. Mrs. J. Bertram Lippincott and Mrs. Webster Fox will be in charge of the table with her. Mrs. Joe Leidy, Mrs. Stanley Flagg, Jr., and Countess Santa Eulalia will have old jewelry and fans, and those fascinating Russian fairy-story boxes done in Moscow enamel and autographed by the Princess will be sold by Mrs. Seymour Davis.

Mrs. Barclay Warburton has the decorations of the room in her care. They are going to use the marble room of the Emergency Aid and will have a sort of Russian cabaret effect. That is, there will be singing and dancing by various persons in Russian costume. Jane Maule MacIver will sing folk songs in costume and Uytendale Baird Caner will wear a Russian costume and probably do some stunts. She's very clever, you know. Mrs. Braden Kyle is to be treasurer and Mrs. Walter Waring Hopkinson will sell Russian cosmetics. Mrs. William H. Donner will have charge of the aides. Mrs. Wilbur Paddock Klapp, Miss Eloise Dickey, Mrs. Louis Bregy, Mrs. Richard Edwards, Mrs. Charles Maule, Mrs. Harrold Gillingham, Mrs. Robert Girvin, Jr., Mrs. Ernest La Place, Mrs. L. Jurist and Mrs. Rolbein are others who will assist and have charge of tables.

Mrs. George Lorimer is chairman of the Princess Cantacuzene Committee, you know. It's a sub-committee of the Russian Committee of the Emergency Aid, of which Mrs. George Wharton Pepper is head. Incidentally, in Russian, the name of the fair is "Rojdestvenskaya Yarmarka" which, being translated, means Russian Christmas Fair.

AREN'T the new hats with long feathers hanging down at the side of the front brim unusual? It's a brand-new style, not only of this year but of all times it seems. I have never seen the like in any of the old prints or paintings. But, of course, I have not seen every old print or painting in existence, so my statement may be false. However, the fact remains that instead of drooping an ostrich feather back off the hat or down off the side away from the face, now it hangs just about two or three inches to the side from the front brim; and why you don't step on it instead of playing "peep po" around either side of it, I don't know.

I saw one the other day, a large black velvet hat placed high on one side of the head and drooping low on the other, and over the front brim about three inches to the right of the nose came a huge ostrich feather about four inches wide and at least eighteen inches long. Another one was on a small hat and the feather came down the side and around under the chin and nestled up against the other cheek of the wearer. These hats were not on mannikins, they are actually being worn and they are strange, oh, very strange, I'll say.

CHARLIE and Tommie were standing near father as he demolished a plate of beautiful white grapes after going home from business. From time to time they assisted in the demolishing. Dad plucked a beautiful white one, seeded it and gave it to Charles, and before he could turn to get one for Tommie, Charlie asked: "Give me anyver Dad?" "I just gave you one, boy." "Yep, but it was killed." "Killed?" "Yep," said Charlie. "I dropped it and Brud stepped on it."
