TO RE-ELECT READ JERSEY TREASURER

Camden Man Has No Opposition by Legislature Next Week

MANY HEARINGS SCHEDULED

Trenton, Jan. 28.—The chief event scheduled in the Legislature for the coming week is the election of a State Treasurer at a joint session Tuesday. There is no one to oppose Colonel William T. Read, of Camden, the present Republican incumbent, and as the Legislature is overwhelmingly Republican on joint ballot, Colonel Read is certain to be re-elected. The term of office is three years and the salary $6000 a year.

Colonel Read was born in Camden, November 22, 1878. He is vice president of the First National Bank of Camden, a director of the West Jersey Trust Company, of Camden, a member of the New Jersey Society of Pennsylvania and district examiner of the Camden Board of Education.

Colonel Read acquired his title when in 1917 he was appointed assistant inspector general of rifle practice on the staff of General Spencer as lieutenant colonel and the following year was made colonel. He is an expert rifleman. In 1911 he was elected to the Senate from Camden County and again in 1914, and served as minority leader during Governor Fielder's administration and later as majority leader in Governor Edge's administration.

In 1916 he was made State Treasurer again in 1919 was given a second term in that office.

The coming week will be the fourth of the present legislative term, but, apart from organizing, receiving many bills and passing a few of minor importance in the House, the lawmakers have done nothing. It is expected, however, that they will now get down to business. Several hearings are scheduled for Monday and Tuesday, and this usually presages the beginning of the real business.

Among the hearings scheduled by the House committees are the following: By the Evans bill regulating the employment of females in industries and eliminating night hours of work, to be held by the Judiciary Committee on Monday at 2:30 P. M.; on Pierson's bill for a $40,000,000 referendum bond issue for the completion of the State highways, by the Judiciary Committee on Monday at 3:30 P. M.; on Evans' bill amending the Boxing law by limiting admissions to $15 and providing that all boxing officials shall be residents of the State for at least three years, by the Judiciary Committee on Tuesday, at 2:30 P. M.; on Sexsmith's bill fixing the standard of condensed milk in the State to conform with that of the United States Department of Agriculture, by the Judiciary Committee on Tuesday, at 3:30 P. M.

Women Scramble for Nomination

ton was a notable political social event. Before the Senator arrived at Mrs. Warburton's office, the latter was asked if tea was to be poured. Mrs. Warburton smiled graciously and enigmatically. When the Senator appeared he was puffing a big black cigar. He told the chauffeur of the taxicab to wait as he would only be inside a few minutes. But he remained for two hours.

"Come in," said Mrs. Still, Mrs. Warburton's secretary.

"Sure," replied the Senator as puffs of smoke escaped from his lips.

The two were presently joined by Mrs. Robins and W. Harry Baker, secretary of the State Committee. It was probably the first political conference of the kind in the city. As a consequence, it was agreed that women would be sent to the Legislature.

Senator Vare said, when the talk was over:

"The women want more recognition. This is a State and city affair. Speaking for myself, I fully agree with them, feeling that we take their votes and they should be given fair recognition in the City and State. I feel myself to personally—and we are going to nominate and elect women to the Legislature at Harrisburg at the May primary.

"There will be every recognition given to the women voters, for, up to the time it has not been needed only to ask and get what their requests will be. I also promised the ladies we would add women members to the executive committee of the wards of the city, so we will reach nearly 1000 women, two men and one woman from each division and two executive committees.

"All over the State women are up in arms and demanding recognition. That is the impression gained by Mrs. Harrison on her return to the city last night after a tour that brought her to Harrisburg, Lancaster, Allentown, Wilkes-Barre, Scranton and other eastern points. Wherever Mrs. Harrison spoke she received a cordial welcome and enthusiastic endorsement of her addresses. Pittsburgh and Erie.

"Wherever I went I found the women organizing that they are not receiving a square deal," said Mrs. Harrison. "They want recognition and they are determined to get it. I was impressed, of course, with the attitude of the women in Philadelphia, but on my trip I found that in Scranton and other centres the interest is just as pronounced."

Mrs. Harrison is to confer today with Senator Vare. She said they will take up various problems dealing with the recognition of women in Philadelphia. At the same time it is likely she will impress upon the Senator the fact that the women are not to be ignored in the coming campaign, and she will outline conditions as the State Committee has learned for recognition and consideration.

FIGHTING THROUGH

Although the snow piled up through the night and the weatherman warns it will continue for hours, Philadelphia streets are being kept open and traffic is "normal." Above, the city snow plows are cleaning Market street. Below, a motorman is brushing snow from the front glass to see his way "through"

Red, Red Rose Promises Spring as Snow Piles Up

As if in open defiance of Mr. Fahrenheit's well-known instrument, a red rose blooms near this city, exposed to all the rigors of icy winds and drifting snows.

This phenomenon, so contrary to all the rules of nature and the seed catalogues, is to be seen in the garden of Mrs. Miles, of Lester, a borough on the Chester pike. There an American Beauty rose glows upon a bush in a secluded corner, wasting its fragrance on the Arctic air and causing visitors to doubt the evidence of their senses.

Mrs. Miles, who is an authority on birds, flowers and things like that, states this is a reasonably sure indication of an early spring.

Heavy Snowstorm Is Sweeping City

ported drifting badly along the railroad lines to South Jersey resorts, portending train tie-ups this afternoon and tonight.

A double watch is being kept in coast guard stations all along the New Jersey Coast for fishermen who may have ventured out before the storm began.

The storm in Pennsylvania has shown some freakish tendencies. Harrisburg reported only a quarter of an inch and Scranton no snow at all at 8 o'clock this morning. West Chester at that time had four inches, twice as much as Philadelphia.

The snowstorm in the capital recalls the weather conditions surrounding the inauguration of President Taft, on March 4, 1909, when a big snowfall put out of commission practically all the telegraph wires, while the outside world was awaiting details of the important presidential ceremony.

Telegraph companies and news associations made heroic efforts to send out the inauguration details, and finally, by a circuitous route which took news for northern points around by way of New Orleans, obtained a partial solution of the difficulty.

MUSIC WITH MEALS IS ROAD TO INDIGESTION, SAYS EXPERT

Dr. Burr, Noted Specialist, Would Abolish Custom as "Invention of the Devil"—Smiles at London Physician's Suggestion

"Good music is always enjoyable, but with meals it becomes boresome, generally, and it doesn't aid digestion."

That is the opinion of Dr. Charles W. Burr, noted specialist of this city, who is amused at a suggestion of Sir James Dundas-Grant, a London physician, for a "musical menu" for dinners.

And as for the practice of dancing between courses, Dr. Burr remarks that "jumping around during the meal does me little."

"Why," he said, "all civilized animals, such as cats, dogs and monkeys, lie down and sleep after eating a meal. Why should human beings leap and jump about to the tunes of present-day jazz?"

So Dr. Burr would have no truck with the meals as something decidedly unwanted.

"I believe that banquets should be purely a invention of the devil himself," Dr. Burr said. "In my official capacity I attend such number of banquets, and it seems impossible to believe that human beings can actually emit such sounds through mere instruments.

"Of course, that is not the opinion of all who attend banquets. Many persons cannot carry on a conversation for an hour or two at a stretch. Music gives them something to listen to, and they can assume a rapt expression and say nothing. Sometimes I suspect that the worse the music the greater it is liked.

"There are times when one is placed at a table with some one who is an intelligent and interesting person. And yet the music, which is frequently under one's very nose, makes it virtually impossible to carry on a conversation.

"To my mind, the sound which helps digestion most is the voice of a witty speaker. Laughter will help anything from gallbladder to indigestion.

"As a matter of fact, he concluded, while music at meals gets me so all-fired mad that I'm quite sure it may injure, by digestion is hampered."

PAPAL CONCLAVE MAY BE DELAYED

Will Be Postponed 24 Hours So All Cardinals Can Arrive, Paris Hears

By the Associated Press

Paris, Jan. 28.—A Rome dispatch to the Havas Agency says it is expected the conclave to elect a successor to Pope Benedict will be postponed for four hours to give time for the cardinals to arrive. The conclave originally [illegible] February 2.

Rome, Jan. 28.—By A. P.—Several Roman members of the Chamber of Deputies are considering interpellations to Premier Bonomi upon the advisability of the Italian Government offering an invitation to the Papal Conclave. The attitude of the Sacred College toward a representation is expected to be defined on the choice of a successor to the late Pope Benedict.

The Roman deputies became interested in the question when they learned that President De Nicola of the chamber, in accord with the Government's policy, intends to propose a [illegible] for the pontiff when parliament reconvenes on February 2.

Nationalist newspapers yesterday published the statement that Signor de Nicola and President Tittoni, of the Senate, are to announce officially upon the occasion of their respective houses the death of Benedict and propose a vote of sympathy to the relatives of the deceased Pontiff and to foreign potentates. Last night several demands for interpellations were placed upon Signor de Nicola's desk, one of which protested against what it termed the "political recognition of the Vatican by the chief of Signor Mussolini, Minister of Agriculture, at the Holy See."

Conferences were held throughout the afternoon at which Premier Bonomi and Signor de Nicola and Tittoni endeavored to induce the deputies to postpone or withdraw their interpellations so as to make eulogy of the pontiff unanimous.

The interpellators are understood to be vacillating, and it is stated they may not openly oppose the demonstration, but content themselves with abstaining from voting upon or participating in it.

The members of the diplomatic corps accredited to the Vatican called at the Holy See today and officially presented the condolences of their respective governments upon the death of Pope Benedict.

IDENTIFY TWO MEN AS BANK BANDITS

One Prisoner Pointed Out as Robber Who Murdered Crafton Cashier

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Jan. 28.—Walter Joyce and Owen Gearing, Pittsburgh men arrested yesterday [illegible] the First National Bank of [illegible] Pa., last Friday, when Harold Morrow, cashier, had been killed, were identified by bank employes [illegible] the party of bandits who committed the crimes.

Gearing was pointed out by Frank King, janitor of the bank, as the man who shot Morrow.

Seven persons in custody yesterday after the bank robbers had escaped from a party of city detectives, who had intercepted them in the North Side as they were returning from the scene of the robbery, were taken to central police station with a number of other prisoners.

Employes of the bank who witnessed the robbery looked them over and Joyce was picked out by five of them as one of the robbers.

King, however, was the only man to identify Gearing. He told the police that one of the bandits climbed over the top of the partition separating the cashier's cage from the main banking room, and that Gearing was the man.

The others agreed that while they could not identify Gearing as the robber, they did agree that the man who went over the partition was the one who fired at Morrow.

Uncommon Sense: The Man Behind You

By JOHN BLAKE

IT IS foolish to hold out your hands in order to block the path of the man behind you. If he is worth his salt he is going to get where you are today. He wants your job, or one just as good, and, contrive as you will, you will not keep him out of it provided he has the right stuff in him. If he hasn't some man with the right stuff will soon step into his place, and then you will be confronted with the same old problem.

There is a man behind every person who starts on the upward road, and many of these men behind are going to be men ahead before long.

If you try to block their road they will slip into your place sooner or later, and there will be no place for you to go but back toward the rear.

Denying a man an opportunity to learn the duties of your job will not keep him out of that opportunity forever.

The old time carpenter or plumber who used to work in a corner so that apprentices could not "steal his trade" never damped the ardor of any intelligent apprentices.

They not only stole the trade, but they very frequently took the paying practice of it away from the men who had sought to hide it from them.

THERE is just one way to deal with the man behind that is safe for you and fair to him.

That is to keep moving up, so that he may step into your place when you leave it. If you are as talented as you probably believe you are you will some day come to a place where he cannot gain. Then you need not worry about him any more.

But as long as he is moving up you will have to move up, too, or you will begin to move down. There is room on one level for one man only. You must figure that the man behind is just as ambitious as you are. If he also is just as intelligent and just as industrious, you may try as hard as you can to keep him from slipping into your position, but all without avail.

Every man desires to go forward. It is fortunate for the really ambitious that so few of them have the energy to keep at it. But it will always happen in the long procession of which you are a part, that sooner or later some man will be behind you who is ready to set a faster pace than you are setting.

THERE is only one thing to do in a case like that, and that is to quicken your own pace, and let him drop into the places you have vacated. By and by as you get toward the top of the hill, you will know whether he is to pass you or not. If he can he will, and you will have to be content.

But courage and industry and tenacity are rare qualities.

Cultivate them and the chances are strong that you will some day reach a place where your competitors cannot follow.

GIRLS IN TROUSERS STIR SWARTHMORE

"Shriveled Souls" Try to Stop Leg Freeing Innovation by Aid of Constable

BUT THEY KEPT 'EM ON

"Friends, Romans, countrymen and mere males. The girls have stolen our collars; they have laid violent hands upon our neckties; they have appropriated our soft shirts; some of them are even wearing our overcoats. But when they extend their activities to our—well, shall they, or shall they not, be permitted to wear pants?"

This is the burning question which today holds the borough of Swarthmore in the toils of fierce debate. There is a large and powerful faction, backed by all the majesty of the law, which denies this right to the weaker vessels. There is another equally large and cogent party, composed for the most part of the young men of the community, who are unanimously in favor of it.

The whole matter was brought to a crisis by the recent appearance of the Misses Helen Morton and Ruth Sharpless on the skating pond, attired in the garments in question. They attracted much attention; in fact, they were the cynosure of all eyes.

This step in the emancipation of the sex was greeted by expressions of unmitigated delight by all those present at the time, and it was felt that the dawn of a new day in ladies' wear had shed its bright effulgence upon Swarthmore.

Unbelievable as it may seem, however, there were those in town with sufficiently "warped and shriveled souls" to complain about this matter to the police force, and he at once set out to banish the young ladies thus adorned from all public places.

At his approach, Ruth and Helen, being noted in athletic circles at Swarthmore High School, and therefore fleet of foot, executed a strategic retreat. In spite of his best efforts Constable Hayward was unable to get sufficiently close to issue a dignified warning, and so the matter settled down to a campaign of strategy, the minion of the law lying in wait for the fair culprits, and the latter continuing to evade him at every turn.

The sinister aspect of the situation, in the eyes of the conservative faction, is the lamentable effect which this innovation is likely to have upon the feminine students of Swarthmore College and the Mary Lyons School, both of which are close at hand.

Dark fears are entertained for the moral integrity of the female population, should this practice of wearing trousers continue. No efforts should be spared, they say, to safeguard the youth of the land, and more stringent measures are promised for the future.

Meanwhile Helen and Ruth continue to skate as before at such times as the villain does not pursue them, and their popularity, as a result of their insurrection, has increased to an unprecedented degree.

"I don't care what these old fogies say around here," said Ruth to one of her many admirers.

"I suppose they thought they'd scare us into skirts," remarked Helen with a defiant shake of her bobbed curls.

And meanwhile the pure light of personal freedom flames afar from Swarthmore's rocky heights.

PHILADELPHIAN SHOT IN N.Y.

Bandits Hold Up Truck Bound to This City—Driver May Die

John H. Overton, a chauffeur, 4144 Market street, is in St. Vincent's Hospital in New York, and is expected to die as the result of being shot last night by bandits, who sought to get control of an automobile loaded with $30,000 worth of silk, which Overton and August Koett, of Brooklyn, were driving to Philadelphia from New York. Koett also was shot, but is expected to recover.

Overton is a chauffeur for the Triangle Transportation Company, Philadelphia. He drives a truck every night to Philadelphia from New York.

As he started for the Desbrosses street ferry a taxicab cut across in front of the truck, so that he had to stop to avoid a collision. Two men jumped from the cab and pointed revolvers at the men on the truck.

Overton and Koett reached for their revolvers. The bandits saw the move and began shooting. The first shot struck Koett in the right arm, knocking him from the truck. The next two bullets hit Overton in the abdomen, and he, too, plunged to the sidewalk. The bandits escaped.
