JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Tells of the Midwinter Ball Held Last Night in the Foyer—Many Beautiful Gowns Worn at Important Affair

IT MAY seem a strange statement, but do you know I can scarcely remember a ball (with the exception of the late Benedicks) at which all those who were originally invited to act as patronesses were able to do so. At the first Assembly this season, you remember, Mrs. Harrison Fisher was unable to receive on account of illness, and Mrs. William Ellis was also prevented from receiving because of the death of her mother-in-law, Mrs. Rudolph Ellis.

And now last night Mrs. Van Rensselaer was not able to receive because she was ill, and Mrs. Willie Mercer was not there because she is in mourning. Only five received, therefore, Mrs. Sidney Keith replacing Mrs. Van Rensselaer. The other four were Mrs. John Kearsley Mitchell, Mrs. Arthur Emlen Newbold, Jr., Mrs. Charles Edward Ingersoll and Mrs. H. H. Rush Toland.

The foyer was perfectly beautiful, soft green ferns and fairy-like flowers enhancing the beauty of the mirrored windows and doors and the amber lights.

AS THE season nears its end I notice more and more the tendency to lengthen the gowns. The actual skirt itself may be as short as in the earlier part of the winter, but the panels and trains and draperies are longer a good deal, and the effect is a decidedly longer frock. In many cases it is far smarter. While the short frock for the very young girl was perhaps pretty, it only was pretty for the very young girl, and I should put an accent on the "very." A longer skirt adds grace to the figure, as I noticed at the ball last night.

Far be it from me to advocate the old-fashioned long skirt which touched the ground and caught all the germs on the street; but temperance in all things is a good life motto, and temperance in skirt lengths is coming back, and I am glad for it.

LAST night the dresses at the Midwinter Ball were beautiful. Mrs. J. Kearsley Mitchell looked extremely well in pink chiffon embroidered with rhinestones. Mrs. Charles Edward Ingersoll wore a handsome gown of black satin embroidered in jet, and Mrs. Rush Toland had on a striking frock of Nile green brocade. Mrs. Arthur Emlen Newbold, Jr., looked most attractive in a dress of gold and white brocade, and Mrs. Sidney Keith wore a becoming costume of pearl gray velvet. Mrs. James Starr wore a very good-looking sapphire blue velvet dress combined with silver cloth, and her daughter, Logan Starr, had on a pretty frock of orange chiffon made with a panel of gold brocade.

VIRGINIA CARTER, who was entertained at a theatre party given by her mother before the ball, looked perfectly lovely in a French frock of white satin, embroidered in white silk and rhinestones, made with a round neck. A fluffy bow of tulle was fastened at the side of the girdle. Another striking white costume was worn by Betty Wayne, daughter of the Joseph Waynes, of Chestnut Hill. It was of satin brocade, with panels of silver lace on the sides and silver trimming on the bodice, which was made with a low round neck.

Helen Sewell looked unusually well in the light blue that is so becoming to her, in chiffon, made with a bodice of sequins, and the skirt cut in four points, picoted in a deeper blue. Helen always looks so well in evening clothes, and her hair shows up so beautifully under the lights in a ballroom. Dorothy Rodgers, who is the daughter of Mrs. William H. Donner, had on a charmingly youthful frock of rose pink crepe de chine, with a girdle of roses in a deeper shade.

I SAW two attractive sub-debs walking along Walnut street the other day and I must say I do like the sports hats some of them are wearing so much this year. The two girls I saw were Sue Goodman and Virginia Carpenter. Sue wore a stunning long cape of dark blue duvetyn finished about the neck with a wide collar of beaver fur. Her hat was a rather large model of dark blue, trimmed with a feather.

Virginia wore a rose-colored sports suit and gray fur and her hat was a soft sports model of light grey felt. It had no trimming, but the folds in the felt gave a most finished effect. Sue is the daughter of Mrs. Howard Seaver, you know. Her father was the late Samuel Goodman. She is a sister of Mary Goodman, who came out two years ago. Virginia is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Carpenter, Jr., and won fame last summer as "runner-up" in the junior tennis championship of the United States. She won the junior doubles championship with Ceres Baker at Forrest Hills at the same time.

CHARLIE had a great way of demanding his rights upon all and every occasion. So when Mother expected guests she warned him carefully that he must not ask for things at the table until every one else had had all they wanted. He did very well, and sat meekly eating what was put before him. However, inwardly he longed for more ice water, which did not seem to be forthcoming. Now, among the guests was an older lady, who seemed to require a great deal of attention and who was asking frequently for water or "another roll" or "butter, please." Finally Charlie's thirst got the better of him (he's only four you know) and so his small thin voice was heard in no uncertain accents remarking: "Mawy, after that lady get's froo asking for sings, will you give me some more water?"

The Most Colossal Spectacle Ever Known
THEODORA
Sardou's immortal love story
As amazing as it is as a production, there is a gripping plot of great interest.
Unparalleled splendor and magnificence make "Theodora," at the Stanton, a screen spectacle that can be written about only in superlatives. Nothing like this long-heralded production has hitherto been seen here, and it may well be regarded as the last word in the filming of gigantic, breath-taking scenes, combined with beauty of rare and exotic appeal.—North American.
