BAR LAURA OLIVER AT BLAUL FUNERAL

But Woman In Closed Car Follows Body of Poison Victim to the Cemetery

SAYS SHE FOOLED THEM

By a Staff Correspondent

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 29.—Laura Oliver has had her last look at Frederick S. Blaul, who died here on Tuesday, it is believed, of poison. Miss Oliver's affair with Blaul is said to have been responsible for his death. She rode to the funeral in a closed car yesterday, and, although barred from the house, followed the cortege to the cemetery, and watched from a distance as the body was lowered into the grave.

"I fooled them," she said, after the funeral. "I fooled them, for I bade good-by to Fred while he lay in the morgue. They had not parted his hair as he used to do, and I tried to smooth it over in the proper way, before I saw them lay the body in the grave today."

Blaul, one time wealthy beer magnate, a married man with one son, died under suspicious circumstances, and his executors was [illegible] for poison traces. [illegible] chemists either have not completed their work, or refuse to make any statement as to what they have found.

It is generally believed Blaul committed suicide. The authorities have no evidence that death was due to foul play.

"We have no evidence of any sort against anybody," admitted States Attorney Barnard today. The police make the same admission.

All "games of hazard" are to be prohibited.

TRANSFER CHILD SLAYER

Emma Mack Taken From Jail to Hospital for Insane

Emma Mack was taken from the Norristown jail today to the State Hospital for the Insane in accordance with a court order. Last week she was acquitted of the murder of Mary Van Horn, a Horsham child, on the ground of insanity. She gave the little girl poison tablets.

The order provided that the young woman "be received, detained, maintained and cared for until an order shall be made by this court for her return to the Montgomery County Prison or until she be discharged from said hospital."

The last previous action of this kind was on December 4, 1920, when Josephine Mandato, who had been found not guilty of murdering her brother-in-law on the ground of insanity, was transferred to the asylum. A few weeks ago this woman was paroled from the institution, attending physicians declaring she is not now insane.

NEW BUS LINE SOUGHT

Application Made for Willow Grove-New Hope Service

A number of applications for certificates of convenience to operate motor buses in this city and adjacent [illegible] were heard by Public Service Commissioner Benson [illegible]. Hugh W. Fesmire and Charles Mearis asked for a certificate to operate a bus service along York road between Willow Grove and New Hope, a distance of twenty miles. Protests were filed by the Philadelphia and Reading Railway and the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, on the ground that such a line would enter into competition with their roads.

A petition containing signatures of several hundred residents along the line was filed. It stated there [illegible] travel to warrant the line.

It was argued the line would enable children to attend Sunday schools.

The application will be [illegible] by the commission in [illegible] next week.

DELAY M'CONNELL TRIAL

Former Dry Chief Will Not Be Tried Until December

Argument on demurrers and motions to quash indictments against William C. McConnell, former State Prohibition Director, and forty-six others will not be heard until after October 30. This will necessarily postpone the trial of McConnell and his co-defendants for conspiracy to allow the withdrawal of whisky from bond on fraudulent permits until the December term of court.

Judge Thompson today declined to fix a definite date for the argument.

STRICKEN AT WHEEL, PLUNGES INTO RIVER

Real Estate Operator Rescued by Park Guards After Attack of Vertigo

COLD WATER REVIVED HIM

After he had driven his automobile into the Schuylkill River along the East River Drive yesterday afternoon, P. Philip Hallowell, a real estate operator of 1239 South Twenty-second street, was rescued by Park guards, who dragged him from the river.

He has been suffering from vertigo. He was stricken while driving in the Park and lost control of the machine.

Hallowell, who is twenty-seven years old, told the story today of how he extricated himself from the car at the bottom of the river.

"I am attacked by fainting spells at times, due to this heart of mine," said Mr. Hallowell. "In fact, I had just been to my physician, Dr. Bertolet, at 1530 Locust street.

"I took the doctor to Eighteenth and Walnut streets and dropped him there. Then I started for an automobile company's place in Chelten avenue, Germantown. I intended to cut through Fairmount Park and extend it on the East River Drive.

"Just as I approached the Columbia Avenue Bridge I felt the fainting spell coming over me. I reached for the emergency brake and then all became black. Next thing I felt cold and became conscious. The water must have revived me.

"I was trapped in the wheel and it was dark. With some instinct I cannot explain I reached out and caught the edge of the car hood and dragged myself from the wheel. Then I fell in the mud and scrambled about, not knowing where I was."
