DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

Winter Nuts
By DADDY

Jack and Janet go after walnuts. They find the walnut tree guarded by Red Bull. The bull chases them, but they are saved by Daddy Dog, who bites the bull's tail.

CHAPTER VI
Red Bull Shakes the Tree

RED BULL stood guarding the walnut tree. He was snorting with anger.

Jack and Janet were glad they were on the other side of the fence. If it hadn't been for Daddy Dog the bull would have caught them.

But glad as they were to be out of the field, Jack and Janet still were sorry they couldn't gather the walnuts from the tree under which Red Bull was lashing his tail.

"Those are nice nuts," said Jack to Janet. "But even if the bull went away I am afraid we couldn't knock them down."

"Woof!" barked Daddy Dog. "What will you give me if I have those nuts knocked down for you and get Red Bull away so you can gather them?"

Daddy Dog only wagged his tail at that.

"I'll get you a nice, meaty bone from the butcher shop," promised Jack. And at that Daddy Dog barked quick agreement to the bargain.

"I need a red ribbon," said Daddy Dog. "I am going to play I am a bull fighter."

Janet wore a red girdle around her waist. This she quickly unfastened and gave to Daddy Dog.

"Woof! Be ready to gather the nuts when they are on the ground and when the bull runs away," warned Daddy Dog softly.

He crept through a hole in the fence, and once more was in the field with Red Bull.

The great beast glared at Daddy Dog. He was still smarting from the bite Daddy Dog had given his tail. Then he saw the red girdle in Daddy Dog's mouth. Now red has a queer effect upon a bull. It makes him crazy mad. When Red Bull saw that red girdle he went wild.

"Oo-umph!" he roared, and he charged at Daddy Dog. But Daddy Dog was ready for the bull. He dodged behind the walnut tree. Crash! Red Bull hit the tree a mighty smash, shaking it from its roots to its topmost branches. The walnuts, jarred loose, fell from the tree like hail. They pelted Red Bull on the back and added to his rage. Again Daddy Dog flashed the red girdle in front of him. Crash! Again the tree shook. More walnuts were jarred loose. They pelted Red Bull. They strewed the ground.

Again and again Daddy Dog flashed the red in front of Red Bull. Again and again the angry bull crashed into the tree. And at each crash the walnuts pelted down, until at last the tree was bare.

The children wondered how they would get the nuts, now they were off the tree. But Daddy Dog knew. He raced across the field, waving the red girdle in his mouth. Red Bull followed that bit of red. Back and forth he chased Daddy Dog through the bushes at the end of the field. But Daddy Dog was swifter of foot and quicker at dodging.

And Jack, while this was going on, had jumped over the fence. He picked up the walnuts as fast as he could. He filled his bag and Janet's bag. He threw what was left on the other side of the fence to be gathered some other day. Then he climbed the fence to safety.

"Come, Daddy Dog!" he shouted. Daddy Dog heard the call and, with a final flirt of the red girdle, he dashed for the fence, and through it to safety. Red Bull was so tired with his fruitless charging, that he could scarcely bellow his rage after Daddy Dog.

And thus it was Jack and Janet got their winter supply of nuts—a supply that was to make happy many a cold and stormy day. And thus it was Daddy Dog got his meaty bone, which made him happy, too.

(Next week another Daddy Dog story—funny and exciting.)
