BISHOP HOPKINS.—I presume that Bishop HOPKINS believes that the posterity of Adam were involved in the consequences of his transgression; that before the fall, the human race were free; that after the fall, they became slaves to the flesh and the devil.

Assuming these premises to be true, it follows, that the I will was the first, and is now the chief slave master, and all who advocate the continuance of slavery are his lackeys.

BISHOP HOPKINS.—I presume that Bishop HOPKINS believes that the posterity of Adam were involved in the consequences of his transgression; that before the fall, the human race were free; that after the fall, they became slaves to the flesh and the devil.

Assuming these premises to be true, it follows, that the I will was the first, and is now the chief slave master, and all who advocate the continuance of slavery are his lackeys.
