New Haven, Conn., Nov. 25.—Ideal football weather greeted Yale and Harvard for their forty-first annual gridiron clash before 77,000 people in the Bowl today.

Early morning clouds, which had threatened snow flurries, vanished, and at noon almost cloudless skies prevailed. The morning temperature of 25 mellowed to a mark of 35. High winds blew, assuring a punting game.

Notables arriving on the early special trains included Georges Clemenceau, whose arrival from Boston at noon was the signal for roars of applause all along the line; W. W. Aitchison, H. P. Sinclair, Harold and Reginald Vanderbilt, William G. Rockefeller, Percy Rockefeller, L. F. Lopez, De W. Seward Webb, Harry Payne Whitney, the entire Princeton eleven, visitors over both today's rivals, and Governor Everett Lake, of Connecticut, halfback on the first Harvard eleven to defeat Yale.

Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford had their applications for tickets turned down because they were not Yale or Harvard graduates. They attended the game, obtaining tickets, possibly, from speculators. Four students were arrested on the charge of scalping.

Clemenceau was the only guest of the day who came without a ticket. None was left when he decided to see the match, and he occupied the seat of an alumnus who contributed one of his tickets.

Betting drooped to nearly even terms at noon with the advent of the army of Harvard supporters. Yesterday Yale backers were plunging at odds of 5 to 3.

Two Straight Defeats

Ted Jones' eleven has shown power all year except in the Princeton game. Harvard also has shown strength; but two consecutive defeats, one by the Tigers and the other by Brown, have taken some of the brilliancy from the record of the Fishermen.

If the Blue is victorious it will be the first time since 1903 that a Yale eleven, beaten by Princeton, has come back against the Crimson. This also is a fact taken from the dust of the years. It also will have no effect on the playing of the 1922 teams.

It was announced late last night that Charlie O'Hearn, the far-famed Yale drop-kicker, would start the game. Neale was originally slated to begin the game at left halfback with O'Hearn on the sidelines as a threat. His sudden switch probably was caused by a change of tactics.

Line for line, Yale was almost generally agreed to be the stronger on the scrimmage frontier. Yet the difference was not overwhelming. It was in the backfields, with men available on each team for special ability to support a scheme of surprise strategy, that the issue lay. Buell at quarterback would be the craftiest field general available in either camp, it was conceded.

Readlinger, Yale's opening choice, would have to make up much in rushing ability to meet Buell's inspirational and tactical value. But the Blue expected to be able to go out and gain ground by sheer force, adding to it in the pinches plays provided for special situations. Harvard, on the other hand, it was known, spent most of the week in preparing a defense for the Yale attack, in which deceptive offense built around Owen largely hoped to outscore Yale. Owen, throughout this season, has been in little more than an hour of actual play, and he told friends that on this, his last appearance on the college gridiron, he was going out to make up for lost time.

Colorful Scene

The list of the days of knight errantry, with which the scenes of today are best likened, could have presented no picture to compare other than in color with that of the Yale Bowl, the surrounding countryside and adjacent city before the game. Into New Haven by the train, by motor, by trolley and afoot, even by airplane, poured the 77,000 spectators. France's former premier apart, the host included hundreds of highest standing in the country, several score of whom came by special cars.

With the Bowl filling early, the spectacle from the top of the great semi-sunken saucer of stands was that of a grassy plain, white-lined at five-yard intervals for a stretch of 100 yards, surrounded by rising ridges of seats, which were filling fast from roads that were choked almost as far back as could be seen, and from automobiles unloaded parks that stretched miles after mile and row upon row.

Life and color from young and old from the undergraduates expecting to the full the biggest sport day in their academic year, most of them with girls, to graduates and parents of players who made holiday for the occasion.

The cellar championship of the Interscholastic League will be decided today when Northeast High and Central High meet at the former's field, Twenty-ninth and Clearfield streets, at 2 o'clock.

Northeast has yet to win a game in the league, while Central has won one game, that being from Southern. Northeast held Southern to a 7-7 tie.

The Mirrors were overwhelmed last week by West Philadelphia High by the score of 33 to 0, and also defeated Northeast by 16 to 0. Still, Central looms as the favorite.

Louisville Will Rebuild

Chicago, Nov. 25.—The Louisville club, of the American Association, will build a $150,000 baseball park seating 18,000 to replace the one destroyed by fire. It will be modeled after the Chicago National League Park, with the grandstand so constructed that it can be converted into a double deck.

Special Dispatch to Evening Public Ledger

Easton, Pa., Nov. 25.—Hoping that Dame Fortune will smile on their unfortunate and crippled football team, scores of Lehigh University football followers swept into this thriving city shortly before the noon hour today for the big game with the Lafayette College aggregation, shouting "Lafayette, we are here." Undaunted by this display of the famous Lehigh fighting spirit the Lafayette crowd responded with another World War battle cry, "Thou shall not pass."

Lafayette students and grads have cause for shouting "Thou shall not pass." For such famous teams as the University of Pittsburgh, University of Pennsylvania, Boston College, Bucknell and Rutgers all have tried it in the last two seasons and failed. Only one—that great Washington and Jefferson combination—has succeeded in overthrowing Coach Sutherland's wrecking crew in the last nineteen games played by Lafayette.

And even greater than this is the home stand achievement of the Maroon and White. Eighteen consecutive victories have been tallied by the Lafayette teams on March Field since losing to Lehigh back in 1918 by the score of 17 to 0. The present senior class has yet to see a Lafayette eleven go down to defeat on March Field, and from the advance dope the class will see the curtain ring down on the 1922 home season still unmarred by a home disaster.

The physical condition of the two fighting elevens is one of marked contrast. Lehigh, the underdog in today's scrap, has been in hard luck all season and will be forced to start the fray without the services of several of its best players. Lafayette, on the other hand, is in the best of physical condition. In fact, Coach Sutherland has so many first-class players in shape that his problem is to decide who shall remain on the bench with "Doc" Marlofka, the midget halfback still nursing all-American ambitions.

Because of the remarkable playing of the Sutherland aggregation this and last season, Lafayette today ruled a 3-to-1 favorite, with few Lehigh takers. In fact, the betting on today's fray is the lightest in years. Lafayette men have experienced great difficulty in placing their lucre. Lehigh students desire to bet on points, but Lafayette will go no higher than 3 to 1 on the outcome of the game.

Football has been the main topic of discussion in this city since the opening week of practice in September, but today outclassed all others. Pennants of both institutions adorned all business houses, fakers were found hawking at all corners, while florist shops were doing a thriving business.

Both Lafayette and Lehigh held mass-meetings and smokers last evening as a tuning-up process for the game. At Bethlehem, Coach Baldwin and Bosey Reiter told the grads and undergraduates how their team was coming down with a spirit prayer of doing or die to play the game of Lehigh's history. Here in Brossard Hall, Dean Hooker, Dr. Frances A. March, Jr., and the incomparable Charles Kelchner told of Lafayette's glorious deeds of the past.

There will be another battle on March Field this afternoon. The two college bands have been working overnight to crowd in a few snappy and jazzy numbers, and Tommy Doulin, the Lafayette leader, says that his band will put it over Lehigh's just as bad as the football team does.

Haverhill, Mass., Nov. 25.—Catholic High will try out to avenge its defeat by Philadelphia last fall at the hands of St. James when these teams meet here this afternoon.

The Purple and Gold held a lengthy drill on the Boston College Field yesterday afternoon, and the players were in fine shape for the game.

Catholic had a big advantage in weight over the home team, as the largest man on the St. James team is Dolan, the guard, who weighs only 168 pounds. However, the Saints are one of the fastest teams in the New England ranks, and have won five straight games.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 25.—The Washington and Jefferson football machine is a top-heavy favorite in the second annual encounter with the University of Detroit squad, this despite the fact the visitors were outweighed nearly ten pounds to the man by the local team.

Coach Duffy, of Detroit, mustered the strongest line available in an effort to stage the "comeback" followers of the Red and White have been hoping for most of the season.

Washington and Jefferson was minus the services of Joe Basista, the star fullback, who has been ill, and it was indicated Harold Erickson, halfback extraordinary, would not play the entire game, owing to a recent injury.

temporary wooden structures holding about 500 each and bringing the total seating capacity for the Scarlet and Black rooters up to 1500.

Students Erect Stand

The Swarthmore cheering section parks itself in a big wooden stand on the east side of the field, which runs north and south. This stand is brought over from Swarthmore for this game by a committee of student volunteers, put up by students, laboriously taken down after the fray is over and carted back home again.

There is no such reciprocity about seating accommodations between any other two colleges in the country, as far as available records show.

Some 1500 Garnet fans can pack themselves into this stand or perch along its edges, while the rest stand on the side lines or roost in motorcars parked a few yards back of the boundary line.

There is no wild rush to arrive at the game. Most of the Haverford adherents live in the vicinity and know to a split second just how long it will take them to reach the field.

The Swarthmore contingent comes across country in a phalanx of motorcars, and it, too, knows just how to figure on reaching Walton Field in ample time for the opening whistle.

Pretty Girls Plentiful

There are pretty girls, furs, flowers, pennants, bands, rocketing cheers, enthusiasm run riot, just like a Penn-Cornell game. But it's all in miniature, like looking at the old Franklin Field, say, through the wrong end of a pair of powerful binoculars.

There were mass-meetings at both colleges last night, fiery speeches from former stars, a great display of college spirit. The battlery of the Haverford students is a revamping of that famous saying of the only original Mike Murphy, Penn's great trainer. "A team that won't be beat can't be beat."

Princeton adopted it this year and won its first "Big Three" championship since 1911.

Haverford shortened it down to "You can win."

The line-up, which has started the majority of the Garnet games this season, was used by Swarthmore to open up against the Main Liners. The line was composed of Jackson and Korn, ends; Shoemaker and L. Wilcox, tackles; Willis and Knauer, guards, and Captain Cornell, center. In the backfield, Schneider ran the team from the quarterback post; Knapp and Ned Wilcox were the halfbacks, and Asplundh the fullback.

Veteran Haverford Backfield

Coach Harmon sent a veteran backfield against the Swarthmore warriors. "Fat" Brown, the captain, is rated as one of the greatest stars in Haverford history, and he was supported by Allen and Bacon, halfbacks, and Wilbur, the quarterback.

The success of Haverford, however, will depend in a large measure on the work of the line. The Main Line forwards are inexperienced and on paper they are no match for the Garnet athletes, who play along the first line of defense, but Haverford-Swarthmore games often develop surprises and the Harmon forwards may hold their own with the Garnet linemen.

The Haverford line was composed of Montgomery and Rhondes, ends; Hollingshead and Strong, tackles; Jones and Reinhardt, guards, and Miller, center.

Swarthmore holds an edge of about two pounds per man in weight. This advantage is seen in the backfield. The Garnet backs average 177 pounds, against 170 for Haverford. The Scarlet and Black line averages 174½, compared with 172 for the Garnet. The team averages are Haverford 172 and Swarthmore 173¾.

The Garnet has won seventeen of the thirty contests played between the two teams. Haverford has captured eleven and ten have resulted in ties.

These old-time rivals opened football relations forty-three years ago and played twenty-three times up to 1904, when a dispute caused a break. Up to 1904 the series was fairly even. Haverford won ten, lost twelve and tied in one.

KAYWOOD VS. WANDERERS

The soccer teams are coming into their own and in a couple of weeks they will have the sport field to themselves for the winter.

Another big list of games in the various leagues is on the schedule this afternoon, although for the first time in many weeks the Phillies are not in action at home.

The big clash of the day is the National Cup match at Tenth and Butler streets, where Bethlehem and Fairhill come together.

The Allied League has a number of important games on. The Fleisher yarners are back at Twenty-sixth and Reed streets with Puritan. The uptowners have not been going any too good, but are confident of holding down the score of the downtowners.

Another important Allied affair is at Thirty-first and Dickinson streets, where Kaywood entertains the Wanderers.

In the second division the outstanding game of the afternoon is between St. Leo and Sunshine, while in the third division Lighthouse Blues oppose Victor in a match, upon the outcome of which depends first place. A victory for Lighthouse will send them into the lead.

In the West Philadelphia section the undefeated Morrell Mills eleven will oppose Adion. Morrell has not lost one league clash all season, and in eight exhibition contests won all but one.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 25.—Brown and Dartmouth trotted out on the gridiron this afternoon prepared for the hardest battle of the season.

"Dartmouth has a fighting chance to win," said Head Coach Robinson, of Brown, as his men left the clubhouse. "Just because we are the favorites to win is no sign that we are going in overconfident. We beat Harvard last week, but we realize that we have our work cut out for us."

Both teams were in first-class condition, and neither has any alibis to offer if defeat comes their way.

Dartmouth started the game without the services of their big tackle, Neidlinger. They missed him, for Neidlinger is a remarkable placement-goal kicker. He was replaced in the line by Goldstein, who was expected to give Captain Gulian, of Brown, a lot of trouble.

Throngs Cheer Army and Navy

the event of the year. But usually in the past it was regarded more as a social event, a colorful outdoors picture, than a contest. This may have been more or less true when West Point and Annapolis sent teams here which had done very little in the way of genuine football before their one big game.

Now it is different. Philadelphia welcomes today two of the foremost gridiron elevens in the East—teams that have and can put up a creditable fight against the best the season has produced. It is certain to be a battle that will display strength, alertness of mind and body, kicking, passing and tackling that one will not see surpassed on any gridiron. It is a fight between two well-coached and smart teams.

When you write about an Army-Navy game that word fight is certain to creep in about every paragraph. Which is as it should be. For to the courageous young men from West Point and Annapolis the winning of this annual grid fight stands out pre-eminent; nothing else that might happen in this whole world today could possibly eclipse this game in importance to them. It was apparent in the little that they said; it was still more apparent in their attitude; it was written in their faces.

Physically, these young men are ready to fight. From both camps came the message this morning that not one regular player was in the slightest degree incapacitated. Neither of the head coaches, Major Charles Daly, of the Army, or Bob Folwell, of the Navy, will present any alibis on that score. And when you say that these teams are physically fit, you have said a whole lot. They need every ounce of energy that their muscles can put forth.

After another very secret practice on Franklin Field yesterday afternoon, Major Daly fairly beamed confidence and satisfaction. The head coach said very little—he did not need to talk. What he did say was that the Army had the better team and should win. "We can't let the Navy equal our record of four straight in this academy series," said Daly. The players within earshot nodded assent and smiled confidently. The same feeling existed in the Army camp this morning.

The Navy was not nearly so secretive when it held a short drill on Franklin Field last evening. "Come on out, boys; so long as you don't publish anything about our technique. I have no objection to your watching our practice," said the head coach to the news gatherers. But neither Folwell, his assistant coaches nor his men made any smiling statements regarding confidence. In fact, Farmer Bob was so glum that one of his friends called him the "Original Mr. Gloom."

Folwell Is Anxious

"Well, you have no idea what this game means to me," answered the coach. "I have played football, coached at colleges, and never did I feel quite the same on the eve of a game as I do since I am with the Navy. These boys mean business. To them losing the annual game is in the nature of a disgrace. If lose they must, they will lose like the game sportsmen, the true Americans, that they are. But I feel the burden because I do not want them to lose.

"On paper the Army has us faded. We know that. But paper champions sometimes come a cropper when they meet a team of real fighters. The Navy knows football; I do not fear anything the Army may attempt to show us in the way of strategy. But the West Point team outweighs us. It is up to us to show superior spirit and fight. That is why my team is not going around laughing and talking victory. They can't help but be serious when they know what a tough job is ahead of them."

Philadelphia is said to be a Navy town—that may be true. But there were Army supporters aplenty in the hotel lobbies this morning, and all doped the game out just as did Daly. The Army is confident because it knows it has a good team, a team that has stood the test. Their battle cry is "Don't let the Navy make it four straight."

Navy supporters, on the other hand, were likely to come up and whisper in one's ear, "Do you think we can do it?" They all know, as does Folwell, that the Army has the power and, quite likely, the ability. Navy's only hope is to outfight and outsmart the husky West Pointers. Can they do it?

The pre-game scenes were similar to those of previous years—but at that there seemed to be more zip to the welcome accorded the up-standing Americans who are trained to do our fighting. Philadelphia opened wide the floodgates of hospitality and the Army and Navy shouted in unison, "We're glad we're back"—or words to that effect.

Less than one-three-hundredth of the total population of this great City of Brotherly Love will have seats inside the Franklin Field Stadium this afternoon. But that made no difference to hospitable Philadelphians—for the chap who wore the Army gray or the Navy blue there was a hearty welcome wherever he might go; a "glad to see you" and "what can I do for you" air that the soldiers and sailors said made them feel right at home.

"So different from cold and blase New York," said an admiral in the Bellevue this morning as he clasped hands with a general. The football fight between the Army and Navy on Franklin Field this afternoon will be the first staged in this city in eight years—and there is not the slightest doubt but that the men who wear the gray and blue uniforms were delighted to be back in the land of hospitality and good-felowship.

The stranger in our midst had no reason to ask what was going on hereabouts. Every building, every shop window, every hotel lobby displayed the yellow and gray of the Army and the yellow and blue of the Navy. Philadelphians were impartial in their showing of colors, as they were in their hospitality.

Probably the major portion of our citizens believed the Army would win—it sure does appear that way "on paper," you know. But the 52,000 who had seats, and the additional tens of thousands who could only read about it, were aware of the well-known Navy fight, and, as one chap put it, "This is the year of upsets; why not one more?"

The Navy wanted and will get a dry field. The light backfield that Folwell will send into the fray cannot do its stuff on a slippery field, according to the experts. However, the Army would have us believe that a dry field favored them. They point to the fact that upon several notable occasions, the West Pointers seemed to have the edge and the weight, welcomed a sloppy gridiron—and then came the upset when the Annapolis lads proved to be the better mud-fighters.

YELLOWJACKETS PLAY JEFFERSON

Frankford Eleven Expects to Find Rochester, N. Y., Team "Tough Nut to Crack"

TOM DAVIES IN BACKFIELD

Tom Davies, all-American backfield star at Pitt last year and backfield coach at Penn this season, will go into action today with the Frankford Yellowjackets against the Rochester, N. Y., Jeffersons.

The game is the first of a series Manager Bowker has arranged with the best teams in the country in the Yellowjackets' drive to attain the national independent gridiron championship. Today's game will be played at Brown's Field, Oxford avenue near the boulevard, kickoff at 2:30 o'clock.

In signing Davies, Manger Bowker obtained the services of one of the greatest backs ever developed by Glenn Warner. Davis was the man about whom the Pitt attack evolved last year. He was virtually a unanimous choice for the mythical "all" eleven the last two years.

This year Davies has worked wonders with the backfield candidates at Franklin Field, keeping himself fit by active scrimmaging during the instruction periods. Several of the big western teams made tempting offers to him, but he turned them down. Now, with his work at Penn virtually completed, he will be with the Yellowjackets the balance of the season.

Another all-American choice by virtually all critics will see service in the game. He is Benny Boynton, who will call signals for the Jefferson. Boynton's open-field running and rare direction of plays had much to do with the victories turned in by the visitors this year.

Alexander and Thompson, all-American linemen from the famous "one-ton" line of Syracuse, will also play for the Jeffersons. Alexander as center and captain and Thompson at guard. King, another "all" choice, from Harvard, will play one of the halfback posts. The visiting line averages 208 pounds and stacks up as the strongest advance line yet encountered by the home team.

The Rochester team has appeared in this section twice. Last year they played the strong Philadelphia Quakers and held them to a tie at 3 all. Last Saturday the Jeffersons played at Conshohocken and without the services of Boynton defeated the strong ironworkers' team by a 6 to 0 margin.

Captain Miller, of the Yellowjackets, has had the Frankford squad practicing daily in anticipation of the toughest game so far this season. All the men who played in the Holmesburg game last Saturday, in which the Yellowjackets won the city championship, are in prime condition.

Joe Lehecka, who was injured two weeks ago, is still on the sidelines, and Davies will start at left half as running mate to Joe Lightner. Seasholtz, fullback of the Lafayette champions last year, is expected to start as fullback in place of "Doc" Elliott, also a Lafayette product. The line will be the same as in previous games.

OKLAHOMA HEAVYWEIGHT WILL BOX AT CHESTNUT

Wolf Carson to Meet Sergeant Ray Smith Thanksgiving Night

For the third time in a number of years a Thanksgiving Night boxing program will be held in Philadelphia. Willus Britt has arranged for five well-matched eight-round bouts to be decided at his Chestnut Street Arena, Fifteenth and Chestnut streets, next Thursday night.

A heavyweight battle will be the headliner. Sergeant Ray Smith, the soldier hero, who proved in his last bout against Frankie Britton, that he was boxing in better shape than ever before, will be opposed to Wolf Carson, the Oklahoma Giant, in the wind-up.

Eddie Dempsey and Willie Curry will be semi-finalists and the prelims are: Al Gordon vs. Jimmy Tierney, Bill Haas vs. Billy Gannon and Tommy Quinn vs. Johnny Clark.

Referee Disqualifies Eddie O'Dowd

Providence, R. I., Nov. 25.—After repeated warnings by Referee Jack Grinnel to refrain from holding, Eddie O'Dowd, bantamweight, from Columbus, O., lost on that score when he was disqualified in the ninth round of a scheduled ten-round bout here with Kid Williams, of Baltimore. While the bout was on, Williams was easily the better.

St. Monica at Racine

The Racine football club will battle St. Monica this afternoon at 2:30 P. M. on their home field at Logan Ball Park, Eighteenth and Rockland streets.

Racine will play all its remaining games here and expects to maintain the record established earlier in the season of downing the best of the independent elevens. The line-up:
