DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

Under the Snow

By DADDY

Jack and Janet take their stone [illegible] to play a joke on the rabbits [illegible] at Daddy Dog's school, [illegible] the school in a cavern far beneath the deep snow. Without being seen, they let the stone rabbits down from the roof to scare the rabbits and squirrels as they listen to Daddy Dog's story about bewitched rabbits.

CHAPTER II

Janet Takes a Tumble

DADDY DOG got a surprise when he [illegible] into the air and grabbed [illegible] tail of the spotted flying [illegible]. He thought that tail would be [illegible] teeth would sink [illegible]

He found the tail so hard it hurt [illegible]. That was queer to Daddy Dog. [illegible] queer to Jack and [illegible] at the roof [illegible] queer to them [illegible] were their [illegible] down from [illegible] which they were [illegible] Daddy Dog and his [illegible]

[illegible] though the tail of the [illegible] so hard it [illegible] the plucky [illegible] go. He hung [illegible]

[illegible] hung on, he [illegible] that Janet, [illegible] rabbit from above, [illegible]. She was jerked [illegible] broke beneath [illegible] go the string, [illegible] her wrist, [illegible] holding her [illegible]. Down [illegible] the stone floor of [illegible] gone on she [illegible] her head. [illegible] Janet's danger. He [illegible] by the foot. With his other hand he seized a stout root. The root tore partly out of the earth under the weight of the white-spotted rabbit, and Daddy Dog, and Janet and Jack. But it did not break. It held all four swaying in the air like the pendulum of a huge clock.

The rabbits and squirrels were astonished when Daddy Dog's leap at the white-spotted rabbit brought Janet tumbling out of the roof. And they were more astonished when Jack plunged after her. Amid the dust of the falling dirt, they did not know the children. They thought them witches following the supposedly bewitched rabbits.

Daddy Dog, too, was astonished. He let go the white-spotted rabbit and dropped to the floor. But even though he was startled and scared he did not rush wildly to hide in a dark corner, as did the rabbits and squirrels. He stood his ground, barking fiercely at the swaying figures above.

Janet and Jack now found themselves in a bad fix. All of a sudden the joke had been turned on them. And they didn't find it much of a joke either.

Janet was swinging head down. If Jack let go she would surely crack her crown on the hard floor. And Jack, clinging to Janet with one hand and to the root with the other, couldn't hang on very long. Already his arms seemed to be pulling out of his shoulders. They were growing numb.

"Help!" gasped Janet. "Help us, Daddy Dog!"

Then Daddy Dog knew who they were. He stopped his barking.

"Do something quickly, Daddy Dog!" pleaded Jack. "I can't hang on much longer."

(What could Daddy Dog do? You will learn in the next chapter how he uses his wise old head.)
