THE GRAVITY TO LIVE.

Death Knell of the Famous Road Will Not Sound Saturday.

For the past two weeks many persons have ridden over the gravity to experience the joys of the mountain trip preparatory to the closing of the road. When the old year is tooted and rung out it was expected the death knell of the gravity will be sounded, but yesterday the following notice was posted at the company's office on North Main street:

Delaware and Hudson Canal Company, Office of the Second Vice President, Albany, N. Y., Dec. 28.

Commencing January 1, 1899, passenger and local freight trains will continue running on the Gravity railroad until further notice.

Stations on the light track between Honesdale and Waymart will be abandoned and locomotive power will be used for moving all trains from Honesdale to Waymart. H. G. Young,
Second Vice President.

In an interview with Superintendent Manville it was learned that the widening of the light track will only extend to the No. 3 breaker and washery. Through his influence the passenger and freight trains will be continued.

BOARD OF TRADE.

Effort Should Be Made to Prevent Its Lapse Into Lethargy.

The Gravity news has so raised the hopes of the people that there is some danger of the board of trade being allowed to lapse into the lethargic state from which it was recently lifted. Mere mention of the possibility ought to be sufficient to put all concerned on their mettle to perpetuate its life.

Of the several propositions already received, nothing definite has yet been effected. Others, however, may soon come under advisement which would be of lasting benefit to the city, and if they can be secured the Gravity scare will have resulted in some good.

Scarcity of Tin Ore.

The area of the ore fields of tin has recently been examined. The extent is surprisingly small. To show this the area may be compared with that of the gold fields of the world. The latter are over 130 times the extent of the tin fields. The great source is in the East Indies, the Straits settlements. The Cornish tin mines in England, while very much smaller than the Straits or Banca mines, occupy a very important place. It would seem as if the rapid reduction in price of aluminum might go to diminish the need for tin in the near future.—Youth's Companion.
