To Glass Manufacturers.
THE subscriber takes pleasure in informing his friends in the Glass Business, that having made some improvement in his machinery, and secured a good supply of raw material of the very best quality, he is enabled to REDUCE THE PRICE of his Pot Clay to $16 per ton.
A large manufacturing firm in Philadelphia, who have tried this Clay, offer $17,50 per ton for it, which is the price of German Clay in that city; but owing to the expense of freight it cannot be delivered there at that price; here, however, it is cheaper than German Clay, from $10 to $12.
This Clay is found in the form of a flinty rock of exceedingly fine texture. It is one of the most infusible substances known. After being carefully cleansed from all earthy matter, it is ground again and again until it passes through a No. 24 screen. It is then barrelled up for market. In using it, two thirds of this Clay is mixed with one third of German Clay; or one third of this Clay, one third of Pot Shells, and one third of German Clay. Messrs. J. Schoonmaker & Co., 24 Wood street, are my sole agents.

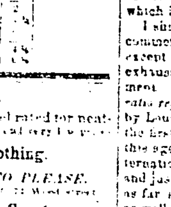
TALCOTT & CANFIELD.



PROPRIETORS of the Lake Ontario Foundry, Steam Engine and Machine Works, Oswego, New York.
These Capstans are superior to any thing of the kind in use, and commend themselves to the notice of Steam Boat owners and Builders, from their simplicity of construction, their strength and the ease with which they are worked. The manner in which these Capstans are constructed, with a single pin, gives power equal to ten men on an ordinary Capstan. They can be used with either single or double purchase. They work easily and rapidly. No better evidence need be produced of their utility, and popularity, than the fact, that the following splendid steamers on the Western Waters have them in use—Keliper, Chief Clay, James Robb, Pennsylvania, Magnolia, W. B. Clifton, Duke Lexington, Center, Chancellor, Huntsville, Ohio, and many others now in use on the finest steamers, Propellers and Sail Vessels on the Northern chain of great lakes.
The proprietors also manufacture them mounted with brass, in an elegant manner.

THURSDAY MORNING, AUGUST 26, 1852.

COL. BENTON.

Our readers know that Col. Benton has lately been elected to Congress from the St. Louis district. He subsequently made a dashing and characteristic speech to his constituents, a lively synopsis of which we take from the Cleveland True Democrat. It will be read with great interest.

COL. BENTON'S SPEECH

After the election Col. B met his constituents, and delivered a speech to them.

It was a proud occasion, and he felt it to be so. Honest exultation is natural in our circumstances, said he; insolent triumph foreign to our natures. That exultation he displayed, but with moderation, "the crowning ornament of victory, and the balm which cures all wounds." Said the old Statesman:—

We have gained a victory—a great one; manfully and nobly gained it—the open field our theatre—hard knocks our process. No Ulysses work with us; but the Ajax's—Big and Little Ajax—hard knocks, but no tricks; hard, but fair.

The victory! And a marvellous one it is. St. Louis was the Gibraltar of the opposition. The two parties combined against him seemed too strong to conquer. But he did carry it—carried all—two State Senators, and members of the Legislature, twenty county offices, all of them; a member of Congress! A victory won thus, with power and wealth against him; with all the machinery of party against him—with all the press against him, save one printed in German, and with empty pockets, no arsenals or military chests, is a marvel.

Declares Mr. Benton:—

We were empty, all empty, except the heart! and that was full! full to the brim! brimful of courage and patriotism. The Demos of St. Louis—I love that Greek word—the demos krateo of St. Louis, in the month of August, first Monday, and second day, in the year of grace, 1852, have done a deed which shall long resound through the land; which constitutes an era in the history of Missouri, and sets an example for the whole State to follow. Victory complete sits upon our banner. No dead, no wounded, not a prisoner left upon the field. We have met the foe, and they are ours; and now, like generous conquerors, we will bind up their wounds, and wipe away their tears, and give them the best we have, except the offices. Such is the result in the noblest State in the Union.

The cause of this victory is given. Two words explain it. Direct voting. The Convention met; it represented ten thousand men; it had delegates claiming to speak for them; they nominated another man. He was the "Regular." Mr. Benton saw the imposture, and resolved to riddle it. He appealed from the workers of the Convention, and the fraudulent proxies of the people, to the people themselves. He appealed from the indirect vote, to the direct. Thus does he announce the result:

The election followed, and direct voting after the indirect; and the basis of the nomination was exactly reversed—toward ten thousand for him who was to have next to none! and next to none, to him who was to have ten thousand! and that is about a fair specimen of all such indirect voting—all such delegate and proxy work—all such interloping conventicles, from Presidential nominations down to thimble-rig juggling for State and county officers.

The duties of office! These are realities. Not to feed at the public crib, but to work. Candidates selected by the people are sent to the Legislature, State and National, to work, and to bring back an account of good work done; or at all events, of faithful endeavors to do it.

"This is their mission, and the election is a mandate for work, and a bond for responsibility, as well as a call to honor and distinction."

What Mr. Benton will do in Congress, he thus states:—

In my more extended character, as acting for the whole Union, I shall in the first place, join all the good men of all parties in restoring the decorum of the House, and confining it to its proper duties—important enough and various enough to exhaust the whole measure of any man's ability; and exalted enough to furnish reputation to any amount of honorable ambition. I shall be a party man where party principle is concerned, but shall never mistake for principle the trick and intrigue of slang politicians. I shall act with the good men of all parties when the honor and interest of the country is concerned; and act with such in all questions which are either above or below party. I shall be opposed to all plunder legislation, all unnecessary expenditures, to all extravagance; and endeavor to return the Government to that economy from which it has so frightfully departed.

I shall be in favor of peace, friendship, and commerce with all nations, and war with none, except upon great national causes; and that after exhausting all resources of honorable adjustment. The last argument of Kings—the ultima ratio regum, so proudly inscribed on his cannon by Louis the Fourteenth—is not to be, with me, the first argument of the Republic; especially in this age of advanced civilization and social international communication; and when reason and justice, not force and arms, should settle, as far as possible, the controversies of nations as well as individuals.

No war: no threats of war: none with Mexico: none with Great Britain. The Garay Tehuantepec grant he declares to have been twice defunct under the laws of Mexico. The idea of enforcing this claim is monstrous. The policy of waging war for it, not to be tolerated. Why, says Mr. Benton—

The Garay Tehuantepec grant, twice defunct under the laws of Mexico, once upon the limitation of time for the fulfillment of its conditions, and once upon a decree in Congress for bribery in its inception, and which double defunct grant is now held by some of our millionaire citizens, who call upon the American Government to bully or whip that feeble power into submission to their demands. That grant is for a monopoly road across the Isthmus, and is a route upon foreign territory. Justice, as well as charity, should begin at home; and the good book says, that man is worse than a heathen who does not provide for his own household * * I should not be in favor of bullying or whipping Mexico into the establishment of the foreign monopoly Tehuantepec route at all, even if the grant was yet alive; and much less, when we can get nothing for a free national road, for our own citizens, upon our own territory.

Peace finds a strong advocate in Old Bullion. He hates bullies and bullyism. He hates it in a man; he hates it in a nation. Strife comes from arms often when strife was not intended. He would avoid this cause of conflict. Says he:

I am against sending ships of war to the scene of dispute. It is the way to bring on hostilities, not to prevent them; and to bring them on by an executive order instead of by a law of Congress. Put two men face to face, with a quarrel in their bosoms, and arms in their hands; and how long will it be before they use those arms; before accident or design brings on conflict? It is the same on a larger scale, with fleets and armies. Confront them; tell them to watch each other; tell them to take care of the national honor and interest; and they will do it! do it in the only way known to arms! the favorite way with all to whom war is a profession! And when blood once flows there is an end to all argument but that of the cannon until blood is avenged. "American blood has been shed on an American ship," will be just as potent over the passions as the same words were in relation to American soil: and brought about in the same way. The march of the American troops from Corpus Christi to the Rio Grande made that shedding of "American blood on American soil" which put an end to all peaceful negotiations, fired all passions, and extorted from Congress the declaration of war against Mexico. A similar shedding of "American blood on an American ship" on the coast of Labrador, or in the Bay of Fundy, may bring on a war with Great Britain, the result of accident, or passion, or misconstruction of orders; but not the less calamitous to the country for such a fortuitous beginning.

The struggles of the past are reviewed. "I hit hard." That is the complaint; said the veteran Senator.

Let all such complainers remember that I had been hit myself for more than thirty years before I returned a lick; and that it is my nature, being forced into action, to do nothing by halves. But, enough of this. By-gones are (with me) by-gones. Let us forget the past. I offer a child's bargain to all combatants; let me alone, and I will let you alone. And I believe I will let them all alone any way, whether they let me alone or not.

The Senator, after alluding to the rich soil and advantages of Missouri, and claiming that Federal Legislation must help, not mar the designs of nature—after saying,

Fair play to their own resources, and no detriment to others, is all they ask. No shut-fist when National roads are to be made, or National rivers to be improved. No dog in the manger, when the public lands are wanted for their own beneficial development, and for National and agricultural benefaction—closes his speech as follows:

I have been through a contest to which I had no heart, and into which I had been forced, solely against my will. I have not conducted it like other men. Who, since it began, has seen me walk the streets of the city in which I live? stand at a corner? or visit a public place? Who has seen that? No one. Who has heard me talk to any individual to conciliate his vote?—No one. What have I done? Gone forth, when too much assailed, to speak to the masses—those masses always honest, sometimes mistaken, but always ready to do justice. I have spoken the same language to all, kindly and deferentially to the good and mistaken—proudly and defyingly to the false and wicked—and from the masses, and the repulse of assailants, I have always returned to the seclusion of my own house. My work has been that of the sick lion—sick at the heart—reposing in his lair, only leaving it when the hunters and their pack bayed too closely; and then to slaughter or disperse the assailants, and then return again to the sick bed.

I have gone through a contest to which I had no heart, and into which I was forced by combinations against life and honor, and from which I gladly escaped. What is a seat in Congress to me? I have sat thirty years in the highest branch of Congress—and have made a name to which I can expect to add nothing—and I should only be anxious to save what has been gained. I have domestic affections, sorely lacerated in these latter times; a wife whom I have never neglected, and who needs my attentions now more than ever—children, some separated from me by the wide expanse of oceans and continents, others by the slender bounds which separate time from eternity. I touch the age which the Psalmist assigns for the limit of manly life; and must be thoughtless indeed if I do not think of something beyond the fleeting and shadowy pursuits of this life, of all which I had seen the vanity. What is my occupation? ask the undertaker, that good Mr. Lynch, whose face, present on so many mournful occasions, has become pleasant to me. He knows what occupies my thoughts and cares: gathering the bones of the dead—a mother—a sister—two sons—a grand child—planting the cypress over assembled graves, and marking the spot where I and those who are dear to me are soon to be laid; all on the sun-set side of the father of floods, the towering city of St. Louis on the one hand, the rolling stream of the Missouri on the other, and where a cemetery of large dimensions is to be the future metropolis of unnumbered generations. These are my thoughts and cares, and the undertaker knows them.

I have been recluse for many months, and was called proud because I was so. If by that term it was intended to say that I had the vulgar pride which treats with contumely honesty in rags, it is false; if the lofty pride is intended, which despises meanness, though plated with gold, it is true. I have that pride. I never saw the poor honest man that I did not respect, nor the rich mean one that I did not despise.—Of that kind of pride I have something from it to be proud of within myself, and more to be proud of from the people.

Col. Benton, in a triumphant speech since his election, thus sums up some of the work he goes to Congress to do—viz:

"In the National Legislature there are many things to be done, for the failure to do which, or to try, I shall admit my own responsibility. A system of roads from St. Louis to San Francisco; the development of the iron resources of the country; free trade in salt, the rectification of the vagary of universal ad valorems; liberal disposition of the public lands; improvements of our national rivers; the preservation of the gold currency; the acquisition of the arsenal ground for a public promenade in St. Louis; the completion of the marine hospital; preservation of the city harbor; these will be some of the measures of a more home character which I shall press."

GEN. PIERCE OPPOSED TO REWARDING THE OLD INDIAN FIGHTERS.—If Gen. Pierce has done but little, he has refused to do a great deal. He voted against River and Harbor Improvements—against a Protective Tariff—against paying the widow of Gen. Harrison the remainder of his first year's salary, or extending to her the franking privilege—against granting pensions to the widows of old soldiers—and against pensioning the old men who fought the Indians subsequent to the Revolution. The following is the record, as cited by the Cincinnati Gazette:

"On the 1044th page of the House Journal, 1st session 24th Congress, June 18, 1836, we find the following record: 'An engrossed bill (No. 212) entitled An act extending the provisions of the act entitled an act supplementary to the act for the relief of certain officers and soldiers of the Revolution, was read a third time, and being on its passage.

"A motion was made by Mr. Williams, of North Carolina, that the said bill be recommitted to the committee of the whole House, with instructions to strike out the provisions which grant a pension to those persons who were engaged in the Indian hostilities of the West, subsequently to the Revolutionary war, terminating in 1783

"Upon this amendment the previous question was called, the effect of which, if sustained, was to cut off the amendment. Franklin Pierce voted in a minority, 86 to 89, against sustaining the previous question, and therefore, in effect, in favor of the amendment to strike out the provisions granting pensions to the old Indian fighters of the West.

"Franklin Pierce then voted (page 1046) in favor of a motion by Mr. Parks, 'that the said bill do lie on the table.' Yeas 63, nays 111.

"Upon a direct vote upon the passage of the resolution (p. 1047), yeas 106, nays 75, Franklin Pierce voted against it."

The survivors and descendants of these old Indian fighters, will avail themselves of the opportunity soon to be afforded them to manifest their appreciation of these votes of the locofoco candidate for the Presidency.
