WAR NEWS.
 The Rebels have again invaded Pennsylvania and Maryland! A large body of Stuart's Cavalry crossing the Potomac somewhere near Hancock, above the right wing of the Army of the Potomac, passed through Maryland and occupied Mercersburg, Pennsylvania, on Friday morning. That night their advance, consisting of cavalry with a few pieces of artillery, were in Chambersburg, which is in the rear of Hagerstown and also of our army at Williamsport. Their whole force is estimated at about 2000 strong. Although well supplied with muskets and ammunition, Chambersburg was surrendered without even an attempt at defence. They occupied it that night and Saturday morning, when having supplied themselves with such articles as were needed, left. They entered a shoe store and took about two hundred dollars worth of goods, and entered private houses just as they pleased. The cashier of the bank was held as a prisoner during Friday night and compelled to open the vaults of the bank, but the bank officers had been more vigilant than others and removed all the valuables—they had to leave the premises without plunder. In addition to this some five hundred horses were stolen from the citizens, and before they left all the property of the Cumberland Valley railroad was destroyed by fire, consisting of the machine shops, a large house used for the ticket, telegraph and other offices of the company, and also as the residence of the Superintendent, Mr. Lull. The warehouses of Messrs. Wunderlich & Meeds were also destroyed. In these buildings was stored a large amount of ammunition, captured from the rebels a short time before the battle near Sharpsburg. While the fire was raging the shells exploded and flew through the town, but we heard of no accidents by them. The damage done to the citizens and Cumberland Valley Railroad, must amount to a large sum.

The rebel cavalry were pursued, but effected their escape by going through Frederick county and crossing the Potomac below Gen. McClellan's army.

Several battles have taken place in Kentucky.

Discussion by officers and soldiers concerning public measures, determined upon and declared by the Government, when carried beyond the ordinary, temperate and respectful expression of opinion, tend greatly to impair and destroy the discipline and efficiency of the troops by substituting the spirit of political faction, for the firm, steady and earnest support of the authority of the Government, which is the highest duty of the American soldier. The remedy for political errors, if any are committed, is to be found only in the action of the people at the polls.

In thus calling the attention of this army to the true relation between the soldier and the Government, the General Commanding merely adverts to an evil against which it has been thought advisable during our whole history to guard the armies of the Republic; and in so doing will not be considered by any right minded person as casting any reflection upon that loyalty and good conduct which has been so fully illustrated upon so many battle-fields.

In carrying out all measures of public policy this army will of course be guided by the same rules of mercy and christianity that have ever controlled its conduct toward the defenceless.

By command of
 MAJOR GENERAL McCLELLAN.

 This brave and accomplished officer, who enjoys the confidence of the people at large in an eminent degree, it appears has just cause for complaint at the manner in which he has been treated, and it is to be hoped President Lincoln will take his case into his own hands and give him force sufficient to enter the field against the rebels. It has been stated, and thus far not denied, that troops expressly raised for him were assigned to other commands—that his troops were poorly supplied and without pay for several months—that although holding the rank of a Major General he barely commands a division, and that he has been placed under officers of less grade than himself, without the sanction of the President, who alone has that power. In a letter recently written to Philadelphia, he adverts to some of these things, and then says:
 I have not resigned, and I hope the Government will be just enough to save me from this last step. But I have asked to be relieved from my present command, and to be placed in a position wherein I can make myself useful, if my well founded and, as I believe, necessary complaints cannot find redress. These complaints have, in some way, reached the public, and are known to you. You may judge of them yourself.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.

The following despatch has been received at the War Department:
 PERRYVILLE, KY., via BARDSTOWN, Oct. 10.
 I have already advised you of the movements of the army under my command from Louisville. More or less skirmishing has occurred daily with the enemy's cavalry since then. It was supposed the enemy would give battle at Bardstown. My troops reached that point on the 4th, driving out the enemy's rear guard of cavalry and artillery. The main body moved towards Springfield, whither pursuit was continued. The centre corps, under Gen. Gilbert, moved on the direct road from Springfield to Perryville, and arrived on the 7th instant, within two miles of the town, where the enemy was found to be in force. The left column, under Gen. McCook, came upon the Maxville road about 10 o'clock yesterday, the 8th. It was ordered in position to attack, and a strong reconnaissance directed at 4 o'clock. I received a report from Gen. McCook for reinforcements, and learned that the left had been seriously engaged for several hours, and that the right and left of that corps were being turned and severely pressed. Reinforcements were immediately sent forward from the centre; orders were also sent to the right column, under Gen. Crittenden, which was advancing by the Lebanon road to push forward and attack the enemy's left, but it was impossible for it to get into position in time to produce any decisive results. The action continued till dark; fighting also occurred in the center; the enemy was everywhere repulsed, but without some momentary advantages on the left; the several corps were put in position during the night and moved to attack at six o'clock this morning. Some skirmishing occurred with the enemy's rear guard; the main body has fallen back in the direction of Harrodsburg.
 I have no accurate report of our loss yet, and is probably pretty heavy, including valuable officers. General Jackson and Terrill, I regret to say, are among the number of killed.
 (Signed) D. C. BUELL,
 Major Gen. Com'dg.

 HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC,
 October 7. }
 General Order 163.—The attention of the officers and soldiers of the Army of the Potomac is called to General Orders No. 139, War Department, September 24, 1862, publishing to the Army the President's proclamation of September 22. A proclamation of such grave moment to the nation, officially communicated to the Army, affords to the General Commanding an opportunity of defining specifically to the officers and soldiers under his command the relation borne by all persons in the military service of the United States towards the civil authorities of the Government.

The Constitution confides to the civil authorities, legislative, judicial, and Executive, the power and duty of making, expounding and executing the Federal laws. Armed forces are raised and supported simply to sustain the civil authorities, and are to be held in strict subordination thereto in all respects. This fundamental law of our Republican institutions, and should be thoroughly understood and observed by every soldier.
 The principles upon which and the objects for which armies shall be employed in suppressing rebellion, must be determined and declared by the civil authorities, and the Chief Executive, who is charged with the administration of the national affairs, is the proper and only source through which the views and orders of the Government can be made known to the armies of the nation.
