—Ralph A. Smith, well known Tyrone lumber and real estate dealer, was a pleasant caller at this office Friday while in Bellefonte on a business mission. Mr. Smith, basing his statements on his own observations in the lumbering busines for more than 30 years, claims there are definite signs of recovery in that industry. One of the most accurate indications, he said, is that he has received several orders for "furnace poles." Furnace poles are trees used in the tempering of certain types of metals. When the metal in furnaces reaches a certain heat, the poles are pushed in, the moisture in the wood being released slowly into the molten mass. Other methods of injecting moisture into molten metal are unsatisfactory. In any event, Mr. Smith declares that when orders for furnace poles pick up, definite activity in industry generally is sure to follow.
