HEBERLING REUNION

A reunion of the Heberling clan was held at the Mayes Grove, near Spruce Creek, September 1. After greetings were over a bountiful picnic dinner was well taken care of.

An interesting program followed. An article "It takes more than laws" was read by M. E. Heberling, followed by numerous short selections of wit and humor. A poem was given in honor of the members of the clan present and in loving memory of those who have gone before down the long, long trail. A letter of greeting from O. C. Harpster, LaHabra, was read.

Of the immediate family of the late Joseph and Margaret Heberling only two daughter-in-laws are living. They are Mrs. James Heberling of Lock Haven, and Mrs. Thomas Heberling, of Tyrone. These ladies were presented flowers as they are the oldest members of the clan.

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Barr received the prize, a road map, for coming the greatest distance. The prize for youngest member present was won by Katharine Ann Bechdel, three years old.

A movement by a small minority to have the reunion dinner in the form of a box social caused quite a bit of merriment and was hilariously voted down. We don't censure them too severely as there is something in the long, long table "winding down" that gives picnics the "oomph." A liberal collection was lifted for purchasing playground equipment and for expense of next year's reunion which will be held the Sunday before Labor Day, at Mayes Grove.

Officers elected for 1941 are as follows: president, Robert Heberling; vice president, J. H. Bechdel; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. David Mains; asisstant secretary-treasurer, Paul Heberling; song leaders, Mr. and Mrs. William Geist; program committee, Mrs. H. G. Ebbs, Mrs. Frank DeLong, Mrs. Harry Jones.

Heberling and son Paul, of State College; Mrs. James Heberling and daughter, Mrs. Lawrence Yost and sons Albert and LeRoy Heberling, of Lock Haven; Mr. and Mrs. W. W. MUSIC HATH CHARM— AND SO DOES LIGHT

It's easier to hit the right notes, say lighting specialists, when the young pianist has a good lamp to help her follow the small notes. This attractive floor lamp has been designed to meet the requirements of the illuminating Engineering Society, giving a wide-spread of good light over the music and keyboard.

"Mother, do I have to practice any longer? I'm so tired and I Can't get this piece anyhow!" This probably sounds familiar to some of you mothers who have children studying piano.

Lighting engineers point out that the child who squirms at the piano bench and dislikes to practice may simply need better lighting. Hitting the wrong note, they point out, is often a matter of seeing slowly and inaccurately because of poor light. Fewer wrong notes may be struck when the lighting is improved and seeing becomes quicker and more accurate.

Irritability and restlessness, as well as eyestrain and fatigue, lighting experts say, may result from close eye work done under poor light. The small notes of music which the eyes follow so intently should be well lighted.

But how, you are probably wondering, can I get more light at the piano? It really isn't as puzzling as you may think.

For the upright or grand piano the lighting specialists suggest a tall floor lamp with a three-light bulb—100-200-300 watts. Its highest level of light should be turned on while reading music. The lamp can be placed at either side of the pianist so that it will give a wide area of light over the keyboard without casting harsh shadows.

The most ideal selection in a lamp is from the ones made by about sixty lamp manufacturers to meet the requirements of the Illuminating Engineering Society. These I. E. S. lamps are built over specifications set up by lighting engineers to give smooth glareless quality of adequate light for better sight, and come in many types and designs.

For example, for the small piano or electric organ a bridge-style I. E. S. lamp with three-light bulb is an excellent companion. Since it is smaller in scale than the large floor lamp, it blends harmoniously with the size of the piano. And these new fall models of I. E. S. "tagged" lamps are made in such attractive designs that you can have your piano lamp quite in keeping with the style of your room.

YOUR HEALTH

Why do more than 1,000 Pennsylvanians die of appendicitis every year? Because the appendix is allowed to rupture. It is a sad commentary on a progressive nation that the death rate for appendicitis is higher in the United States today than it was 30 years ago.

In the last 30 years as many persons in this country have died from appendicitis as reside in the city of Milwaukee. The unfortunate phase of this great tragedy is that barring rare complications, the death rate from uncomplicated appendicitis when operated upon is almost negligible.

But the death rate for cases of ruptured appendicitis in spite of operation is often as high as 50 per cent. Often this is the result of unfortunate delay.

Parents do not call the doctor soon enough. Delay frequently is based on ignorance or fear. Another chief cause of ruptured appendix is the general use of purgatives and laxatives. Such disturbing medicines agitating an already inflamed and swollen appedix are too often the cause of a ruptured appendix.

Education of the lay public is probably the final answer to the problem. Since 1935 the Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania has constantly warned:

"In the presence of abdominal pain never give a laxative or physic, give nothing by mouth. Call your family doctor. Abdominal pain, cramps, or soreness which lasts for four hours is usually serious."

The tuberculosis sanatorium was primarily as institution for the restoration of the tuberculous patient to health. Such sanatoria however, have functioned as voluntary quarantine stations for the isolation of patients with infective sputum and the decrease in community infection due to these institutions is incalcuable.

Many Win Prizes At Grange Fair

use of a brown paper cornucopia, contrived to show how vocational agriculture combines teaching (theory) and actual practice (project) to form a prosperous agriculture.

Mahlon Bowen attempted to show by small models of hog-lot equipment, how we might leave the hogs raise themselves, with self-feeders, good range and pasture, and clean sanitary houses.

The display was further enhanced by an ingenious hook-up of twenty-five electrical circuits whereby the lights flashed on one after another, showing only one item at a time.

Some of the prizes won by the boys were: Vocational Booth exhibit, Mahlon Bowen, $3; Paul Stitzer, $4; Guy Shaffer, $3.

DROP HEAD

Charles R. Crock and Harry Crock, brothers, and Benjamin Gates, all of Howard R. D., were placed under $500 bail each for December Court by Justice of the Peace Harold D. Cowher, Bellefonte, Friday, when arraigned on a charge of stealing gasoline from the Martin Miller quarry near Jacksonville. Charles Crock obtained bail, but the other two were committed to the county jail.

The trio was arrested as the result of a theft last Tuesday night. Clair Gardner, night watchman at the quarry, discovered the youths taking gasoline and got a brief description of the car as it sped away. He fired two shots after the car, and bullet marks found on underparts of the machine the next day clinched identification. Police learned that the boys borrowed the car from a friend.

Deputy Sheriff James H. Hugg, arrested Charles Crock last Wednesday morning, and the other two were picked up the same day by Privates George A. Panrock and John L. Eisenhooth, of the Rockview substation, State Motor Police. Panrock is the prosecutor in the case. The value of the gasoline taken was placed at $2.

WE BELIEVE

We believe in taking things about as they come. A summer boarder up at the Skinner place went out one day last week and picked a huge bouquet of field flowers. When he gave them to Mrs. Skinner he said: "Know how to arrange a bouquet of wild flowers? You don't arrange them; you take them as they come." Which is a pretty good rule for lots of things.

LETTERS to the Editor

Siegersville, Pa.
August 26, 1940

Editor, Centre Democrat:

Everyone agrees that it is Hitler's arm reserve, not necessarily men that pushes his steamroller. Would he have laid aside arming at a disarmament conference, years ago, if confronted with getting back Germany's former colonies? He would have taken the colonies alright, but about disarming, perhaps. He would have armed secretely, or piled up the colony's rubber, or whatever it had, for more war use. Appeasement, we have seen doesn't work with dictators. It would have been a splendid gesture to have held a world disarmament conference, say in 1932, in which the warring nations today would have laid aside the arms that are now devastating Europe. Individual interests and greed could have been put aside and the wealth of the world divided. Every howitzer and dreadnought could have been scraped; men from standing armies made civilians again and no imperialism and navies to exist.

England has the empire, its true but if it had given Hitler some of these lands before this war, he would have only extended his anti-Semetic, "super Nordic race," and his reign of terror further and persecuted people of better beliefs and religions. He would have gotten more resources and this war would of come anyway. It would of only scattered Nazism to far flung land when what we want to do is to keep it in a small area.

Any sane thinking individual believes that the world's armament expenditures should have been used for boulevards, improvements, canals, and education, something every nation needs, Germany in particular, for after the last war, when Germany's finances faded away in the Berlin to Bagdad dream, and iron crosses were in hock shops and starvation existed, you could have told the wretched people that King Kong caused it, and you could of led them to Africa after him, as Hitler did with his rabble rousing.

Take away tariffs and immigration laws, no restrictions to the world's resources at Jibuti or Suez and who wants to own colonies? Its an expenditure to maintain government, roads, order, health, Bengle Lancers and Viceroys in a colony like India. There's native wars and uprisings to put down and people to aid in time of floods and famine. If you owned a flock of sheep and I could get all the wool and mutton I wanted why would I want to keep them? It's the same way with colonies.

The Fascist Red clique argument in armaments is that they constructed their armies and navies to safeguard the peoples' rights when the people haven't got any. Japan would begin to fuss in the East about the Dutch East Indies but poor China is still struggling thus aiding Britain, something she never did for her—the opium war giving Tiestien to Japan, seizing Hong Kong and closing the Burma Road to Mandalay. That war could have been ended years ago. If you look at a map you'll find that Japan is surrounded by water around which is Russia, America and British possessions. If the governments of these nations had ordered their navies to turn back all war shipping into Japanese waters, Japan would soon be on her knees for the little warlike volcanic island has no resources and what can she do if unified democracies refuse to sell her any? Russia, with pro allies Litvivor then not Molotoff, now who is practically a Fascist would undoubtably have been the first to except the plan (revenge for 1940) if the two others recognized it. A U. S. fleet on the Pacific near Hawaii, a Russion fleet at Vadavostock and a British fleet around Java and Australia, would have practically isolated her and she would of had to withdraw from China, Japan would have committed Hari Kari if it took on the four. The trouble is nations never united toward a common ideal. This plan would have put the Soviet on the side of Britain in this war at present.

The trouble again is that Britain never shed a tear as long as their interests weren't involved. China was a Republic, with a president, so was Spain but she let them crumble in ruins. They practically gave Manchuria to Japan in 32 and in the United States, with the talk of a boycott on Japan since the conflict began, nothing has been done perhaps nothing will be done until Japan conquers all of it, if her resources hold out. Hull was against a scrapiron, oil embargo on Japan while Uncle Don Roper said, "The boycott will get no air from the government and don't expect any." Why? F. D. R. is sympathetic toward China.

Britain is gradually getting rid of her blundering, conservative leaders and they have stopped Germany from getting petroleum through Spain which is neutral and then by oil tankers through France to it. Churchill isn't a bad leader but far from what Lloyd George was.

Very respectfully yours,
LEO ROTELLI

Arthur Wick, 43-year-old Winburne resident, who was found early last Thursday morning along the road near the Winburne grist mill, died Saturday morning in the Philipsburg State Hospital where he had been a patient for two days.
