Remarks of Senator Cameron,

Made in the United States Senate, on Monday May 31st, on the Protective Policy.

MR. CAMERON—I am requested to present a petition signed by a large number of laboring men engaged in the manufacture of iron in Pennsylvania, and dealers in iron and iron ore, daily from persons of this class, and I will say here what will save me the trouble of writing a great many letters. They think the Congress of the United States can relieve them from all their troubles. There never has been a time in the history of the iron business of Pennsylvania, when there was so much real distress among the laboring men of my State—I mean the men who do the work, the men who go to the forge before daylight, and sweat and toil long after the Moon has risen—as at present. It is not a complaint now on the part of Capitalists.—Men of capital, men of fortune, can take care of themselves. Capital can always take care of itself; labor, poverty, indulgence, want, always need sympathy and protection.

These persons reside in the town of Norristown, on the Schuylkill river, 20 miles above Philadelphia. The river Schuylkill is traversed on both sides by a railroad, one extending some 100 miles, another one hundred miles. On one side of the river is a canal. All of these works have been made for the purpose of conveying coal and iron to the place of manufacture and sale. The county of Schuylkill and one of the great coal deposits of Pennsylvania, has a population of some 80,000 or 90,000 people, all of which has grown up within the last 25 years.

At this time the whole population engaged in the iron and coal trade, from Philadelphia to the Mountains of Schuylkill county are entirely idle: the boats are tied up; the locomotives are in a great measure standing still and the laborers are running about hunting employment and hunting food.

There are the persons who complain; they think that congress can relieve them; I have told them and I have written to them that they have the power in their own hands.

The laboring men of this country are powerful for good always. They do control when they think proper, and I think the time is coming when they will control the politics of this country.

I tell them that before they can get proper protection they must change the majority, in this Senate they must change the majority, in the other house of congress, and, above all they must change the occupant of the White House, who is the dispenser of the power which controls the legislation of this country. In place of gentlemen who sneer when we talk about protection, they must send men here who know something of the wants, something of the interests, something of the usefulness of the laboring man. Hitherto they have not acted as they cared for their own interests while they talked about a tariff which could guard their labor from competition with the pauper labor of Europe; they would go to the elections under some ward leader and vote for men to represent them here and elsewhere, who cared only for party drill and who had no interest above party success. This system they must change if they hope for success. I think the laboring men of Pennsylvania at least are now beginning to put their own shoulders to the wheel, and I believe they will make such a noise in next October as will alarm gentlemen all over the country who laugh at them.

The canals, Railroads, and mining operations of this region of country have cost more than a hundred millions of dollars. The furnaces and other works connected with the manufacture of iron has cost many millions more, and the people interested in the iron and coal business directly or indirectly, along the valley of the Schuylkill, amount to more than three hundred thousand souls. Since 1856 there has been a blight upon the business, growing out of the unwise legislation of Congress, which has really protected the iron of England, Russia and Sweden, and thus taken the labor and the bread from our own workmen.

The iron interest of Pennsylvania in which these men are employed, started in 1820 with a production of 20,000 tons. In 1855 when it was up to its greatest extent, the production was a million tons of pig metal. When this pig metal is worked into the various uses in which iron is to be consumed, it amounts to many millions of dollars, in value. The annual produce of coal in Schuylkill county alone, in 1856 amounted in value to some $20,000,000.

When it is known that it requires two tons of coal to make one ton of iron, you can imagine the number of persons who rely for their daily bread on the production of iron and coal. Iron in its native mountains is worth but 50 cents a ton. when it is worked into pig metal it ranges from $20 to $30, and sometimes to $40 a ton; and when worked into the various shapes and qualities it frequently amounts to hundreds of dollars a ton. I have said that these people have the power in their own hands—I am speaking to them now—and I wish them to exercise the power they have. I cannot help them much, as I desire to do so, nor can any of their friends get a majority in Congress; but when they go to work as men determined to succeed should go, I have no doubt they will get protection.

The people in the valley and on the slope of the Schuylkill mountains have votes enough to change and control the politics of the Union—for as Pennsylvania, so goes the Union in all great elections, and their votes can at all times decide the politics of Pennsylvania. Let them exercise the power wisely and honestly and they will no longer be without plenty of work and good prices.

I move that this petition be referred to the Committee on Finance.

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.—There is little ground for the alarm felt in many quarters in regard to the effects of the continued unfavorable weather upon the growing crop of corn.—Seventy-five days of warm sun, with or without occasional showers, will insure an average yield of that great staple in half a dozen of the Western States; and though there is much uneasiness manifested just now, we see no reason to believe that the prospect is hopeless or even discouraging. It is true that much of the seed put in the ground has rotted, and must be planted again; that the corn far South which has struggled to the surface in spite of the rains, is shrivel, yellow and thin in the hill; but it is not too late to replant, and a warm sun will repair all mischief done far done. The seasons in the past which have been wet in the spring—we instance 1844 and 1854—did not fail to yield a good average harvest. There is no reason to believe that 1858 will disappoint the industrious tillers of the soil. The clouds, the rain,
