The First and Last.

[From the Independent.]

"Was your lesson difficult?" kindly enquired a young teacher of a ragged, uncouth looking lad of about ten years, who was one of a class, which had just finished a recitation, giving your lesson difficultly boy?"

The boy thus addressed, raised his large gray eyes with inquiring look, as if to satisfy himself that some breathed in so sweet a tone, were intended for him; but, as he met his teacher's gentle look, they fell and, dropping his head, he forebore to reply. His teacher perceiving that he felt the trouble, and deeming it sufficient, said no more, and dismissed the class. This lad, Johnny by name, was the son of poor parents, drunkards, both of whom were habituated to the use of ardent spirits, and, of course, grossly neglected their children, beating and abusing them, as their excited passions prompted; seldom, and perhaps never let from their lips a word of kindly interest even, much less of love.

Johnny being, of a mischievous temperment, was the recipient of unbounded harshness; but to this disposition he owed the privilege of attendance at the village school, whither he was sent to "be out of the way." This was the first day he had been under the care of the present teacher, whom I will call Miss Almer. Johnny possessed a quick and retentive mind, and, when he chose to apply himself could stand at the head of his class.

But his half-learned lessons came oftener than his perfect ones, and always brought him a severe reprimand, and often a chastisement, which seemed to have no other effect than to harden and debase him. Growing up under such influences at home and at school, he became morose and ill-tempered boy, disliked and shunned by his schoolmates on whom he sought to avenge himself by all the petty annoyances his fertile brain could devise. Such was the lad when he became a pupil of Miss Almer. She had rebuked him for his first error gently, he was her wont, and, trusting to the potency of such reproof, had dismissed him from her mind; but not so easily were the kind words forgotten by the poor boy, to whom so gentle a tone was so rare as to awaken astonishment. It fell among the rude thoughts and feelings of his heart, as a flower among thorns. It was to his ear, that was wont to catch only the harsh tones of unkindness as a strain of sweet melody after a jarring discord. Oh! why do we so often slightly that which costs so little to give, and yet may prove such a treasure to the receiver? But to the story. Miss Almer lingered at the school room till all the pupils had left, and was walking alone homeward, when this, to her trifling event of the day, was brought to her mind by observing Johnny sitting by the roadside, apparently waiting for her. When she came to him, he rose and offered her a nosegay of violets, saying, "Please ma'am will you take these?"

"Certainly Johnny, they are very sweet, and the finest I have seen this season; I love them dearly, and you, too, for bringing them to me."

She had taken the boy's hand in hers, despite its disgusting appearance, and, as she finished speaking, his eyes were lifted to hers with the same expression as in the morning, and a tear was making a furrow through the dirt that begrimmed his face.

"Johnny, what is the matter?" asked his teacher, in surprise.

"Oh you said," faltering uttered the boy.

"Do you love me?"

"Indeed I do," was Miss Almer's reply. "But something must trouble you. Can I do anything for you?"

"Oh, you have done more for me than any one else, for nobody ever loved me before; but I thought you did when you didn't scold me for not getting my lesson. But I'm a dreadful boy, you don't know it all."

"Well, tell me all," answered his teacher, touched by the earnestness of his manner. So saying she led him to a large stone, and bade him sit by her there, and, as he unfolded his tale of wrongs done as well as received, she mingled her tears with his, which flowed freely. They sat long, and ere they parted, she had given rest to his eager heart, by promising ever to be his friend.

The next morning Johnny was missed from his place at school, and at the close of school, Miss Almer called at the rude hut which had been his home, to learn the cause of his absence, and, to her surprise, found it vacated. Whither the people had gone no one knew.

Many years after this (fifteen I think), Miss Almer was visiting far away from this scene of her early labors, and during her visit, attended a meeting for teachers. Remarks were offered and experiences related, by many laborers in the good work of instructing youth, and, at length a gentleman rose and expressed a wish to say a word to the band of teachers, on the power of kindness, and in the course of his remarks, related the story I have given above, closing with these or nearly these words:—

"I am that lad; those were the first words of kindness I remember ever to have had addressed to me. They have been my talisman my guiding star through life. They have made me what I am, and God helping me, it shall be the aim of my life to reward the friend of my youth, in the only way in my power, namely, by precept and example, the influence of the divine principle of love which actuated her."

Miss Almer listened to this recital with an agitated heart, for she recognized in the speaker the little Johnny whom she had never forgotten. She sought an interview, and learned his history. How, after leaving his early home, the love of virtue, which she had roused in his bosom, was ever leading him away from his evil courses, and urging him to a higher life.

Need we say to any teacher who may read this, "Go thou and do likewise?" All may not meet with so speedy a reward as did Miss Almer, but let us remember that the time is not yet, and if we labor faithfully, we may hope that the guerdon shall yet be ours to find that some poor soul has been rescued from degradation by our endeavors, to shine forever, a star in the Saviour's Coronet!

A harsh word will kill where a gentle one will make alive.

THE NEW YORK DAY BOOK says:

"The majority of Hair Washes, Hair Dyes, Hair Tonics, Hair Oils, and the numberless preparations which are now before the public under such attractive, hyperbolical and fantastic titles as we see paraded in show windows and in newspaper headlines, as hair preparations, are all humbugs of the first water, their real merit, when they possess any, is that they do no harm. MOO'S LARD OIL, WALKER'S OILS, SWEET OIL, perfumed and colored, make up, when in beautiful wrappers and with elegant glass bottles, the comliest character of tonics and when these scarcely are baptized with some triphlisic name, and coupled as by perfect young and old of both sexes. Both to test the character of Professor Wood's Hair Restorative. That gentleman comes before the world without any high falutin' Khophlobolos, or any other astounding and startling mid-bounty terms he simply advertises Hair Restorative—that is expresses precisely—and as a Restorative it acts. Buy Professor Wood's Hair Restorative, and keep you value your scalp, eye, your very brains, apply nothing else; for it may be that you will get some worse substance than perfumed lard oil on your cranium. Remember, Wood's Restorative for the Hair is the best article extant."

It Will, by Nature's own Process,

Restore Gray Hair to the Original Color,

Will make Hair Grow on Bald Heads,

Will restore the Natural Secretions,

DR. MOTT'S CHALYBEATE RESTORATIVE PILLS OF IRON.

AN APERIENT AND STOMACHIC Preparation of IRON purified of Oxygen and Carbon by combustion in Hydrogen, recommended by the highest Medical Authorities, both in Europe and the United States, and prescribed in their practice.

The experience of thousands daily proves that no preparation of iron can be compared with it. Impurities of the blood, depression of vital energy, pale and otherwise sickly complexions indicate its necessity in almost every conceivable case. Innumerable are the instances in which it has been tried, it has proved absolutely curative in each of the following complaints, viz:

Debility, Nervous Affections, Emaciation, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Dizziness, Dysentery, incipient Consumption, Scrofulous Tubercles, Salt Rheum, Amenorrhœa, Menstruation, Whites, Chlorosis, Liver Complaints, Chronic Headaches, Rheumatism, Intermittent Fevers, Pimples on the Face, &c.

In cases of General Debility, whether the result of acute disease or of the continued diminution of nervous and muscular energy from chronic complaints, one trial of this restorative has proved successful to an extent which no degree of paper written attestation would render credible. Invalids so long bed-ridden as to have become forgotten in their own neighborhoods, have suddenly reappeared in the busy world as if just returned from protracted travels in a distant land. Some very signal instances of this kind are attested of females suffering, emaciated victims of apparent marasmus, sanguineous exhaustion, critical changes, and that complication of nervous and dyspeptic aversion to air and exercise for which the physician has no name.

In Nervous Affections of all kinds, and for reasons familiar to medical men, the operation of this preparation of iron must necessarily be salutary, for, unlike the old oxides, it is vigorously tonic, without being exciting and overbearing; and gently, regularly aperient, even in the most obstinate cases of costiveness, without ever being a gastric purgative, or inflicting a disagreeable sensation.

It is little latter property, among others, which makes it so remarkably effectual and permanent a remedy for Piles, upon which it also appears to exert a distinct and specific action, by dispersing the local tendency which forms them.

In Dyspepsia, innumerable as are its causes, a single box of these Chalybeate Pills has often sufficed for the most habitual cases, including the attendant dizziness.

In unchecked Diarrhœa, even when advanced to Dysentery, confirmed, exacting, and apparently malignant, the effects have been equally decisive and astonishing.

In the local pains, loss of flesh and strength, debilitating cough, and remittent hectic, which generally indicate incipient Consumption, this remedy has allayed the alarm of friends and physicians, in several very gratifying and interesting instances.

In Scrofulous Tuberculosis, this medicated iron has had far more than the good effect of the most carefully balanced preparations of Iodine, without any of their well known liabilities.

The attention of families cannot be too confidently invited to this remedy and restorative, to the cases peculiarly affecting them.

In Rheumatism, both chronic and inflammatory—in the latter, however, more decidedly—it has been invariably well reported, both as alleviating pain and reducing the swellings and stiffness of the joints and muscles.

In Intermittent Fevers it must necessarily be a great remedy and energetic restorative, and its progress in the new settlements of the West, will probably be one of high renown and usefulness.

No remedy has ever been discovered in the whole list of medicine, which so much promotes happy, and fulfils restorative effects. Good appetite, complete digestion, rapid acquisition of strength, with an unusual disposition for active and cheerful exercise, immediately follow its use.

Put up in neat flat metal boxes containing 50 pills, price 50 cents per box; for sale by Druggists and dealers. Will be sent free to any address on receipt of price. All letters, orders, etc., should be addressed to
