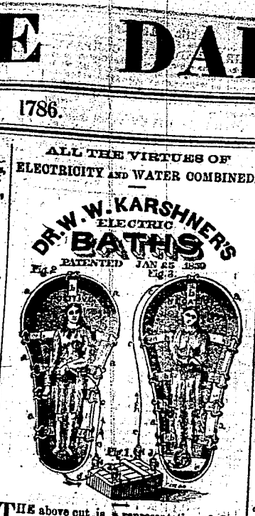
ALL THE VIRTUES OF ELECTRICITY AND WATER COMBINED.

DR. W. W. KARSHNER'S ELECTRIC BATHS PATENTED JAN 25 1859



THE above cut is a representation of DR. KARSHNER'S POSITIVE AND NEGATIVE ELECTRO-THERAPEUTIC BATHS, for which he has obtained Three Baths have been in successful operation for the last two years, in many of our principal towns and cities, during which time hundreds of patients have tested their astonishing powers with signal success. Dr. K. challenges the entire medical world to produce any one system or combined set of systems, that will cure as many diseases, and in as short a time, as his Electric Baths alone, when rightly administered. The scientific minds of all professions are cordially invited to call, examine and test for themselves.
The duration of each Bath, the temperature of the water, and the strength of the electric current, are varied according to the disease, the condition of the patient at the time, and the effects desired. The water is about blood heat, and the electricity so graduated as to produce nothing but pleasurable sensations.
There is no class of Diseases, either Acute or Chronic, to which they are not adapted, which do not yield at once to their all-pervading and health-restoring influence. The aged and feeble have been led, voluntarily, to testify that they felt many years younger, and slept better than they had done for years. Others have been cured of painful diseases in a few Baths.
Nor do their healthful effects seem to be confined solely to the physical man; they have an equally happy influence upon the mental faculties, making them a most efficient means in the treatment of Insanity and all abnormal mental conditions.
Among the diseases successfully treated by Dr K's Baths are Incipient Consumption, Scrofula, Paralysis, Epilepsy (Fits,) Insanity, Delirium Tremens, St. Vitus' Dance, Curvature of the Spine, Rheumatism, Nervous Diseases, Weak Back and Joints, Nervousness, Nervous Headache, Asthma, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Weak Eyes, Partial Deafness, Dyspepsia, Gravel and other Urinary and Genital Derangements, Fever, Fever and Ague, etc. etc.
These Baths are in successful operation at

The Italian Question.

[From the Times.]

The fate of Italy for the present, and no one can presume to say for how long, depends upon the answer which will be given to a very simple question. What are the ultimate intentions of Garibaldi and of the party of which he is the leader? We know where they begin; we want to know where they intend to stop. If we could get an answer to this question, it would not be difficult to cast the horoscope of the Italian peninsula. There are four powers whose opinions will have more or less weight in deciding the future destiny of Italy. France, Austria, Sardinia, and the revolutionary movement as represented by Garibaldi, all assert their claim to be considered, and all can, in some degree, influence the momentous result. The notion of an Italian federation with the pope at its head, which played so considerable a part in the treaty of Villafranca, seems to be finally and definitely abandoned. From the time that a single state had obtained possession of all Northern Italy and of the Legations, from the time that the great powers suffered those Legations to cast off the yoke of the pope, and abstract from him one-third of his temporal dominions, and from the time that it became evident that the feud between the Bourbons of Naples and their people was irreconcilable, all prospects of an Italian federation, based on an order of things which belonged so entirely to the past, was swept away. Italy gained this at least—that the destinies of one part were more closely united with the destinies of the others than before, and that the whole country, even though it had not attained perfect unity, seemed likely to stand or perish together. It was quite clear that there was within Italy itself no power strong enough to enforce the establishment of a federal system, and that if left to herself the tendency of the whole peninsula would be to fall under a single government. How earnest Austria was for peace, and how little disposed, for the moment at least, to interfere in the internal affairs of those parts of Italy which did not belong to her, she had shown by the treaty of Villafranca, and still more clearly by her assent at Zurich to modifications of that treaty, designed expressly to revoke the protection promised, in the first instance, to the rulers of Parma, of Modena, and of Tuscany. It seemed, at that time at least, tolerably clear that Austria had resigned any attempt to interfere with the government of Italy beyond the frontiers of Venetia, and that she was prepared to witness, with real or affected indifference, the revolution of states now so remotely connected with her. Sardinia, on the other hand, had everything to gain from a course of annexation; provided that this annexation be so conducted as to give Austria no just cause for future apprehension, and to respect whatever portion of the Roman territory France might choose as the seat of her occupation. In the interests of Austria and Piedmont there did not appear, therefore to be anything irreconcilable. The positions were clear and well defined, and there seemed no reason to apprehend that they would depart from them.

The position of France was a great deal more complicated, owing mainly to the tortuous nature of the policy she had pursued. With what precise motives the French emperor took up arms to liberate Italy it is not very easy to divine. Whatever those motives were, we do not think that they included among them the first and most obvious result of his policy—a change in the balance of power in Europe. By the state of things which existed before the late war, Italy was indeed reduced to a geographical expression. Austria had enough power to prevent the princes of Italy from exercising influence of the affairs of Europe, and those princes retained enough independence to prevent them from adding materially to the strength of the Austrian empire. But united under a single head they form a state of considerable influence, and one that cannot be neglected in the estimates of European power. Victor Emanuel has now twelve millions of subjects, and should Naples be added to his dominions will have at least twenty millions. France naturally has no wish to raise up such a state close beside her, but then she does not desire to undo her own work. The emperor wishes to humble the pope, but a respect for the opinion and the religion of his people does not permit the Emperor to destroy him. These things give his policy the appearance, and often the reality of vacillation. But we do not, perhaps, be wrong in assuming that, so long as no other power intervenes, France will be content to allow the drama of Italian liberation to be played out by Italian hands. Meanwhile, Austria and Prussia have met at Teplitz, and have resolved that, so long as Venetia remains untouched, they will abstain from intervention in Italian affairs; but that, should any attack be made on this remaining province of Austria, they will make common cause in her defence. What, then, are the prospects of Garibaldi and the revolution which he personifies? From the subordinate position of a partisan leader, clearing the front of the French and beating up the quarters of the Austrians, he has raised himself by his gallantry and enterprise to a position in which he may fairly be ranked among those influences which dispose of the destiny of that country which he has loved so well and served so truly. He is fettered by no treaty obligations, by no dynastic traditions. The nature of his position relieves him from the necessity of following anything except the dictates of his own judgement and the suggestions of his own genius. Kings and emperors are small indeed beside a man who, with nothing to rely on but his name, his intelligence, and his courage, has found means to raise himself to a position which places in his hands, as we can easily show, the future destinies of Italy. We know not what are Garibaldi's intentions, but, if we are to judge of them from what reaches us, we regard them with more apprehension than hope. He is said to view the conquest of Sicily only as a stepping-stone to the conquest of Naples, and the united force of Sicily and Naples as a means of working out the deliverance of the patrimony of St. Peter, if not of Rome itself, from the sovereignty of the pope. Thus lord of southern Italy, he purposes, it is said, to attack the Austrian empire, probably by creating a revolutionary movement in Hungary, and never to sheathe his sword till Italy, including the province of Venetia, shall acknowledge the single sceptre of Victor Emanuel.

If this plan has much of the daring, it has also much of the extravagance, of genius. For ourselves, we have not the slightest objection that Garibaldi should advance as far as he can go, encountering merely Italian opposition. If he shall overthrow the Kingdom of Naples, he will deliver one of the finest portions of the earth from a cruel and hypocritical tyranny. If he shall wrest the patrimony of St. Peter from the pope, he will free a people possessed of many noble qualities, from the yoke of a degrading theocracy. If the people thus delivered choose to aggregate themselves to the subjects of Victor Emanuel, we can have nothing to say against it, except that we fear they are creating a power out of such discordant elements, that it must rely for unity on the overpowering strength of its executive, and forego all hopes of a representative government, according to our sense of the world. These things Garibaldi may do, in all probability, without drawing down upon himself the armed interference of France or of Austria. Let him draw the line here, and he may reasonably hope to leave to posterity a name that will rank with Epaminondas or Aristides in ancient, with Tell or Washington in modern story. Let him go beyond this, and he will be brought at once into collision with the resources, the discipline, and the valor of an army, before which his raw and tumultuary forces will vanish like an exhalation. The stake is not equal. If Austria is to net Venetia on one side, and Garibaldi and all the rest of Italy on the other, success would add something to his laurels, but failure would be absolute destruction. Unless Garibaldi shall be able to storm those formidable fortresses before which the emperor of the French at the head of his victorious legions recoiled, he will find himself, even if assisted openly and with all his force by the King of Piedmont, driven gradually back, stripped of town after town and province after province, till nothing be left of the great monument of Italian liberty except the glory of its rise and the disgrace of its extinction.

POPULATION OF THE THREE GREAT COUNTRIES OF THE WORLD.—The population of Great Britain (England, Wales, Scotland, and Ireland,) by the census of 1858 was 28,664,862, and that of France by the census of 1858 was 36,205,702. The United States numbered 23,191,876 by the census of 1850, and the estimates of the present census, now in progress, range from thirty to thirty-three millions. In population, therefore, the three countries do not very widely differ.

THE Montgomery (Ala) Mail publishes this: "Hanging in Talladega—The Night Move at Last. —We learn through a gentleman just from the country, that on Tuesday night last (28th August) the citizens of Talladega took from the jail at that place a white man who was the ringleader in the lately discovered plot among the negroes of that vicinity, and hanged him. Yesterday morning he was gracefully pendant to a Pride of China tree. He did not learn his name."

What Popular Sovereignty Has Done.

READ!! READ!! READ!!

The following is an extract from Mr. Douglas' last great speech in the Senate, in which he magnifies the triumphs of Popular Sovereignty for the cause of Slavery. This speech was made with a view of coaxing the Southerners into supporting him for President at the then approaching Charleston Convention. While it failed of its object at the South, it has had the effect to open the eyes of Northern Democrats as to the real bearing of "non-intervention" in reference to Slavery. This speech ought to be read by every Free Laborer and every citizen of the Free States:

From Douglas' speech in the Senate, May 16, 1860.

"But, we are told the necessary result of this doctrine of non-intervention, which gentlemen, by way of throwing ridicule upon, call popular sovereignty, is to deprive the South of all participation in what they call the common Territories of the United States. That was the ground on which the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Davis] predicated his opposition to the Compromise Measure of 1850. He regarded a refusal to repeal the Mexican law as equivalent to the Wilmot Proviso; a refusal to deny to a Territorial Legislature the right to exclude slavery as equivalent to an exclusion. He believed at that time that this doctrine did amount to a denial of Southern rights, but they doubted it. Now let me see how far his predictions and suppositions have been verified. I infer that he told the people so, for he makes it a charge in his bill of indictment against me, that I am hostile to Southern rights, because I gave those votes.

Now, what has been the result? My views were incorporated into the Compromise Measures of 1850, and his were rejected. Has the South been excluded from all the Territory acquired from Mexico? What says the bill from the House of Representatives now on your table, repealing the slave code in New Mexico established by the people themselves? It is a part of the history of the country that under this doctrine of non intervention, this doctrine that you delight to call squatter sovereignty, the people of New Mexico have INTRODUCED and PROTECTED Slavery in the WHOLE OF THAT TERRITORY more than FIVE TIMES THE SIZE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK. Under this doctrine, Slavery has been extended from the Rio Grande to the Gulf of California and from the 32° of the Republic of Mexico, not only up to 36° 30', but up to 38°—giving you a degree and a half more Slave territory than you ever claimed. In 1848 and 1849 and 1850 you only asked to have the line of 36° 30'. The Nashville Convention fixed that as its ultimatum. I offered it in the Senate in August, 1848, and it was adopted here but rejected in the House of Representatives. YOU ASKED ONLY UP TO 36° 30', AND NON-INTERVENTION HAS GIVEN YOU SLAVE TERRITORY UP TO 38°, a DEGREE AND A HALF MORE THAN YOU ASKED; and yet you say that THIS IS A SACRIFICE OF SOUTHERN RIGHTS?

These are the fruits of THIS PRINCIPLE which the Senator from Mississippi regards as HOSTILE TO THE RIGHTS OF THE SOUTH. Where did you ever get any other fruits that were more palatable to your tastes or more refreshing to your strength? WHAT OTHER INCH OF FREE TERRITORY HAS BEEN CONVERTED INTO SLAVE TERRITORY OF THE AMERICAN CONTINENT, SINCE THE REVOLUTION, EXCEPT IN NEW MEXICO AND ARIZONIA, UNDER THE PRINCIPLE OF NON-INTERVENTION affirmed at Charleston. If it be true that this principle of non-intervention has conferred upon you all that immense Territory; PROTECTED SLAVERY in that comparatively Northern and cold region, where you did not expect to go, CANNOT YOU TRUST THE SAME PRINCIPLE FURTHER SOUTH WHEN YOU COME TO ACQUIRE ADDITIONAL TERRITORY FROM MEXICO? It is true this principal of non-intervention has given to Slavery all New Mexico, which was surrounded on nearly every side by Free Territory, will not the same principle protect you in the Northern States of Mexico when they are acquired, since they are now surrounded by Slave Territory; are several hundred miles further South; have many degrees of greater heat, and have climate and soil adapted to Southern products? ARE YOU NOT SAT
