Old-Time Hunter Describes Encounters

panther switching his long tail about 50 yards distance. I had a 10-gauge shotgun, loaded with buck-shot. I twisted around and fired both barrels at once. The giant cat gave a scream, fell over on his side and licked his side. There had been a forest fire early that spring and the bracken was up about a foot high.

"Kesling passed me his double-barreled rifle. By this time the panther had gotten behind a tree. After waiting three or four minutes, I saw the bracken shaking about 75 yards further. I shot one shot then got down off the tree. Kesling would not let me go to see until he put the load in his gun of the muzzle-loading type. When we went out we found some blood and fur, but the big cat had moved on. Kesling told me to go home and get the dogs.

"It was getting dark by this time. I went after my dogs about three miles. My father was home, so he came with me. Kesling had gone back up the tree to his seat in the fork. The dogs, very good hunters, would not take the track, staying right at my feet. The next day I hunted for the panther, but never found it. Saw blood, but the dogs would not assist me as they were frightened.

"Getting back to Sam Askey's record, Centre county will bear record to paying bounties for game. My grandfather, David Lucas, killed several panthers, never heard him say how many. He was born on the Humes tract, two miles east of Snow Shoe in 1801. He also was a very successful deer hunter. I do some hunting, shot my first deer with an old muzzle-loader at the age of thirteen.

"When I became fifteen years old my father bought me a 44 Winchester. I killed seven deer that fall, used dogs. I killed a fine six-pointer the first day of this season, 1942, making 48 deer I have killed in 58 years. Not a bad record I think."

As to the appearance of the Pennsylvania lion, when viewed at close quarters, the late Jacob W. Zimmerman, of the Zimmerman Hospice on the White Deer Mountains, who encountered a panther standing across the pipe line in Union county, 1889, thus pictures the monster.

"It had a majestic look, head on a strong neck, held erect, dark eyes cruel and crafty, calculated to strike terror to 99 out of any hundred full-grown men. Its body and tail were so long that it seemed to span the entire width of the Tidewater right of way. Evidently it was watching a 'deer crossing' when I approached, and after giving me one look I appeared to lean and rangy to suit his royal appetite, gave his tail an angry switch and walked off into the Yellow Pine forest."

Forest Products Marketing Service

A Forest Products Marketing service has been inaugurated in Clearfield and Centre Counties. This project is being administered by the Pennsylvania Department of Forests and Waters. Headquarters have been established in the office of the District Forester, which is located in the Keystone Building, Clearfield.

A larger quantity of all forest products is needed by industry than was required during normal times. Much of the critical woods products needed during the present emergency must come from the farm wood lots.

Many owners of small acreages of woodland are not familiar with marketing practices and value of forest products. This service will provide woodland owners with information concerning timber markets and values, estimates of standing timber, and will assist them in negotiating sales contracts with timber operators. The woodland owners will also be given assistance in promoting cutting practices which should be followed, so that the productivity of the woodlands will not be destroyed.

J. C. Middour, a forester formerly associated with the Pennsylvania Department of Forests and Waters is in charge of this marketing service and is available to assist woodland owners of Clearfield and Centre Counties in marketing forest products. Woodland owners, who have timber which they desire to market, should communicate with him at the above address.

PENN STATE TESTS SHOW HOW TO SAVE MORE FUEL

More power in the tractor from fuel is reported in a new bulletin of the Pennsylvania State College agricultural experiment station entitled "Using the Tractor Efficiently."

A. W. Clyde, professor of agricultural engineering and author of the bulletin, shows how it is possible for many farmers to perform light tasks with one-third less fuel through careful adjustment of the carburetor and operation of the tractor.

Other subjects covered in the bulletin include tractive efficiency, hitches and hitching, and care of air tires. Inspection and careful checking of tractor equipment at regular intervals, such as has been adopted by bus, truck, and air transport companies, is highly recommended to farmers and other tractor operators.

ANOTHER NAVAL UNIT ARRIVES AT COLLEGE

Sixty-four naval officers have arrived at the Pennsylvania State College for specialized training in Diesel engines. The group is the tenth trained at Penn State in the past two years.

Only four other colleges in the country are conducting the naval Diesel engineering programs for the government. The new group at Penn State will stay at the College four months, completing its work on July 8, according to Professor Harold A. Everett, head of the department of mechanical engineering.

Lieutenant Commander John H. Smith, USN (retired), is in charge of the Diesel units.

Health and Beauty

"Think that day lost whose low, descending sun
Views from thy hand no worthy action done."

The above quotation is from an old album in the British Museum.

Years ago in a Chatauqua tent, I was struggling with a heavy chair, preparatory to leaving, when a bright lad stepped up and relieved me of the task by doing it expertly himself. I thanked him at the same time holding out a tip.

"O, no, Ma'm," said the boy cheerfully, "I'm a Scout, and I must do my daily deeds of kindness." Then I looked around and saw that the Scouts were busy all over the tent engaged in helpfulness to others. No wonder their faces shone and they were happy in their tasks. It is noble training.

Since that day many of these boys have gone out into life, but wherever they are, they are gallant knights, doing acts of kindness and helpfulness without a thought of reward. What a difference in character such early training makes.

Selfish and self-seeking people are utterly disgusting to others. They are so obessed with themselves that they have no thought of others, unless it concerns their own advancement or gratification in some way.

Selfish people are not aware of what they are doing to themselves and to their own faces. Do you remember Oscar Wilde's story of Dorian Grey, and what happened to him finally, when the whole story of his evil life marred and ruined his once beautiful countenance?

Attention, you who have been frittering away your time, absorbing yourselves in the frivolous things of life, seeing which one could outdress the others, spending time uselessly on your clothes and make up. Wake up! Don't you know that the world is on fire? Get to work and do useful things that will help somebody besides yourself.

Stop grumbling. What does it matter if you can't ride everywhere? Walking is good for your health and will develop your body. You and your children are better off without so many sweets, and yet there are women who carry on over their inability to get a pound of coffee or sugar, as though it were a matter of life and death.

Our men are dying in the stink holes of the far Pacific for us, and how dare any one here grumble about rationing.

Do you want real beauty? Then it must come from within, from genuine goodness, kindness, and unselfishness. Life will etch what you are on your face.

Do you want to attract people to you? Then get interested in people, look for their virtues, for their good points. You can learn from most of them something worth while.

The best cosmetic in the world comes from within, from kind and noble thoughts which lead to kind and helpful deeds. That is the beauty that grows with the years.

PENN STATE HOLSTEIN HERD WINS HIGH PLACE

The Pennsylvania State College herd of 28 Holstein-Friesian dairy cows was first in its class in America in the production of milk and butterfat for 1942. Milked partly four times and partly three times daily, these cows produced the high average for the past year of 15,116 pounds of milk and 549.6 pounds of butterfat.

Careful culling of the poorer cows, liberal feeding of a balanced ration, and good breeding constitute the basis of the success of these cows, said P. D. Jones, who has managed this outstanding herd for 27 years. The sires represent leading Holstein families.

Several other enviable records have been made by the College Holstein herd recently. Last year it was third high American herd in the 31-to-50 cow class milked partly four and partly three times daily, and was second high in the same class two years ago with an average production of 494 pounds of butterfat.

One of these cows, Penstate Veeman Josie, has just completed a lifetime production record of 118,390 pounds of milk containing 5614 pounds of fat. Penstate Anna Star, a senior 3-year-old in the College herd, is the new Pennsylvania champion milk and fat producer for her age. In the yearly division on four times a day milking, she produced 21,938 pounds of milk containing 845.9 pounds of fat.

Relief Payments Lower

State Treasurer G. Harold Wagner reported that direct relief payments mad to needy residents of Centre county during the past week totaled $583.90. Last week payments totaled $601.

Most people are optimistic when they consider their own good points.

Grass Fire at College

Wind-fanned flames from a burning rubbage heap in back of the E. W. Schroeder home in Nittany Village, burned over a stubble-covered field about 3 p. m. last Thursday. Brush on the field flared up at once, but the fire was confined to the limits of the field by members of the Alpha Fire Company of State College who answered the alarm. No damage resulted.
