Forgeries at Cincinnati and Louisville.

The Cincinnati Gazette says: A month ago a young man called at the pork house of Messrs. Evans, Lippincott & Newton, and exhibited a letter from some man in Indiana, introducing him to Aeposit $20 to their credit. He was shrewd enough to call at dinner time, when the responsible members were absent. After some hesitancy the person in charge of the business took the money and gave a receipt for it. After a few weeks he went back to the pork house, and said his friends had gone to New York, and had instructed him to draw the money and send to them. Of course they gave him a check—just what he wanted. This check he presented to Evans & Co., the bankers of that establishment. He requested the bank to certify the check, but this was respectfully declined, and the money was paid. These movements aroused the suspicions of Messrs. Evans & Co., and also induced the members of the pork firm to adopt the precaution of marking out their checks payable to order, and they instructed the paying teller at the bank not to pay any check of theirs made payable to bearer. But in one instance they forgot, and gave a check payable to bearer, which was paid.

Under this state of affairs, when about two o'clock yesterday, a check was presented at Evans & Co.'s bank, by a stranger, for $1,400, from Messrs. Evans, Lippincott & Newton, payable to bearer, there was some hesitancy about paying it. The matter was referred to Mr. Hughes, one of the firm, who looked up a genuine check and compared it with the one just presented. The signature was very beautiful, but the cancelling check on the revenue stamp excited suspicion, and Mr. Hughes politely asked the young man to walk up to the pork house with him. This the fellow actually complied with, perhaps because he thought he could hardly help himself. There it was at once ascertained the check was a forgery, and the ingenious clasp was turned over to policeman, who soon placed him in Hammond Street Station House.

About the same hour of the day a similar transaction took place at the Commercial Bank. A young man presented a check for $1,600, signed by "Steele & Co.," another pork packing house. Suspicions were aroused here also, and while the question of payment was being considered, the fellow slipped out, but he, too, was given, and a officer was round on Fourth and down Hammond street he was arrested on Lower Market. The names of these swindlers are J. R. Tyrrel and Johnson.

It was reported last night that some Third Street bank had paid out yesterday $3,200 on a forged check, and it was thought other parties had been operating with those arrested. Business men would do well to have their bank accounts examined, to see who have been losers by the rascals.

The Louisville Democrat says: About noon on the 8th inst., a gentlemanly-looking individual stepped into the Peoples' Bank, on Main street, and presented the cashier, Mr. Huber, a check for six thousand six hundred and twenty dollars, purporting to have been drawn by the well known house of Mitchell & Armstrong, Provision Dealers on Main street. The check was received, cancelled and about to be paid, but, owing to the large amount for which it was drawn Mr. Huber took another glance at it, and noticing that the filling up of the check was a strange handwriting, his suspicions were aroused that all was not right, and he examined the deposit account of Messrs. Mitchell & Armstrong, and found that did not have that amount on deposit which went far to confirm his suspicions. He made some pretext for having to go to the back part the building, and he dispatched a clerk to Mitchell & Armstrong to inform in regard to the check. Mr. Huber politely requested the gentleman to take a seat, which he did as coolly as if all was right. After waiting a few minutes, the man rose, and that he would himself go to Mitchell & Armstrong's, having suspicioned that he himself was suspicioned, kind in this manner he made his escape. The young man who was sent to Mitchell & Armstrong's to inquire about the check, returned in a short time, saying that the check was a forgery.

A Romantic Murder Trial—Affecting Scene in Court—The Prisoner Released.

Some weeks since we noticed the fact of the finding of a human skeleton in the woods, about two miles east of Hingham, by Mr. Benjamin Williams, and of the verdict of the jury of inquiry, designating the skeleton as the remains of a young man by the name of Henry Harbert, and implicating David Williams, a son of Benjamin Williams, as the murderer. The circumstances surrounding the case were strongly against the accused, as the missing young man was last seen in his community, about a year ago, in company with Williams, at which way to enlist for the army as a substitute.

The young man, after an absence of a few weeks, returned home alleging that his comrade, Henry Mahorn, had epidemic in the Tenth Regiment, Missouri Infantry. This appeared plausible at the time, and Henry Mahorn was almost entirely forgotten by our citizens, until the finding of the skeleton in the woods. The suspicions of our citizens were at once aroused, from the fact that the clothing was identified as the same worn by Mahorn when last seen—their suspicions that he had been foully murdered were intensified by learning that the young man, living in Tennessee, had never heard from him from the time he left Fort Leavenworth in company with Williams, to join the army, although diligent inquiry had been made to ascertain, if possible, his whereabouts.

The supposed murderer was immediately arrested upon the rendering of the verdict of the jury of inquest, and lodged in the county jail to await trial. On Monday, the 5th instant, the prisoner was brought into court, before Judge Duff, on the writ of habeas corpus. The court proceeded with the trial. The circumstances, as revealed by the evidence, pointed directly to the prisoner as the murderer of Mahorn, as the clothing found was identified as his; and that certain teeth, which he was known to have had extracted in his lifetime, were the identical ones that were found wanting in the jaws of a skeleton.

In fact, the circumstances pointing to the guilt of the accused, were so strong that nine-tenths of the citizens of this community were fully satisfied of his guilt.

In the midst of this trial, imagine the utter astonishment of the court, counsel, witnesses, the eager and excited spectators, as well as the overwhelming joy of the prisoner in the dock, by the sudden appearance of Henry Mahorn, in propria persona, in the court-room, in full vigor of life, hale and hearty, giving the most unmistakable evidence that he had not been murdered, and that the accused was innocent of the heinous crime with which he was charged. The prisoner was so overcome with joy at this unexpected and apparently providential deliverance from the suspicious circumstances that surrounded him, that he wept like a child. The Judge at once ordered the release of the accused.

It seems that Mahorn had joined the army under an assumed name, and in consequence was unable to hold correspondence with his friends; and being discharged but a few days previous to the trial of the young man Williams, as his murderer, he fortunately arrived in Benton the very day the trial commenced.

This case should serve as a lesson to juries to be slow in convicting on purely circumstantial evidence. It would be more in accordance with the dictates of humanity that elective county officers should escape the punishment of the law, than that one innocent person should suffer ignominious death.

This singularly romantic case, which appears more like fiction than reality, has produced a profound sensation in this community, for the almost universal opinion was, that the accused was guilty. Indeed we think had not Mahorn returned, or been accounted for, that it would have been very doubtful whether a jury could have acquitted him, in view of the strong circumstances pointed to his guilt.—Benton (Ill.) Standard.

Love vs. Money—A Runaway Wife is Pursued from Cincinnati to Memphis and Caught.

On Tuesday last, a young man from this city arrived in Memphis in pursuit of his wife, who, it appears, had abandoned his home and, "Sweet" and fled with a river man to the city on the First Chickasaw Bluff, taking with her $2,000 which grieved her husband more to part with than his faithless spouse.

The young man gave his name as George English, and awoke the sympathy of as many people there as did Shylock when he bemoaned the loss of his daughter and his ducats. The bereaved Benedict watched the streets, hotels and theater with lynx eyes, and at last espied the faithless one leaning lovingly on the arm of the gay and jocund son of Neptune, who, strange to relate, did not behink him of using his Briton on the infuriated husband as he rushed frantically up Main street to seize him by the throat. He only, in fact, bethought him of his legs, which he used to such advantage as placed several squares between him and the man he had wronged.

Meantime Madam stormed, screeched, bit and threatened, but the spoils were at stake, and she must go to prison or disgorge. That was the ultimatum; and finding no help for it, she was obliged to go to her boarding house, and draw from between the bed-ticks, where it was reposing in crispy critters, the wallet containing those comfortable $700. The wrath of the injured husband subsided the moment his hand clutched the package, and smiling sardonically, he politely bade the lady a very good day, and wished her much joy in her new-found love. The foolish woman is said to be quite good-looking, and hails from Cleveland, Ohio, where her friends and relatives reside.—Cin. Com.

The Nashville Press says: "Reliable and intelligent persons from Robertson county, Tenn., give a deplorable account of affairs there. Some two months or more since, Thomas Paine, an old and respectable Union man, living a few miles from Mitchellsville, who had been hiding for many months from his reconstructed neighbors, was hunted up in one of his fields by a rebel named Foster, and shot down in cold blood, and again shot when he was dying. On last Friday, Feb. 2, an old and inoffensive Union man, a Mr. Smith, was found dead in one of his out-houses, shot twice, once through the head. His only offence was loyalty to his country. Our informant had heard of two other cases of Union men being found dead from violence, but could not give particulars."

A Runaway Match and a Deserted Husband.

A very amusing scene occurred on Front street, on Saturday morning last, which, to the uninitiated, had rather a mysterious appearance. A man was seen suddenly to seize a woman, jump into a cutter, and, amid screaming and resistance, attempted to drive off with her, when she was gallantly rescued from the detaining arms and foot by a number of men, headed by a young disciple of Blackstone, who seized and liberated her without a suit of habeas corpus. The facts, suppressing the name, are briefly these. Along come mouths ago a gay and festive widow became desperately smitten with a blooming damsel, and, he pouring her compared fuel then, the torch of hymen was applied, and sweet runaway match. The wrathful "pa" found out about the escapade, and after four hours wedded bliss, the wife was torn from the arms of the father-in-law, and he would not come down with the dust when he "shook off this mortal coil," but would endeavor to dodge a sibling. After fruitless efforts to gain possession of his lost treasure, on Saturday last the disconsolate husband met her on Front street, seized her and jumped into his cutter, and endeavored to hurl her down stocking his foot through her grandfather's gaunt possession of one cutin, and, notwithstanding the house was a 2d story, what could be expected from a man with such a drawback. With the screaming of the woman, accompanied with a jangle of the bells, he progressed slowly through the streets, as if he had business on hand, and finally the appeal was, "Men, will you see a woman abused?" brought a response to the fair one's side. Her piercing "pieces of" I want to go home to my Pa," had no effect upon the obdurate heart of her late lord and master, who claimed her body as his own. We believe the matter will be the subject of an action in law, and we suppose the gallant young lawyer will have the case to conduct, at least he ought to. The deserted husband is certainly to have her yet, but in these matters it takes two to make a bargain.

A Faithless Husband.

They have been having a nice little sensation in our neighboring town of Oxford, caused by the cruel desertion of a young wife by her heartless and unfaithful spouse. We learn that a couple of weeks ago a returned soldier, named George W. Watson, hailing from Peoria, Illinois, came to Oxford, bringing with him a young and beautiful wife, a married lady, from Tennessee. The pair put up at the Girard House, of that town, and after remaining there a day or two, the husband, without notifying his wife of his intentions, boarded the cars and decamped for parts unknown, leaving his hotel bill unpaid, and taking all the money they possessed, as well as the wife's wearing apparel, leaving her in a destitute circumstances. Alone and unprotected, she was exposed to suspicion and insult. In her hour of sore trouble the redeemer came in the shape of her money with which she would be enabled to return home, if she would prove repentant to herself. But true to her noble womanhood she spurned his offers, and preferred to die on the streets of cold and starvation rather than purchase the means of living at such a price. Being driven by the cruel husband to seek shelter elsewhere, she was found by sympathizing friends who furnished her with means sufficient to reach her fathers home at London, East Tennessee. She has since reached home and written to her kind friends in Oxford. Her husband has not been heard from since, though it is hoped that justice may overtake the scoundrel.

As the great charity ball in New York coachmen were not allowed to take house the party which they brought, but were compelled to fall into line and take whoever offered at one dollar for each passenger, no matter who was the distance. "Short fares" were consequently in demand, the drivers, greatly against his will, was obliged to take in two ladies and a gentleman for sixty-second street. The shrewd "Hackey" asked the soldier on duty for the carriage, followed it up the street, and called in a loud tone, "Hi there, old cap! Jim, what did you do with them smallpox cases you had last night?" Before the driver answered, a lady's head was thrust out of one of the carriage doors; the driver stopped, to ascertain what was wanted, in half a minute the ladies were in the street; in another half minute the driver had his three dollars and was ready to take his place in the line of carriages to wait for other passengers.

The Fort Smith New Era announces the capture of three Union men in Texas, and the death of a fourth. Mr. J. H. Rudolph, formerly a citizen of Iowa, where he enlisted as a soldier in the 18th Regiment of Iowa Infantry, and served three years, married last summer in this place, and in September last moved and settled in Lamar county, Texas. He returned from a few days absence, and reports that on the 9th of last month, three of his neighbors, who were citizens of Texas before the war, and who died to Fort Smith as refugees, some two years ago, and enlisted in the second Kansas Cavalry, and after they were mustered out of the service returned home, while engaged in splitting rails, were attacked by seven rebels and all three of the men killed on the spot. Mr. Lesbel had to flee for his life, leaving his wife behind him. The rebels in Texas are not the no Yankee or Federal soldier shall reside there.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

AYER'S AGUE CURE, for the speedy cure of Intermittent Fever, or Fever and Ague, Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Bilious Fever, Periodical Headache or Bilious Headache, and Bilious Fever, United for the whole class of diseases originating in bilious derangement, caused by the Malaria of intermittent countries.

Fever and Ague is not the only consequence of the miasmatic poison. A great variety of disorders arise from its irritation, in malarious districts, among which are Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Headache, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Pleurisy, Spasms, Colic, Hysteria, Pain in the Bowels, Colic, Paralysis, and Derangement of the Stomach, all of which, when originating in this cause put on the intermittent type, or become periodical. This "CURE" expels the poison from the blood, and thus cures them all at once. It is not only the most effectual remedy ever discovered for this class of complaints, but it is the cheapest and moreover is perfectly safe. No harm can arise from its use, and the patient when cured is left as healthy as if he never had the disease. Can this be said of any other cure for Chills and Fever? If it is true of this, and it is true that many afflicted with the complaint cannot be over cautious of how they venture to cure the Fever and Ague, that it may be truthfully said to be a question of caution for the carriage, followed it up the street, and called in a loud tone "Hi there, old cap! Jim, what did you do with them smallpox cases you had last night?" Before the driver answered, a lady's head was thrust out of one of the carriage doors; the driver stopped, to ascertain what was wanted, in half a minute the ladies were in the street; in another half minute the driver had his three dollars and was ready to take his place in the line of carriages to wait for other passengers.

NATIONAL BANKS.

THE EXCHANGE NATIONAL BANK OF PITTSBURGH, January 26, 1866.

BY AUTHORITY FROM THE Comptroller of the Currency, the Directors of this Bank have declared a dividend of fifty per cent. out of the reserved profits, payable in shares of bank stock to the amount of five hundred thousand dollars ($500,000), making the capital fifteen hundred thousand dollars ($1,500,000.)

Stockholders will have credit on the books of the Bank with one new share of fifty dollars for each two shares held on this twenty-sixth day of January, A. D., 1866.

When this allotment makes one-half of a share a portion of the dividend, the owner may complete the share by a payment of twenty-five dollars, or receive the amount as an equivalent; but this option will cease upon the completion of the increase to the capital, when all remaining fractions will be sold in scrip.
