Altoona Barber Murders His Wife

Fires Two Bullets Into Victim on Hollidaysburg Courthouse Steps

Michael Musto, 45, a barber of Altoona, shot and killed his estranged wife, Mrs. Mary Musto, 36, as she was emerging from the court house at Hollidaysburg, Tuesday morning at 11:45 o'clock.

The shooting climaxed a heated court argument in which Mrs. Musta sought an increased support charge for herself and two children. Musto showed his temper at the court hearing and was admonished by Judge Patterson "to refrain from any threats or any gunplay." As the hearing ended, Musto passed within a few feet of his wife and remarked to her, "Try and get it."

Mrs. Anna Mirobelli and Mrs. Margaret Shoenfelt, both of Altoona, were with Mrs. Musto when the shooting occurred. Both were in danger of being hit as Musto fired. Mrs. Musto fell face downward onto the plaza of the court house steps as the shots crashed out.

Following the shooting Musto fled but was captured by police about a block from the scene of the crime.

Wire Fencing Is No Longer Rationed

Wire fencing of all types is no longer included in the list of items rationed by county farm rationing committees, it was announced yesterday by Mr. Rishel, chairman of the Centre County USDA War Board. Food Production Order No. 3, it was explained, has been amended to exclude this item from the rationing list.

It will no longer be necessary for those wishing to purchase wire fencing to make application for purchase certificates either to farm rationing committees or dealers. In the past, dealers had been acting as agents for the rationing committees in issuing purchase certificates. Purchases may now be made, without a purchase certificate, from any stock of fencing on hand.

Army Caravan Visits Titan Plant

you turn out at this plant go into those weapons of war. The man on the battlefields, on the sea, and in air, depend upon you far more than you realize. They want to know that you'll send them enough equipment, that the equipment will be the best that can be produced, and that you are fighting the same battle they are," the Lieutenant declared.

"The people of Germany and Japan work twice as hard as we do in America. They have to work, or be shot," the Lieutenant continued.

"We don't do things that way in America. You Titan workers are doing a fine job of production. Keep it up. Remember that a day lost at work may mean a day lost on the battlefield. We need your help!"

The program opened with the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" by the Titan Male Chorus, led by Mrs. Ernest Martin. William W. Sieg, vice president of the company, in the introductory address, declared that industry hasn't been talking much about its war effort, because it has been too busy getting things done. He said when the story finally is written it will be the greatest chapter of industrial progress in the history of the world. "United States Industry has done in two years what it took Hitler ten years to accomplish," Sieg declared.

Capt. J. T. Rudy, of the Army, industrial relations officer of the caravan, said Titan products play a vital part in the equipment of battleships, airplanes, field equipment and communications equipment. He said the war is as much an actuality in the Titan Metal plant as it is in North Africa or in the Pacific theatre of action.

Kenneth G. Stier, representative of the War Department, spoke briefly and introduced some of the members of the caravan. He reported that Lloyd Rainey, in command of the group, that morning by radio was notified of his promotion from second lieutenant to first lieutenant.

Corp. Nicholas Lastohkein, who in three days was wounded in the invasion of North Africa and was twice compelled to jump overboard when rescue ships were torpedoed, related his experiences.

Philip B. Ray, Titan personnel director, introduced Lt. Schwartz, who outlined the purposes of the caravan and who made a strong plea for every worker to produce his utmost.

Gunner's Mate Harlan Whipple, a member of the U. S. S. Northhampton, which participated in a number of major sea battles in the Pacific before it finally was torpedoed last November, told of some of his experiences on that gallant ship.

James Funk, president of the Titan Union, expressed his thanks to the Army and Navy for their vivid portrayal of war needs, and declared that Titan workers could be depended upon to answer their part of the need.

The meeting closed with the sounding of taps by the caravan's bugler.

Monday night upon the arrival of the group in Bellefonte, the Titan Company entertained members and guests at an informal dinner at the Penn Belle Hotel. Among the local persons were: George Kaze, resident inspector for the Navy; James Funk, Union president; Elmer Garbrick, Union secretary; Fred Yorks, president of the foremen's association; Gray Tressler, of the estimating department; Marvin Rothrock, of the purchasing department; Charles Garbrick, James Y. Sieg, and Roy Adams, of the sales department; James B. Craig, and W. W. Sieg, vice presidents; H. F. McElwee, captain of the guards; N. W. Smithson, resident Army inspector; Mayor Hardman P. Harris; Col. Edward D. Ardery, of the department of Military Affairs at Penn State; Leonard Glenn, commander of the Legion; Centre County Judge Ivan Walker; John Bryan, commander of the V. F. W.; Jesse Caum, of the Bell Telephone Company; Philip Ray, of the personnel department, and local newspapermen Thomas Mensch, P. M. Dubbs and Jack H. Yeager.

13 Billion War Loan To Open Monday

investment in Government bonds . . . over and above what they can buy this year because of the restrictions or unavailability of consumer goods. This may amount to as much as $40 billion this year.

"Every dollar which you have available now and do not invest in Government securities is a 'wild' dollar which may, together with its billions of brothers, turn into a Frankenstein which will raise your cost of living to the point where your dollar will be worth no more than the paper it is written on. In short, this loose money is likely to be the cause of a wild inflation that will sweep away your savings and send the price of a loaf of bread beyond what you now make in a year. It can't happen? It did in Germany! And that could happen here.

"On the other hand, the dollar loaned to your Government will work for you in three ways: (1) it will help hold down inflation because it will be harnessed to war work; (2) it will help buy the food, the transportation, the munitions that our boys out there in the front lines need to win the good fight, and (3) it will be earning interest that, together with your original loan, will come back to you later to help you buy the things you can't buy today —to insure your piece of the future.

"So let's not quibble about it. Let's not shilly-shally and debate. Let's dig down into our pockets; let's root those dollars out of the dark today and invest them in this Second War Loan. Remember those boys out there. They give their lives—you lend your money."

Three Fires at College

The Alpha Fire Company, State College, answered three alarms during the weekend. About midnight Saturday minor damage was caused by a car which caught fire near the Orlando apartments, on Barnard Street. At 3:30 Sunday afternoon, two alarms were sounded at once. One a gas tank at Oak Hall stone quarries which burned out before firemen arrived. The other was a flue fire at the C. A. Yearick home on West College Avenue. Flames spread through the rear of the house, causing total damage estimated at between $300 and $500. The property is owned by the John F. Gray Estate of Bellefonte.

Hold Formal Dedication for New Building

Among those Mr. Hartranft specially cited for their aid in the program were George Hazel, former president of the board, who was credited with having the school district in such financial condition that the building of the new school was possible; and Earl K. Stock, supervising principal of schools, who was given credit for clearing the old building of its 900 pupils and teachers without a single injury or loss of life in the school fire, February 13, 1939, and who performed vital service in handling the many problems of finance, materials, priorities and other difficulties encountered during the building program in addition to carrying on the usual school program under great difficulties.

The principal guest speaker was Dr. Fred P. Corson, president of Dickinson College, Carlisle, who in an address on "How Strong is America?" declared that the nation is as strong as its individual communities. The strength of the community rests with the institutions which can generate and transmit strength, namely the home, the church and the school.

"The Axis countries have demonstrated the importance of education, even though it is misapplied education," Dr. Corson said.

He listed as the chief factors of an invincible America the following national characteristics: The aristocracy of work; the philosophy of freedom; the assumption that progress is possible, regardless of obsteacles; and the national method of union, whereby various factions with different opinions can unite their efforts on major questions.

The invocation was given by Rev. William C. Thompson, of the Bellefonte Presbyterian church, after which R. C. Blaney, chairman of the building committee, opened the program with the introduction of the following persons:

Mr. Hartranft, president; Mrs. J. M. Hartswick, Dr. E. H. Adams, J. Bossart DeHaas, William H. Brouse, and William B. Troupe, all members of the School Board; Mrs. W. Harter Vonada, secretary of the board; Hays W. Mattern, Jr., treasurer; and M. W. Gettig, attorney; and Mahlon K. Robb, president, Mr. Brouse vice president, Lewis R. Lenhart, secretary, and Mr. Hartranft and Newell B. Long, all members of the Bellefonte Building Corporation; John G. Love, attorney for the corporation.

Mr. Blaney paid a tribute to Henry A. Brockerhoff, of Bellefonte; Thomas B. Beaver, of Bellefonte; Assemblyman Kenneth G. Haines, and Senator A. H. Letzler for their part in obtaining necessary special legislation to complete the school financial program.

Other honor guests introduced were Judge Ivan Walker; Council President William W. Sieg; J. R. Kyler, representative of Architects Hunter & Caldwell; Charles F. Cook, former treasurer of the school board; Miss Ella Levy, of Milesburg, oldest living retired Bellefonte school teacher; Mrs. R. S. Brouse, Bellefonte's first woman school director; and O. F. Sollenberger, principal of the High School, who represented the entire teaching staff.

Supervising Principal E. K. Stock spoke briefly, outlining the present physical properties of the school district. Looking into the future he stressed two thoughts which he considered of prime importance in the welfare of the schools. First, he said, the school administration and the teachers realize that much more hard work will be required to bring the educational facilities to their highest degree of efficiency. Second, he added, it must be remembered that buildings alone do not represent education. The community, pupils and school staff must cooperate to realize the full purposes for which the building was created.

Bellefonte now has approximately 70 teachers and supervisors to care for approximately 1500 pupils from Bellefonte and ten surrounding school districts, Mr. Stock declared. He added that the goal of the school is to provide the best education possible for the many types of students represented in a group of that size.

Other speakers include Dr. Hubert C. Eicher, chief of the School Building Division, and H. Frank Hare, adviser on secondary education from the State Department of Education at Harrisburg. They brought greetings from the State Department and related how some of the difficulties encountered in providing Bellefonte with a new High School were met and overcome.

Music was furnished by the Bellefonte High School orchestra led by Mrs. Alberta Krader, and Mrs. Lenore Morgan Martin led in group singing.

Announce New Blood Bank Plan

The Foundation laboratory is well equipped for the usual laboratory procedures and special apparatus has been installed for research in the blood substitutes. The plasma unit is similar to the one used for processing plasma for the Armed Forces of the United States. There is special equipment for the bottling of dried plasma.

The ambulance which will visit the various hospitals to aid in receiving blood is equipped with complete refrigerating and laboratory units; first-aid equipment; a McKesson and Robbins resuscitator, sterile instruments and apparatus for intravenous medication, splints, stretcher, and other items.

Under the program the State Department of Health will supply workers who will collaborate with the clinical pathologists in the various hospitals in arranging and conducting blood donor clinics, and will aid in the holding of post graduate seminars to review with the physicians of the State the newest developments in the receiving of blood, administration of plasma, and other procedures connected with the entire blood program.

The State Medical Society's part in the system will be to provide or assign, through County Medical Societies, physicians to collaborate in the blood donor clinics, and to assist with the post graduate seminars.

The local hospital's responsibility under the system will be to pay the unit cost for blood processing and essential tests, all of which are grouped under the unit cost of about $3.75 a unit—which represents the plasma from one pint of blood. The hospital also will provide free-of-charge quarters for the collection of blood, and any supplemental services which may be required.

The plan is scheduled to be put into operation in the near future, hospital authorities here said yesterday, and announcements will appear as to the dates when blood will be received at the institution.

Blood plasma kits such as are used in the armed forces consist of two vacuum-sealed tin cans, containing a sealed bottle of powder (dried plasma), a bottle of sterile distilled water, needles and tubing. In use, the rubber cap on the bottle of powdered plasma is sterilized and a double-ended hollow needle is inserted between the cap of that bottle and the one containing the water. In about two minutes the water dissolves the plasma powder. The bottle of liquid plasma then is suspended upside down, a hollow needle at one end of a section of tubing is thrust into the bottle's cap, and a needle at the other end of the tubing is inserted into the patient's arm. The transfusion is then completed.
