TO OUR 39,000* CUSTOMERS WHO OWN ELECTRIC RANGES OR ROASTERS

Food preservation this year is vitally important. You will want to put away for winter use substantial quantities of vegetables and fruits.

Because electric cookery assures a cool kitchen, and because it is so dependable, electric range and electric roaster owners will find it comparatively easy to handle the canning and dehydrating tasks.

Special Food Preservation Issue of "HOMEMAKING TODAY"—

If you have not received a copy of the current issue of our home service publication, Homemaking Today, we urge you to secure one at your West Penn office. In it you will find carefully prepared instructions for canning fruits and acid vegetables, for using the recommended pressure cooker method for canning non-acid vegetables and meats, and for dehydrating certain vegetables and fruits.

If more convenient, merely phone or write to your West Penn office and a copy of the Food Preservation issue of Homemaking Today will be sent to you.
