The Pittsburgh Gazette.

FRIDAY, MAY 24, 1867.

THE FENIANS are reported to be resolved on another and speedy assault on Canada. Some people learn by experience; but this sort does not.

IT APPEARS that the Emperor of Brazil has not abolished Slavery—only has the measure under advisement. So much the worse for the Emperor.

GEN. BUTLER repeats his story about Booth's diary. Why don't he prove it? Col. Conger, who took the diary from Booth's person, testified before the Judiciary Committee that the missing leaves were gone when he first saw it.

MR. DAVIS having reached Canada with a whole skin, his admirers are petitioning the President to pardon him. In the present temper of loyal men throughout the North Mr. JOHNSON will need superlative hardihood before complying.

MESSRS. WILSON and KELLEY, as the result of their Southern experience, feel confident the time has come for a full discussion of the aims of the Republican party before the people of the revolted States. This is a delicate service, which demands the ablest and coolest men.

ENGLISH TRAVELERS in the United States have commonly spoken most disparagingly of our railroad carriages, because of the publicity they compel. They have given decided preference to the compartment car in use at home. But railroad men in England have become dissatisfied with their own carriages, because they afford no facilities for communication between passengers and the train hands. Wilmer and Smith's European Times now comes out in favor of the system universally adopted in the United States, and advocates it, even if the English government has to compel companies to change the cars to adapt them to the new plan.

EVER SINCE the conception of the project for building a railroad across the continent, it has been a serious question how to protect the mountain section from interruption during winter by snows. It has finally been decided that through mountain cuts the track will have to be protected by sheds strong enough to support any superincumbent mass of snow that may gather upon them. According to the design adopted the roofing will have a double support of stout timbers at the eaves and half-way between the eaves and the peaked top, so as to be strong enough to sustain the weight of many tons of snow. Many miles of this roofing will have to be erected.

THE Philadelphia North American, a few days ago, made some sensible and timely suggestions as to the wisdom and necessity of avoiding, in the rehabilitation of the Union, what may hereafter be claimed as a compromise between the loyal and rebel States. The idea always was mischievous and unfounded that one Congress could bind another on any public question whatever. Each Congress assembles under the Constitution, as it happens to be at the time, and has full power within the limitations set up by that instrument.

Nevertheless, it is politic and essential that the States which revolted should know what conditions they must comply with precedent to restoration to their former rights as members of the Union. Certain things have been required at their hands; and while no one is empowered to say that another Congress will or will not go further or recede somewhat from the positions assumed, it is proper and useful for members of that body to express their individual opinions that every State complying fairly with the terms proposed will be admitted to equal participation in the government.

When the States shall again all be represented at Washington, the powers of Congress will be neither enlarged nor diminished. Whatever legislation it may judge to be needful, and for which authority can be justly deducible from the organic law, it will have the right to consummate. The Constitution is the only restriction upon Congress, and none other must be allowed.

THE CASE OF MR. DAVIS.

Why was MR. JEFFERSON DAVIS admitted to bail? This inquiry excites more and more interest with each succeeding development of the case. Judge UNDERWOOD's loyalty has never been suspected. Indeed, the only complaint against him has been his intense radicalism. Up to a late period, it was clearly his intention to bring on the trial. In reported conversations he expressed himself strongly against admitting the prisoner to bail. Of course, if the crime charged was bailable, the accused had a right to tender security, and the prerogative of the Judge was limited to fixing the amount and determining the competency of the persons offering. Almost up to the last moment the Judge held the case not to be bailable, and few lawyers will dispute the accuracy of that opinion.

But a change came over the Judge. He finally decided that the offence was bailable, and consented to let bail be entered. The attorneys of the government were there, confessedly unready to proceed with the case, after more than two years to prepare in. Unreadiness under such circumstances admits only of one interpretation, which is, that the government did not want to try the case. All the facts essential to be proved, are notorious. Witnesses are abundant. But they confessed they wanted the case put over. They consented to have bail taken and the prisoner released. It is now known they were in negotiation, some time before, with gentlemen who proposed to sign the bond, and that some of these gentlemen went on to Richmond in consequence of the understanding entered into, and were present when the case was called up. All this goes to show that the idea of taking bail originated with the government; that in view of the determination of the government, if not of his concurrence therein, Chief Justice CHASE did not go to Richmond when he knew the case would be disposed of; and that influences—we do not say improper ones—were brought to bear on Judge UNDERWOOD, which induced him to take the step the government desired.

This view is strengthened by the announcement that Mr. DAVIS has taken up his residence, for the summer, at least, in Montreal. It is possible this was an after thought, suggested by the appalling clamor for his blood, which broke from the Republican press directly upon his enlargement. Still, if he had stopped to reflect, he would soon have been satisfied that the outcry proceeded, in part, though not altogether, from the enemies of Mr. GREELEY, who were jealous of his position and influence, and thought they had discovered an opportunity to destroy him in popular estimation. But, in part, also, this outcry came from a profounder depth than personal jealousy and hatred. A strong feeling exists that some explation ought to be made to the offended majesty of the laws; that the rebellion ought to be punished in the person of its chosen leader; and that this is due alike to the demands of justice and the instinct of self-preservation. In this sentiment we fully participate. While we have from the first steadily resisted demands for cruel decimations, sweeping proscriptions and wholesale confiscations, we have repeatedly urged that it was needful in a signal manner to brand Treason as a Crime, and that this could only be done by arraigning, convicting and punishing a few of the leaders of the inexcusable revolt.

There are men of great intelligence and moral purity who take a different view. They think that Justice can best be vindicated by Mercy, and that the nation can be sooner restored to oneness by Clemency than by Rigor. There is much force in what is presented to sustain that idea; though we do not yield to it. Moreover it must be confessed, that when stormy passions sweep over a nation, stirring it to its lowest depths, severe exactions are received with a degree of favor which appears most unaccountable fifty years later. History is full of lessons on this point, which are seldom read to profit when there is most occasion for them.

Mr. DAVIS is safe in Montreal, and will doubtless stay there until assured that his life will not be perled by coming back. So far, therefore, as he is concerned, an end has been made of his case at Richmond. What remains for Judge UNDERWOOD at his next term is to declare default of appearance, and enforce the collection of the one hundred thousand dollars, if the national honor shall appear to demand it.

IRON MANUFACTURES IN ENGLAND.

During the time of the Romans occupied Britain in the early part of the Christain era, they had numerous small establishments for the manufacture of iron in various parts of the island, and considerable quantities were made. But so rude were the processes that not half the metal was extracted from the ore. Large masses of cinder from these primitive furnaces have been found, and worked over, being almost as rich as original ores.

Upon the evacuation of the island by the Romans the manufacture of iron fell off greatly; and for many centuries the native works could not and did not supply the home demand, small as it was. Charcoal was the only fuel used from the earliest period up to the middle of the eighteenth century. At first the cutting away of the forests was beneficial, for it laid open the land to cultivation; but at length the destruction of timber in this way threatened to become a national calamity. To avert this, an act of Parliament was passed in 1581, "prohibiting its conversion into fuel for the making of iron within fourteen miles of the Thames, and forbidding the erection of new iron works within twenty-two miles of London." The law also restricted the trade in other parts of England.

In 1620 the idea of substituting mineral coal for charcoal in the smelting of iron occurred to the mind of Earl DUDLEY, or rather to that of his natural son, DUD DUDLEY, and a patent was issued to the Earl. DUD DUDLEY was a man of great genius and energy, and notwithstanding all the opposition he encountered from popular prejudice, and even violence, he had by long perseverance succeeded. But during the troubles between CHARLES I. and Parliament, DUDLEY espoused the cause of the King, and became an officer in the loyal army, and the consequence was that his estate was confiscated and he reduced to poverty. After the Restoration he petioned CHARLES II. for a restoration of his property and his patent, but that monarch had a favorite to whom he granted the patent, and thus DUDLEY was debarred from prosecuting the business. The other tried but failed, and thus the manufacture of iron with mineral coal was set back not less than a hundred years, and the business dwindled almost to nothing. In 1740 there were only fifty-nine furnaces in all England.

About the year 1857, at the Coalbrookdale works, under the management of RICHARD REYNOLDS, pit coal, for the first time, came into large, regular and successful use in the manufacture of iron. From this time that important industry rapidly and steadily increased, until at the end of the first century from the date of the first use of mineral coal it has grown to the enormous aggregate of over four millions of tons a year.

Nearly a century elapsed between the date of the successful introduction of mineral coal in the smelting of iron ore in England and its successful introduction in this country. For a long time the impression prevailed that our coal was for some reason unsuitable. About 1819 a company erected a large furnace, on the plan of the coke furnaces of England, on Bear Creek, near the Allegheny seven miles north of Brady's Bend. It was constructed under the direction of a Mr. Lewis, an intelligent Englishman; but the experiment was not successful. A long time intervened between that attempt and the next, in the bituminous coal region. Meantime the smelting of ore with anthracite coal had proved highly successful. Between 1830 and '40 the use of coke in this business was again essayed and proved entirely successful, and now nearly all the iron made in Western Pennsylvania and Eastern Ohio, is smelted with mineral coal, either used raw or in the form of coke.

THE public health of New York and Brooklyn is much better this season than the corresponding one last year. No case of cholera has yet been reported. The scarlatina and measles prevail as an epidemic, carrying away last week forty-one children. Three well authenticated cases of spotted fever were reported. In closing his report the Registrar of Vital Statistics says:

The most important Sanitary Conference that ever convened, closed its meeting in the city of Weimar, after uniting upon recommendations and methods for prevention and cure of cholera that conclusively reaffirm the principles that guided us in New York and Brooklyn last year. The whole lesson is summed up in these words. 1. Thorough drainage. 2. Constant and perfect cleaning. 3. Pure water for drinking. 4. Specific, abundant and immediate disinfection to destroy the infective property of all excremental matter from the sick, and from persons who have arrived from infective places.

James W. Campbell, the Virginia Sheriff who hung John Brown, died three or four days ago. He has seen John Brown's soul march on and conquer the whole South.

CARDINAL CULLEN, the Catholic Archbishop of Ireland, in a recent pastoral, laments the existence and action of secret political societies in Ireland, and deplores the depopulation of the island. He says that within a recent period nearly three millions of the Irish people have emigrated, most of them coming to the United States.

THE records of the Department of Internal Revenue disclose the fact that in the whole United States, last year, only 450,000 persons paid tax upon incomes. Out of thirty-five million of population less than half a million had incomes exceeding six hundred dollars.

ALABAMA is in a healthy financial condition. She is rapidly discharging her State debts, and liquidating the accumulated interest upon her foreign bonds, the payment of which was almost entirely suspended during the rebellion.

THE two Republican papers of Gettysburg have been consolidated, under the ownership and management of Hon. Ed. McPherson, Robert G. Harper and D. A. Buehler, with the title of the Star and Sentinel.

WHAT IS COD LIVER OIL?—The Bridgewater Gazette, a New England journal, says that a physician in that place was recently called to prescribe for a somewhat illiterate old lady, and as cod-liver oil, in his opinion, was the remedy for her complaint, he wrote a prescription for the apothecary to put up, with the Latin formula, "Ole. Jec. Ass.," being an abbreviation of "Oleum Jecoris Asselli," or, in plain English, cod-liver oil. The medicine was procured, taken, and in a few weeks the lady completely recovered her health. A neighbor paid her a visit after her recovery, and, expressing surprise at her improved condition, inquired the secret of so rapid a restoration. "Why," said the old lady, lifting both hands in grateful enthusiasm, "it was that beautiful medicine, the Oil of Tackass, that brought me on my feet again!"

Mr. GEORGE MUIR, of Armstrong's Coal Works, Penn township, Allegheny county, speaks as follows of the

Great Remedy for Consumption:

"I was reduced so low with consumption that I was unable to leave my bed, and my physicians informed me that they could do nothing more for me, my case being utterly hopeless, that I had not certainly over a month to live. At this stage I was induced to try REV. E. A. WILSON'S REMEDY, and to-day I am as well as any man in the world. If there are any who doubt this statement, they can call and see me, (as per above address) and I will give them all the particulars of my extraordinary recovery.

STRONG TESTIMONY.

TAMAROA, Perry Co., Ill., Dec. 11, 1866.

This certifies that I have used and recommended in my practice, during the last four years, HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS with perfect satisfaction, and take great pleasure in recommending them to the public.

E. H. PRICE, M. D.

TRECOLA, Illinois, August 3, 1866.

Messrs. Hostetter & Smith—DEAR SIRS: I use your BITTERS in my family, and consider them the best that can be procured. My wife has derived great benefit from using them, and also considers them an invaluable medicine.

Respectfully yours, G. P. MILLER.

OXFORD, Warren Co., N. Y., Aug. 20, 1866.

Messrs. Hostetter & Smith, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Sirs: They do not advertise and run for valuable STOMACH BITTERS in this neighborhood. We have been using them in the family for some time, and find them the best medicine of any for family use. Yours, J. N. CANDEE COLE.

EFFINGHA'S, Effingham Co., Ill.

Dr. Hostetter—DEAR SIR: With pleasure I can testify that your BITTERS, from my knowledge of their use in my family, and from what is said by purchasers, are far superior to any other.

Yours, &c., ROBERT GIEBAL.

PINUS CANADENSIS.

A tree which is abundant in Canada, Nova Scotia, and the more northern parts of the New England States, and is also found in the elevated and mountainous regions of the Middle States, and abounds in medicinal virtues. Dr. Swell, of Boston, has prepared a medicine from the inner bark of the pine tree, called PULAND'S WHITE PINE COMPOUND, which is one of rare value in all debilitated states of the kidneys. It acts like a charm in all diseases of mucous membrane, enabling them to regain their lost tone and energy. It will be found well adapted to all those diseases, where Buchu has been tried and failed. It is likewise well suited to chronic coughs, and an infallible specific for old and debilitated cases of asthma. Many persons who had long suffered took a bottle of Pulands, to try, afterwards came back and got a dozen, or half dozen, which effected radical cures of diseases of the bladder and kidney of years standing.

Diabetes, a disease that has been looked upon as among the incurables, is immediately relieved by it. Notice the certificate of Ass Goodnow, published some time ago.

The United States Dispensatory, speaking of the pine, says: "It is prescribed in leucorrhœa, gleet, and other diseases of the urinary passages; in the acute and chronic inflammation or ulceration of the bowels, in chronic catarrhal affections, and in various forms of rheumatism. It is exceedingly valuable in all gravelly affections, blood spitting, and where there is red and white sediment. It can be taken without interruption by one's natural avocation; and instead of sickening, produces a bracing, healthy power of nutrition and vigor." Price $1 per bottle; six for $5.
