The Pittsburgh Gazette

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 21, 1867.

THE long looked for document removing General Sheridan from command of the Fifth Military District, has at length been issued by the President, and handed to Gen. Grant for transmission. The latter stoutly protested against the removal and urged on the President the policy of letting Sheridan alone, but entreaty had no effect and to-day the order will be transmitted.

SHERIDAN, according to the order for his removal, will have thirty days leave of absence. He should travel north, and receive the ovations the loyal masses are prepared to award him. No man in the country at this hour is more popular, and certainly none are more worthy of confidence. His removal will cause new friends to cluster around him, while it will still further degrade the President in the estimation of all good citizens. Should Sheridan conclude to visit the North he will be received in a manner that will convince him that his course was the right one, and that the popular heart is with him in sentiment.

WE INVITE ATTENTION to the communication of "Pitt," advocating the abolishment of the delegate system now in vogue in this county. The citizens are evidently dissatisfied with the manner in which nominations are made by the Republican party in this section, and are determined on reform. The delegate system has been abandoned elsewhere and the Crawford county plan of making nominations substituted, and it has been found decidedly preferable. However, by the old system the forthcoming nominations for the Senate and House of Representatives must be made, and we again urge on our Republican friends the necessity of using their best exertions towards securing delegates to represent them faithfully in the Convention.

THE NICOLSON PAVEMENT.

The Nicolson pavement promises to be the one most universally adopted hereafter in paving the streets of American cities. It has been subjected to the test of years, and has demonstrated its own superiority over any style of pavement ever introduced or invented in the country. Many good qualities recommend it for universal adoption, while it is open to fewer objections than any other. Wherever it has been tested it has given the highest satisfaction, and in every case has been awarded the palm of superiority. We trust one day to have no other than the Nicolson pavement on our principal streets. Indeed, from the attention which the subject is now receiving from our merchants and property holders, the general adoption of the favorite pavement may not be so indefinitely postponed as many may imagine. While we cannot have clean houses, and can never aspire, as a city, to the title of beautiful, we might at least desire some pleasure in smooth streets and good roads. The cobble stone pavement was very good in its time, or when none better was offered, but it is new a relic of fogyism, and we hope no more of it will be laid.

Perhaps in Pittsburgh the Nicolson pavement would be more fully appreciated than elsewhere. Our streets are never in order; are broken, uneven, and full of ruts. This all happens from the character of the vehicles constantly rolling over them; heavy iron wagons, huge timber wheels, and cumbrous ore carts. The cobble stones will not stand the weight, and soon are forced from their places, leaving holes and ruts. Then, too, the noise from the wagons, carts and cabs driven over our streets is terrible to weak-nerved folks, and a grave affliction to occupants of sick chambers. The sanitary condition of the city can never be perfect so long as the filth filters between the crevasses of the cobble stones, and cannot be drawn out by sweeping or scraping. Considered in various ways, the Nicolson pavement is highly desirable here, and all our citizens will welcome its general adoption.

THE HIGH PRICE OF FLOUR.

One of our most worthy flour merchants favors us with the following communication bearing on the causes for the extraordinary prices commanded by the great staple of life. The views he takes are fair and reasonable and will fully repay perusal:

MESSRS EDITORS: From the tenor of many leading articles that have appeared in all of the papers of our city recently, great injustice is done a large and respectable class of dealers. The idea is conveyed to the public, that the high price of flour, grain, &c., is caused by speculators. A very erroneous notion. The greater number of operators in any particular product or article of food, the greater chance there is for reasonable prices. If one or two firms supplied this city and its surroundings with all of the flour and grain that is consumed, there might be some truth in the oft repeated accusation. Flour and grain is sold in this market, owing to the great competition and large number of dealers, at a less margin than in any other city in the States.

The producers are the men who are benefitted by the high prices. There are scores of farmers who are abundantly able to hold their products for years, and who would sooner let their grain rot than sell at a reasonable price. Were it not for the enterprise of our merchants in bringing the necessaries of life from remote sections of the country, often at the risk of pecuniary loss, people in this city would suffer at the hands of the producers. The producers, however, are not the most culpable in the maintainance of starvation prices. The press of the country is much to blame for the continuance of high prices. The farmers are often made to hold on to their products with great tenacity on account of the dismal and disastrous reports of the almost total destruction of the crops in nearly all of the European States. These reports are published daily and scattered broadcast throughout the country, and the farmers advised not to be in a hurry about selling, as their products will be needed at fabulous prices to supply the people of these States with food. High prices are often brought about and maintained for a time by such reports, which are very often much exaggerated. The writer has no hesitancy in attributing the present high price of Flour and grain, and the indisposition, to realize on the part of farmers, to these reports.

A FLOUR DEALER.

THE COUNTY CONVENTION.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—You invite the attention of the people to the primary meetings about to take place as a matter that concerns them deeply. Deploring as you do the character of the selections generally made of Legislative candidates on such occasions, you admit at the same time that, while there is much to be said in opposition to the delegate system which prevails here, it is still not without its merits, provided the citizens will exercise their duty of selecting the proper men to represent them in the Convention.

With this important proviso of course there is not much room for disputing your proposition, on the hypothesis that the greatest inequality of representation may be considered as involving no mischief in itself, which I suppose no Republican could very consistently assert.

To make any Convention, however, a fair one, or to expect from it any legitimate expression of the will of the people, although every voter in the county should turn out at the primary elections without such equality, as will insure to the opinions of all the same weight in the Convention, is to look for results that are in the nature of things impossible. Unless, therefore, you can secure this equality you must be content to receive and endorse just such tickets as a very small minority of the people—who are far more likely, from the very smallness of their numbers, to be under the lead of a few managers—may think proper to impose on you.

But what is the condition of things in the present case, in which you think to find some merit to compensate for its defects, if the people will only do their duty in selecting the delegates?

Surely, no human ingenuity could have devised a plan more grossly unequal and unjust, more discouraging to a respectable candidate, and more thoroughly calculated to disgust the voter, and keep him at home, than the one now in vogue in this county, by which all the election districts are levelled down to an entire equality in power, and the one thousand or twelve hundred electors of a single ward in Pittsburgh or Allegheny are allowed to have no more voice than the forty voters of Neville township! Why should any one man of the one thousand or twelve hundred of the former turn out to vote, when he knows that he is but a fractional man, and his neighbor over on the island has thirty times his power in the Convention? If you want him to go to the polls you must show him that his weight will be felt there. Leave it to the people to decide and they will turn out as they do at the general election. Leave it as it is, and all your exhortations will be vain, because, as they will tell you, it makes no difference in the result whether they go or not, and that wire primary meetings, assembling and adjourning in a hurry, under the direction of a few industrious managers, all over the county, who have been previously spoken to in town, it is not worth while for them to trouble themselves about the matter. You have tried this system long enough. You have preached to the people about the inefficiency of their representatives. They see it and know it as well as you do. They see whole tickets selected for them of which perhaps not a single man would have been chosen by themselves. They go away dissatisfied and threaten sometimes to rebel, as they would have long since done if the critical condition of the country had allowed the party to divide. And yet it all comes to nothing, just because the evil is irremediable under the present system of which it is an inherent and inseparable part. You cannot extract any good out of it by any alchemy. You might as well expect to gather grapes from thorns or figs from thistles, as to hope that you can rectify such an evil without re-constructing the whole machine on principles that shall be truly Republican. Whether it can be saved in this way I do not know, such infirmities are such as to make it unacceptable in any shape in the midst of a crowded city where there is always so much room for intrigue and corruption and management by cliques and cabals and little juntas of politicians who contrive to get the wires into their own hands. (In this thing is certain. It will not be repaired by the men who find their account in it. None of their conventions will ever be allowed by them to surrender so valuable a prerogative. The people must attend to it themselves, and nothing is more certain in the future than that if the proper remedy is not applied in such a way as to insure a ticket that will satisfy them, they will smash the machine some of these days over the heads of the managers, by teaching them that a nomination is one thing and an election another, and that they will not be forced to support men for office who are imposed on them against their will.

PITT.

Vegetable Venders Arrested.

The order of the Board of Health prohibiting the sale of certain vegetables is being rapidly enforced, and quites number of hucksters and others have been arrested for offering for sale the prohibited articles "on the sly." Many of these parties were ignorant of the order, which should have been promulgated by posting handbills in the market places. The Board itself has no little difficulty in agreeing upon the article, or to be cut out—one of the members being excessively fond of cabbages, another of roasting ears, another of everything green, especially greenback. The doctors also differed (as usual) on the vegetable question, some contending that all vegetables should be eaten at this season, while others were in favor of a strictly meat and bread diet. The citizens, of course, were divided in opinion, The Germans could not see the necessity of proscribing cabbages, which they had eaten all their lives, and never knew sickness to result from its use. Creoles and native Missourians, who had feasted upon green corn from infancy, were indignant at finding that succulent article banished from the markets, while green peas, egg plant, &c., were allowed to be sold without limit. The citizens clamored for their favorite vegetables, and the huckaters, tempted by the prospect of large profits, obtained the desired articles and sold them slyly at large profits. The police got wind of what was going on, and, urged by the officers, seized and confiscated the prohibited vegetables, and arrested the venders. This has been going on ever since the order was issued. On Saturday seven market venders were arrested for violating the orders of the Board of Health.—St. Louis Democrat.

—All the London papers are discussing the subject of wire-hibbling among the English ladies, which has recently been brought to public attention by the Lancet. We doubt, however, whether they will be able to do anything to diminish the habit. Whenever the newspapers or the male sex undertake to reform or change any habit or fancy of women, the effort not only results in failure, but in a great increase of the thing attacked. Take the matter of crinoline or hoop skirts, which, when they first came into vogue, were assailed by all the journals with a fury and force that could not be surpassed, and the consequence was that the fashion of wearing them spread like wildfire. Take the matter of chignons, which were assailed and satirized in all the journals when they first appeared, the result of which soon came to be that a woman would as soon be without a head as without a chignon. Not all the talk of gregarines and pedicule had the least effect. And so we might mention other feminine fancies which men and newspapers have set about reforming. But who ever knew any such effort to succeed?

FAMINE IN ALGERIA.—Lamentable accounts are received from Algeria. The whole African colony is said to be menaced with famine. Several years of bad crops and two invasions of locusts have brought the settlers and the natives to the brink of ruin. There is a deficiency of corn in French Africa, and in some places there does not remain any grain in stock. The natives are gradually bringing their flocks—their only fortune—to the towns on the coast, to exchange them for some sacks of wheat or barley, for not only are the inhabitants without food, but there is also a want of fodder for the cattle, and the leanness of the sheep offered for sale by the Bedouins in the markets of Philippeville, Bona and Oran, shows sufficiently the difficulty of providing for their subsistence.

—Mr. Hunt, in his volume on the "Fourth Estate," thus sketches the peculiar duties of a journalist: "The man who once becomes a journalist must all most bid farewell to mental rest or mental leisure. If he fulfills his duties truthfully his attention must be ever awake to what is passing in the world, and his whole mind must be devoted to the instant examination, and discussion, and record, of current events. He has little time for literary idleness, with such literary labors on his shoulders. He has no days to spend on catalogues, or in dreamy discursive researches in public libraries. He has no months to devote to the exhaustion of any one theme. What he has to deal with must be taken up at a moment's notice, be examined, tested and dismissed at once; and thus his mind is ever kept occupied with the mental necessity of the world's passing hour."

—"Women's Rights" advocates have always been fond of adducing the examples of certain queens in proof of the aptitude of women to discharge all the duties of life. Queen Victoria, however, in her life of the Prince Consort, most bitterly deplores the fact that she had no husband during the first years of her reign. In regard to her solitary responsibility, she says: "A worse school for a young girl, or one more detrimental to all natural feelings and affections, cannot well be imagined than the position of a Queen at eighteen, without experience, and without a husband to guide and support her." The Queen, later in life, was according to her statement in this work, far more positive than she had need of the advice and guidance of her husband in all the affairs of State.

—One Dr. Caffe, in a medical journal of Paris, draws fearful conclusions from the multiplying graveyards around the metropolis, and recommends cremation, or the burning of the bodies of the dead, as the best disposal to be made of them. But he would have it done in artistic style a la Turkenne. "Let a large edifice be erected on an elevated spot in the town; let the corpse be laid on a metallic plate and slid into a furnace; the ashes to be collected in an urn for the family to keep if they wish;" and have the usual solemnities attend the ceremony. The example of the heathen Greeks and Romans is also cited to show the propriety of this custom.

—An old woman died lately at St. Hilers, France, who was supposed to be in a very destitute condition. Upon her death-bed she confessed after her death, there were discovered: Fifty-six silk and stuff dresses, thirty shawls, one hundred and eight night dresses, one hundred and twenty-seven chemises, one hundred flannel petticoats, forty-eight towels, one eighty-four pairs of stockings, a quantity of print dresses not made up, forty-two twenty-four shirts, twenty-four aprons, and twenty-three dress jackets. Many of the articles were quite new.

LADIES,

If you are afflicted with lassitude: if, on rising it is the morning, you feel unrefreshed, with a bad taste in the mouth; a disgust for food; a constant desire to rest, it is time something should be done to stop the growing evil. We know of no preparation more highly adapted to all afflictions of this description than

HUNTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

For mother's nursing this great tonic should always be taken, especially where the mother's nourishment is inadequate to the demands of the child, consequently her strength must yield, and here it is where a good tonic, such as HUNTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, is needed to impart temporary

STRENGTH AND VIGOR

to the whole system. Invalids should by all means try this remedy, and before so doing ask your physician, who, if he is acquainted with its virtues, will recommend its use in all cases. As a it has no equal, while its pleasing flavor and healthful effects have made it a general favorite. It is free from all properties calculated to impair the system, and its operations are at once gentle, soothing and efficient. All who have used the BITTERS attest its virtues and commend it to use.

CURE OF FISTULA.

DR. KEYSER: I write to thank you for your kindness and scientific management of my disease, for which I called to consult you some time in January last. You will remember that I had a complication of diseases, which finally ended in a terrible fistula, which had been declared by "1st sions" on account of a harassing cough, which it was feared might fasten on my lungs. I knew that the popular mode of treating diseases like mine was by a cutting operation, which, if successful at all, would naturally throw the disease upon the lungs or some other vital organ, on account of the suddenness of the cure and the immediate check to a discharge which I was constrained to believe was a salutary provision of Nature to get rid of some morbid condition of the system. I feel perfectly satisfied that your method of treatment, purifying to the system, and local applications to the fistulous part, must cure, if anything could, without cutting, which I find it did, and am happy to report myself well in every particular, with sounder and better health than I have had for years. I would also add that the applications you made were almost painless, and have left me a new man, with all the energies as vigor of restored health.

Yours, gratefully, J——O——.

Dr. KEYSER's consultation rooms are 5-p. 120 Penn street, from 9 A. M. until 4 p. m.
