Flier Takes Rest

Lt. Raymond A. Popson

1st. Lieutenant Raymond A. Popson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Popson, of Kittanning, former well known residents of Bellefonte, has taken a short leave from his Air Corps fighter group—known as a "hot outfit"—in the South Pacific and has gone to the Hawaiian Islands for a much-needed rest.

The Sky Riders, which is the name his squadron is known by, has been in the thick of American advances in the Gilberts and Marshalls strafing Japanese ground installations and shipping, and escorting bombers over enemy territory.

Lt. Popson is such an enthusiastic part of his outfit that even when he is absent from it, most of his conversation centers around its airacobras and his buddies who daily fly them into the teeth of the Japanese stronghold.

Having been stationed on island outposts for many months, Lt. Popson has become something of an authority on how best to exist on islands and atolls in the Pacific. His advice to anyone who anticipates a sojourn in the Pacific Archipelago is to come equipped with three very important essentials; A corrugated washboard, a detergent shampoo and as much brightly colored calico as he can carry since it is the most effective trading medium in dealing with South Sea Island natives.

After he has become revitalized from his visit to Hawaii, Lt. Popson will return to his squadron and once again mix it with the Nips.
