MISTAKES SETTLED IT.

A Good Game Lost by the Boys at Chicago.

[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, June 13.—With a negro boy as a mascot, the Chicago team won an exciting, but poorly played, game from Pittsburg to-day. Early in the morning Clarence Duvall, the bearse colored lad who accompanied Anson around the world and who was summarily dismissed six weeks ago, consented to remove the "hoodoo" he had placed on his late colleagues. He sat on the bench all through the game. It is evident from his work to-day that he is the most valuable player in the club.

The game began to get hot and feverish in the fifth inning, its pulse became more accelerated every inning thereafter, and in the ninth an angry rash broke out on its face. The spectators got wet around the eyes too, for four innings the playing was

DULL AND LIFELESS.

Van Haltren scored the first run for his side in the fourth inning on a single, a steal, Duffy's sacrifice and Anson's slow grounder to Staley. Maul made the circuit in the second inning on a rattling drive to center, a passed ball, Sunday's sacrifice and a single by Dunlap. The score was a tie at the beginning of the fifth inning. Then Anson's men took the lead with two runs on doubles by Farrell and Flint, a single by Burns and an error by Kuehne. For Pittsburg Dunlap galloped around the base lines on a safe drive to center and a pesthouse muff by Van Haltren. Neither team scored in the sixth. The features of this inning, in the stereotyped language of the prairie, was Anson. After Duffy had been relieved the old man for a base. Then Pfeffer sent a hot grounder to Smith. Anson dashed over second base, but Pfeffer was thrown out at first. In his dash Anson dashed too much. He dashed upon his paunch, and slid in a cloud of dust 20 feet toward third base. Before he could scramble to his feet Beckley returned the ball to Smith, and the Lord Fauntleroy of the League, with his red face speckled with the gloom of the realm, walked with savage mien across the diamond.

The seventh inning was a whale all around. In their turn at the bat the Chicagos pounded out four earned runs on singles by Farrell, Flint and Ryan, a wild pitch and a screaming home run drive to the carriages by Van Haltren. For Pittsburg Sunday lined the ball out to right field and was driven home a moment later by Dunlap, who caught the ball between the shoulders, and dropped it

OVER THE SOUTH WALL.

The score now stood 7 to 4 in favor of Chicago. Captain Anson's men did not get as far as second base in the eighth. Pittsburg, however, made a grand rally. It was a spurt that made Anson tear around like a wild man. After Kuehne had been retired Carroll got a base on balls, then Miller banged the ball to the carriages for three bases, sending Carroll over the plate. Farrell muffed Beckley's fly and the "Calliope" dashed over the plate. It needed only one run more to tie. The broad-shouldered king of batsmen of the old Southern League now faced Dwyer. The Hobart College pitcher and shot a ball as big as a rain barrel over the plate. Maul caught it with his club with a vicious bang and sent it in a dead line over the Congress street wall and among the cottonwood trees. Beckley trotted over the plate and behind him was the gallant Maul, who scored on what everybody then believed to be the winning run. The score now stood 8 to 7 in favor of the Smoky City lads. Flint, who was first to bat for Chicago in the ninth, came on the field with an eye as large as a stovelid and as clear as a Hot Springs diamond. He knocked out his third safe hit of the game. Dwyer and Ryan were quickly retired. The spectators began to leave. Even old Anson was ready to go home. Van Haltren lined the ball far out into right field. Under ordinary circumstances the hit was good for but one base, but Sunday made a fatal error. He fumbled the ball for half a minute. Meantime Flint crossed the plate with the tie run and Van Haltern went to third.

MILLER'S PASSED BALL.

Then Miller had a passed ball and the Californian scored amid loud cheering. Duffy rapped out a single but was nipped while trying to steal second. The visitors got two men on bases in their half, but neither scored.

DECKER A BOOMER.

The Ex-League Umpire Among the Oklahoma Citizens.

S. M. Decker, the ex-League umpire, is now one of the prominent Oklahoma boomers. Mr. Decker is now in the center of the territory, and his shingle as a lawyer is out. In other words, our genial friend Decker has transferred his rare talent of giving opinions from the ball field to what may be termed a higher sphere of judicial life. Decker, doubtless, will make his way, and one of his best recommendations for pluck is the fact that he was a League umpire.

His location in Oklahoma will have no effect on his suit against the League because he can be here on time whenever the suit is dated for a hearing.

A PRETTY STIFF GAME.

The Senators Make an Argument With the Bostons.

BOSTON, June 13.—The Washingtons put up a pretty stiff game of ball to-day, compelling the Bostons to earn all but one of their runs. The visitors could not hit Clarkson beneficially, while on the other hand the Bostons pounded Keefe hard.

O'BRIEN'S PITCHING.

He Was the Stumbling Block of the Hoosiers.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 13.—The home team's inability to bat O'Brien's delivery was the principal cause of the loss of to-day's game. O'Brien's pitching was very effective, and Stricker's second base playing was brilliant. Seery also played fairly, and a one-handed catch by him of a line hit elicited great applause.

The second deposit of $30 a side in the Gusky-Kaufmann baseball match was put up at this office yesterday. The proposed contest is creating considerable excitement. The game is to be played at Recreation Park on Tuesday for $100 a side. The receipts, after expenses, will be devoted to the Johnstown Relief Fund. The Kaufmann nine have been, or at least will be, supplied with handsome uniforms by the Kaufmann firm, and it may be taken for granted that Gusky & Co. will just be as good as the other people in this respect.

HUNGRY FOR SAND.

The Peculiar Famine Among Glass Factories—All on Account of the Flood—Some Have Shut Down as a Result.

A peculiar trouble resulted from the flood. It is a partial famine in sand among the glass factories. Two-thirds of all the factories in Pittsburg, Tarentum, Rochester, Wheeling, Bellaire and Wellsville get their supply of sand from along the Juniata river. The mountains there furnish a fine white rock, which is ground into the best grade of sand used for table glass. When the Pennsylvania Railroad was wrecked by the flood two weeks ago the daily shipments from the Juniata to Pittsburg were suddenly cut off. Since then none has been received here.

The freight officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad the past few days have instituted inquiry among the glassworkers to ascertain how near out of sand they were. If they can not hold out until the Pennsylvania Railroad is rebuilt in the flood districts, then the officials proposed to ship the sand east from Huntingdon to Harrisburg, north from there to Williamsport and Driftwood, and thence to Pittsburg over the Low Grade division of the Allegheny Valley Railroad.

They found that most of the factories in the city and suburbs either had a short supply left or had been borrowing sand from one another. A two weeks' stock of sand at the factories, however, had been well nigh exhausted. It was learned that quite a number of the larger factories would have to suspend operations unless more sand arrived within a week.

The Thompson Glass Works, Uniontown, have shut down on account of the sand supply. This factory has only been in operation a few weeks. The Homestead correspondent of the Glass Budget also writes that the Windsor factory in that place has had to shut down because of scarcity of sand.

Abel, Smith & Co. get their sand from Ohio, but are short on saltcake and lime, and will have to get some of the latter at once from other points to keep the factory going until July 1.

D. Cunningham & Co. and S. McKee & Co., have been short, but are now getting it over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

For the Flood Sufferers.

The students at St. John's School, Southside will give an entertainment June 24, in Salisbury Hall, for the benefit of the flood sufferers. They will be assisted by two young ladies from St. Joseph's Academy, Greensburg.
