General Blair in Hartford.

The Hartford Evening Post, one of the ost dignified and candid papers in New ngland, makes itself responsible for the llowing statement. We should hesitate ng before giving such a charge to the pub con less trustworthy authority:

"General Frank Blair, the democratic candidate for Vice President, made a speech in his city on Monday evening, March 26th, 867, of which the following is an extract:

"Blair—Fel'r Citizens: The freed'm of ew England—the freed'm—the Con'ecticut river 's reduah'd to th' workshops of ew England."

"[A Voice—'Dry up!']

"Blair—The princ'ples of 'r fathers disrim'nate 'r gov'ment from the monar (hic) s of 'r old world, and we have to come own to ab'slute and 'rigidal prop'sitions of —of—lib'ty and 'r pursuit of property!

"[Great confusion in the hall. Cries of Put him out,' etc.]

"Blair (smilingly)—'O, no, don't put 'm ut. He'll be put out when he let's no that e wants to be put out. [Great laughter.] say, don't put 'm out. There such a thing s public 'rpinion, and if a man opposes ublic 'rpinion, and if a man opposes pub c 'rpinion, and makes a nuisance of 'mself, e'll be abated—he will.'

"[Here the chairman whispered to him, nd Blair smiled in a strange manner.]

"Blair—'The gov'ment no longer lxists—ey have sub'stuted for it a gov'ment of ongressional discre'hun—that Congress ithout ref'rence to con'su'shun has proeeded to enact laws in violation of con'su'hun, by which the con'su'shun is tirely nilated.'

"Several voices—'Bah for con'stu'shun.' [Laughter.]

"Blair—'Fel'r citizens, I shay—

"[Here he was interrupted by violent isses and stamping in all parts of the hall.]

"The chairman waved his hand in a beeeching manner for the crowd to be patient.

"Blair—'My fel'r citizens, I shall not deain you but a—'

"[More stamping and hissing, and the hairman waved his hand again.]

"Blair—'I wish t' say that this thing (?) to destroy 'r government, which has been wonder and admiration of the 'r world.'

"Loud hisses were given, and there was reat confusion. The chairman lifted up is forefinger, this time, beseechingly.]

"Blair—'Fel'r citizens. Before—'

"Violent applause and hisses.]

"Blair—'The Con'su'shun'—

"[Cries for 'Doolittle,' 'Doolittle.']

"Blair—'Both prop'sitions.'

"[Renewed hissing and great disorder.]

"[The Chairman—'Order, gentlemen, order.']

"Blair—'It is not true the people of 'r outh'—[Long continued hissing and mock applause.]

"The Chairman—'I beg you gentlemen to e so kind as to hear the argument of our allant (?) friend. He does not deal in delamation.'

"Blair—'How'—

"Voice—'Louder.'

"Blair—'I ask you'—

"[Here the confusion was so great that he meeting threatened to break up in a ow, and many left the hall.]

"Blair—'I say these negroes'—

"A Voice—'D—n the nager; let them go nd give us something else.' [Shouts of aughter.]

"Blair—'We cannot let them go.'

"Same voice—'We hear enuff.' [Laughter.]

"[Blair then directed his remarks to the ndividual who had interrupted him, and his milling countenance indicated, that he enoyed the episode.]

"Blair (turning again to the audience)—I shay'—

"[Great confusion, and cries of 'sit down,' ry up,' with hisses and stamping. Here gentleman on the stage conferred with the hairman, Blair meantime trying to get the ttention of the crowd.]

"Blair—'I was going on to say that these egroes [great shouting]. But as you'll not ear me, I'll give way.'

"He then sat down, greatly to the relief f everybody in the hall.

[The same paper prints elsewhere the following copy of the bill of Mr. F. P. Blair, r., at the Allyn House, in that city, for wo days' stay at that time: "Two days' oard, $10; lemons and whiskey, $65—otal, $75."

Does this this throw any light on the peech?

Cremation in Japan.

The burning of the dead is largely practiced among the Japanese, and of the thirty-ve different forms of worship practiced here, ll equally false, but two demand burial in reference to incremation. My acquaintnce with their mode of burying the dead limited to two funerals, which casually ame before my notice. On one occasion I as returning from a walk, and my path led beside one of the little cemeteries near oto, in which a small party was gathered. was the hour of sunset. A fitting time for n event of tender sorrow. The mourners ere dressed entirely in white, which contrasted with the gaudy robes of a small roup of priests. The corpse, in its enclosure, lay upon a bier, and offerings of green ce and of flowers were made as though to e manes of the dead. Then came the eating of bells and the clang of cymbals. he receptacle which contained the corpse as shaped like a half barrel, and in this e dead was placed in a sitting posture, and l vacant places were filled with combustibles. The friends now all gathered round and commenced a low, plaintive chant, monotonous that it seemed merely the petition of a name, which I suppose to ave been that of one of their deities. They hen separated, and only a few remained to tend to the final service. The receptacle r coffin was placed over a stone trough and overed with a heap of fuel. All gathered n a close circle, and the nearest of the kin n this instance a wife) applied the torch, nd as the flames ascended the monotonous hant and the sound of cymbals were renewed in mournful concert. Excessive rief was decently restrained, except in the ase of a little boy of about ten years, who cept piteously, and was taken aside to be omforted. The group broke, and one after nother departed, leaving the wife above eferred to alone, the image of sorrow, and pparently unable to tear herself from the ashes of her husband.

The effect of a hot climate upon Europeans as compared with native troops is shown n the return of the number of sick men in hospital, and of deaths among the soldiers erving in India. Out of an average strength f 58,841 European troops in 1866, there were 6,128 admissions into hospital and 1,7[illegible] eaths, including 79 from cholera; whi[illegible] t of 99,086 native troops there were 10[illegible] 6 admissions into hospital and 1[illegible] 146 eaths, including 211 from cholera. The verage strength and the number of deaths om cholera among European troop[illegible] ered in all British India in each [illegible] ars 1861-5 respectively, were 72,[illegible] 91 and 979, 71,068 and 508, 64,902 and 231[illegible] 63,284 d 145, and 64,405 and 339. Th[illegible] ngth and number of deaths fr[illegible] om cholera among native troops employ[illegible] ed in all ish India in each of the years [illegible] 1861-5 respectively were 118,890 and 2[illegible] 9, 101,101 268, 97,612 and 181, 95,1[illegible] 1 and 328, d 92,886 and 454.

Floating Ambulances

Have recently been the subject of earnest consideration in Europe among those persons who take an interest in alleviating the suffering of the wounded at sea. The idea naturally sprung from an examination of the land ambulances used in our late civil war and exhibited at the French Exhibition. As the ingenuity of the inventors of the United States had apparently left nothing to be desired in the arrangements for wounded of a land army, the attention of the benevolent of Europe was naturally attracted to relieving the injured combatants at sea. For this purpose it is proposed to employ small steamboats 28 feet long, 6 feet wide, and of proportionate depth of hold. The boats are to be built on an improved model, and with special reference to speed and steadiness. Vessels specially provided for the purpose are to carry them on their decks, and as soon as the fight commences they are to beinstantly lowerd—the fires of their engines having been lighted in advance—and to make their way in whatever direction their services may be needed. The wounded are to be received on two large decks, separated by the machinery, the forward deck having accommodation for seventeen men, and the other deck for thirteen, thirty wounded being the number which each boat will be fitted up to receive.

The moving of the wounded into these boats will be necessarily a delicate operation, but a plan has been devised which will render the task comparatively easy. To avoid lifting the men one by one into the boats, two large wicker baskets are to be employed in each case. These will be attached to one of the lower yards of the fighting ship, and after the wounded men have been placed in them, the baskets, by means of machinery adapted to the purpose, will be swung over the side of the ship upon the deck of the hospital boat, and the sufferers immediately removed and attended to by the surgeons.

To provide against those cases in which a vessel may be sunk by a ram, and to save the crew of the sinking ship, it is proposed that these boats shall each have a raft in tow. These rafts, being composed of a number of India rubber tubes, filled with air when floating, it is stated would occupy but little space aboard ship, but when wanted could be inflated in a few minutes and made ready for service.

How to Succeed.

One of the largest and most successful shoe manufacturers of Lynn worked seven years upon his seat to get a capital of $1,135, with which he commenced business. His earnings during these years were just five dollars a week—two hundred and fifty dollars a year. He paid two dollars a week for board, and made one dollar pay all other expenses, thus saving one hundred and four dollars each year, which, with the interest added, and small amounts gained in trade, amounted in seven years to the sum above named. The first year in business he cleared five hundred dollars, the second a thousand, the third two thousand, all the time cutting his own shoes, and keeping his personal expenses down to the old sum, three dollars per week. As his means increased his operations enlarged, and for several years past he has done a very large and successful business, and is known as one of the best and most liberal of our citizens, giving large sums to charitable purposes. During the year 1867 he did a business of $300,000; the profits on which were $40,000, and the total loss by bad debts one case of boots, worth $150.—Lynn Transcript.

Co-operative Manufacturing Companies are growing in importance in England, as can be seen from the following aggregate return from eight companies, which exhibit the advantage of the systems, especially to the workmen employed: No. of shares issued, 55,508; nominal value of shares, $25, $50, and $62½; total value of shares, $1,927,500; loan account, $732,475; amount of annual business, $2,326,985; wages paid to laborers, $264,025; semi-annual profits, $262,225; dividend paid on loans average 24½ per cent.; value of machinery, &c., $1,765,130. In the towns where these companies are established there are co-operative stores doing an annual business of nearly $6,250,000, and whose capital exceeds $1,500,000, owned by over 20,000 members. There are in Lancashire and Yorkshire at least 100,000 members connected with co-operative stores, in addition to those mentioned above, whose investments equal $4,5000,000.

The Sea Coast of Maine is more extensive than that of any other Atlantic State, its length in a straight line, from Kittery Point to Quoddy Head, is about two hundred and twenty-five miles, but following its widenings it is nearly one thousand miles. This extensive coast, says the Portland Transcript, is diversified by every variety of indentation, affording not only excellent harbors, but the most picturesque scenery. The shore is fringed by the sea and bays, inlets, coves, creeks, straits, and penetrates far into the land, while bold headlands and peninsulas project into the sea. The coast is dotted with most lovely islands, elevated, wooded, and many of them crowned with lighthouses. There are forty-one lighthouses on the coast.

A Cheap Ice Pitcher.—The following is a simple method of keeping ice water for a long time in a common pitcher: Place between two sheets of paper (newspaper will answer, thick brown is better) a layer of cotton batting about half an inch in thickness, fasten the ends of the paper and batting together, forming a circle, then sew or paste a crown over one end, making a box in the shape of a stove-pipe hat, minus the rim. Place this over an ordinary pitcher filled with ice water, making it deep enough to rest on the table, so as to exclude the air, and the reader will be astonished at the length of time his ice will keep and the water remain cold after the ice is melted.

J. B. HARRIS' SAFETY FIRE JACKET,

Car Heater and Moderator,

For SMOKE AND HOT AIR FLUES, dispensing with the use of Stoves and Fires in or about the Passenger or Baggage Cars, with the attachment to graduate the heat to any temperature that may be desired without the possibility of firing the car or cars to which the Jacket may be attached.

Having obtained of the United States Letters Patent for a Safety Jacket which is warranted to resist the most intense heat that may be applied to it in the position and purpose for which it is intended. It is a sure protection from accidents by fire, originating from defective flues, or where iron pipes are used as conductors for smoke or heat. It is applicable to all piping that may become overheated, and is warranted to give perfect satisfaction where wood or other combustible material may be placed in close proximity thereto. I am now ready to apply my invention to stores, dwellings, factories, ships, steamboats, railroad cars, &c., wherever pipes as conductors are made dangerous by being overheated and security desired. I will sell, on application, rights to manufacture or to use the above invention; also, territorial rights, to such as may wish to engage in selling privileges, either by State or county.
