WANT OF DISCIPLINE.

Interesting Developments Promised at the Meeting of

THE REFORMED PRESBYTERIANS.

The Presbytery is at Present in Session at Wilkinsburg.

REAL BUSINESS IS TO COME UP TO-DAY

The semi-annual meeting of the Pittsburg Presbytery of the Reformed Presbyterian Church, opened in Wilkinsburg yesterday afternoon.

This meeting had been looked forward to with considerable interest, on account of the liberal spirit that has been displayed by certain members of the church, and that is expected to call for discipline. This matter will come up to-day.

The meeting opened with prayer by Rev. Dr. David McAllister, of the Eighth street church, Pittsburg. The Moderator, Dr. McAllister, and the Clerk, Rev. W. R. Laird, were re-elected, and John T. Morton was made Assistant Clerk in place of H. W. Reed, of Youngstown, who was the assistant clerk last year. All the officers are of the conservative party, and the liberal element feel that the purpose of the election was to enable the conservatives to control the meeting from the outset.

The first business after the election was the presentation of reports from the different congregations represented. Then half a dozen memorials were handed in from various churches asking that the 17 members of the Presbytery who had expressed liberal views at a meeting in Rev. J. B. Milligan's church in the East End last spring be disciplined. The memorials said that any disposition to override in any way the principles and practice of the Reformed Presbyterian Church should be punished. The papers were taken and referred to the Committee on Discipline. All the memorials were written in the same spirit, leading to the suspicion that the same hand was at the back of them all. There is a very strong feeling on the question involved, which is whether members of the church should be allowed to vote at civil elections. Some bitter controversy is expected to take place to-day.

The rest of the afternoon session was occupied by sermons by st dents. Four of them spoke. Their names were John Duncan, S. McNaugher, E. McBurney and R. J. McMillan.

In the evening four more students spoke, as follows: T. J. Speer, a sermon; D. McAllister, Jr., read a historical essay; P. McDonald lectured, and W. J. McKnight delivered a sermon. This brought the day's proceedings to a close. At 9 o'clock this morning the Presbytery will meet again, and the real business of the session will commence.

THEA, DAUGHTER OF CAMELLIA.

Some Common Mistakes Regarding the Climate Necessary to Her Health.

CHAPTER VI.

THEA is generally believed by those not acquainted with the home life of Thea Senensis that this genus is indigenous to and will only thrive in a hot climate. This is but one of the errors people have fallen into, simply from a lack of knowledge regarding our heroine.

Thea is more of a cosmopolitan than many people credit her with being, and if she does not live in all countries the inhabitants are in a measure to blame. If one will visit the most northern latitudes of China, Thea will be found in perfect health and vigor. In Japan it is a very common thing to see Thea out in a snow storm and covered with the fleecy substance. Instead of injuring her health, she seems to thrive by this harsh inattention to the common rules of self-preservation.

'Tis not the cold that injures Thea's health, but 'tis the sudden changes, the warm suns, followed by cold snaps that cause her to catch cold, which soon develops into consumption, and she soon fades away and dies. Thea has been reared to maturity within a few miles of Pittsburg, and there are many places in the United States where she would spend a happy existence. If such be the case, you naturally ask: "Then, why do the people of the United States not adopt Thea and rear her from childhood in their own land and do away with such long voyages to the far east?"

The answer is simple enough. It all hinges on the question of labor. In China a coolie can be hired for nearly as much a month as an American would want a day, and it would not pay to colonize Thea in this country, owing to that fact. A protective tariff would not help matters except to raise the price. Purity is the thing the American people want, and it's believed they appreciate an endeavor to bring about such a change. The Chinese have long enough shrouded Thea in mystery—metaphorically speaking—we might say in poisons—but they do so only because of a desire to please their customers, and the latter, though they know that people have altogether wrong impressions of Thea, hesitate to break the spell; but it has at last been done, and for further information the reader is referred to the author.

B[U]Y HE NO TEE.

[The next chapter will tell of Thea's preparations before going abroad. It will be interesting and instructive. The author is striving to attain an honest popularity, and thanks the public for their kind indulgence thus far.]
