THE COURTS.

Court of Quarter Sessions—Judge Stowe—Trial of John Bell, Charles Proutt and Thomas C. Graham for Arson.

MONDAY, March 29.—The case of the Commonwealth vs. John Bell, Charles Proutt and Thomas C. Graham, indictment, wilful and malicious burning, was taken up. Mr. Bell owned a trunk store on Market street. On the 19th of October the fire broke out in the establishment which resulted in the destruction of property to the value of between $200 and $300. The alarm was given, and but for the prompt arrival of the firemen the damage would have been more serious. It was charged that Bell conspired with the other defendants to procure the burning of his establishment, in order to secure the insurance on the stock, amounting to four thousand dollars, which had been effected in the Ætna Company, of Hartford, Conn., three thousand in the Putnam, and four thousand in an Albany Company.

The Commonwealth is represented by District Attorney, and Messrs. Patterson and A. C. Cochran. R. Lee, Esq., appears in behalf of Graham, and John W. Tay[illegible] Mr. Bell.

[illegible]affey was called to testify on the Commonwealth. This [illegible]tly indicted with the other [illegible]nt the jury are not sworn [illegible]e testified as follows:

[illegible]or Mr. Bell; had been for six [illegible] months; had worked before for [illegible]; had worked there four weeks, when one day as I was coming down stairs he called me into the cutting room and locked the door, and talked of counterfeit money; said he had lived an honest life long enough. He said he wanted me to do him a favor; I said, "Anything I can, John, I'll do." He said he couldn't carry on the shop any longer, it was gone for want of money; said he was insured for ten thousand dollars, and for me to burn down the shop, he would go into another business; I told him I would see. We went to a beer saloon, first door below him, and drank together; went to dinner and came back to work; worked two weeks after that; one day he said to me, at my bench, for me to come back to the shop after supper. I did so, and as he wished, I brought a candle; I got it in a candle store. He wanted to know the best way to burn the shop. I said "John, I don't want to do it;" as I was a stranger I didn't want to get into difficulty. He asked me to get some one to do it, and I said I thought I could. I mentioned it to Proutt, who boarded where I did. He (Proutt) said he would burn it if Bell could accompany him. I told Bell this. He (Bell) said he would pay him. I asked if I could depend on him. I said he could; that he (Proutt) was a rare, clever fellow, and I didn't think he would squeal." I introduced him to him in an alley, back of the shop; two or three days after; they talked in a shed; he said he'd go away in two weeks to get trunks, and to do it while he was away; said he thought he was suspected at the last fire. Bell, before going away from the city, came to me and said he had got another man—Graham—to assist in the burning. Proutt would set fire down stairs and Graham up. The varnish was up stairs and the barrels down stairs, and Bell said to fire the varnish. Before going away we got a trunk box, put the candle in it, and set it on fire to see how long it would burn in the box. Graham went to Allegheny and Proutt and I went away. The candle burned from two to two and a half hours. Bell went away and was gone from two weeks to ten days; when he came back he shook hands with me and went back to the shop. After supper he came to me and said, "the dung has choked you." He then said his wife was ill—that he had to go away with her, and to have it done then, sure. He gave me twenty dollars; I gave it to Proutt, and money to Graham to buy candles. He bought eight in Allegheny city, and brought them over. Bell came back, and came to my bench, and shook hands with me; he looked down hearted. Before supper Bell and I and Tom Collins went into the Shakspeare saloon and drank and talked it over. Collins stood on one side; said he didn't want to hear anything of our business. A few days after this—the day after the Mayor's election—Bell said he'd go away next day, and I said I'd go to Cleveland to vote; Bell said to go and return and help Graham and Proutt do it. Bell that night introduced me to Ward Nicholson, a livery stable keeper, who had bought a horse of him. Bell wanted $20 for me; Ward said to come at nine o'clock in the morning. Bell said he must go to the shop; next morning I eat oysters, then went to the livery stable and waited for the money; got none; reported to Bell; he said, "I'll go and shove my watch;" he did go on Smithfield street. Bell came back and said he had "shoved" his watch for thirty dollars; he gave me twenty; he took me to a gambling shop; he bought me two dollars' worth of "chips"—gambler's ivory; I was pretty full. Went to the National Hotel and went to bed; stayed there all night and then went to McKeesport and stayed there till Thursday afternoon. My wife came down with an order on Bell on Tuesday; I got home Thursday night; not to the shop; Graham was there; he said he had a friend named Fallamby, who went home the same way he did of evenings; he wanted to go home with Fallamby and "shape" him; Graham went up stairs with two candles; I went out and Proutt was there; he took three candles in a trunk box in the cellar; we then put candles in a round little box, and candles in another box; we commenced then to keep the light down; we lighted them, left, and it was three hours before the alarm. I went to McKeesport on the 10:30 train. I put down the cellar door, and all went away. Graham home, Proutt to the boarding house and I to McKeesport. The fire was at eight and a half or nine; we were not over twenty minutes at the building. In one and a half or two hours after lying the alarm was given; saw Bell on Monday after the fire; Bell came to my bench and "Wat" with him; they were fussin' among and noisy about the rumors of the fire; Bell said, "You'd better leave; there's a letter advertised for you in the Postoffice, but don't go for it; they won't arrest at until they arrest you." I went up stairs crying, and bid the boys good-by; Bell slipped me ten dollars and said, "I'll send you more." Then went to McKeesport; came back; called at Bell's house; saw him; he took his overcoat and umbrella, and we walked out. I asked him to go and drink; he said he wouldn't drink, but for me to be careful—that there was a warrant out for me. I met him again in his own shop at night; he was crying, and said "if you squeal it will ruin me and my family." He went out, saying he would borrow fifty dollars for me; he did so, and gave it to me, and said to me, "Wat knows you are in town." I said, "If I don't have money, how can I go?" I was arrested on Sunday. I went to Proutt's shop; he was busy; met him at his boarding house; he wanted me to leave; said he was going to leave himself. He asked me for money; gave him $5; did not see Graham.

Duffy underwent a lengthy and searching cross-examination, at the hands of Mr. Gibson, during which he denied having said at a previous examination (before the Mayor) that he was not in Pittsburgh on the night of the fire; he also denied that Mr. Bell had ever accused him of circulating reports of his (Bell's) having asked him to burn down the shop, and that Mr. Bell had discharged him on account of it. The cross-examination of the witness was not concluded, and will be resumed upon the opening of Court this morning.

NEW BRIGHTON.

(Correspondence of the Pittsburgh Gazette.)

NEW BRIGHTON, March 26, 1869.

In my article on the New Brighton churches, some time ago, typo made me give the probable value of the First Methodist Church at $55,000. It should be $25,000. I sent a correction soon after but it did not appear.

In regard to the Quaker Church, I was mistaken. I gave it at $5,000, which is much too high. I thought the building was better than it is and the grounds more extensive. It is not worth more than about one fourth of the above amount.

At the recent Court in Beaver county there were a number of applications for eating house (which means drinking house) licenses in New Brighton, and also in Bridgewater, but the Temperance people remonstrated and none were granted. Those in Bridgewater were for tavern licenses. Thank fortune there is here and there a Judge who respects the wishes of the people in these things and is not afraid to do right. May their number increase.

The Luckiest Man in America.

(New York Correspondence Cincinnati Times.)

At the Metropolitan Hotel are nineteen citizens of Montana, the most distant of our possessions. They came 3,000 miles, across mountains, deserts, prairies and rivers, in ten days, to purchase goods and supplies for Helena, now the capital of Montana. With them is the famous "Quartz King," James W. Whitlatch, whose history is a romance transcending the wildest vagaries of fiction in interest and incident. As a representative man he illustrates the power of energy and perseverance in conquering obstacles interposed to pioneer life, and moulding fate to human purposes.

Jim Whitlatch, as he is called, was born in Pennsylvania, of indigent parents, and the death of his father left him to shift for himself at the age of eight years. In 1850 he accompanied an acquaintance on the way to California as far as Kansas, where his friend, awed by the perils of the journey, deserted him and returned to the States.

Whitlach hired as a cattle driver, pushed on to Colorado, and, after the season of hay making, commenced mining on his own account. By diligence and perseverance he accumulated some $5,000, which he lost by wild cat speculations. He spent three years in this region, with variable fortune, and moved on to Nevada, where he was more successful, and again lost all by imprudent ventures. With nothing but his rifle and mining kit, in 1865, he wandered across Idaho to the placer diggings of Montana, whose productiveness had just attracted attention. Here he was so delighted with the picturesque beauty and fertility of the country that he decided, for the first time, during his adventurous wanderings, to settle and begin anew. With only twenty-five cents in his pocket, he commenced prospecting for gold. Concluding that where so much gold abounded on the surface it must come from somewhere, he set about finding the origin. For weeks he wandered up and down the canons, built himself a cabin, and pursued his labors amid the jeers of old miners, who had been discouraged in the search before. After months of labor and trials enough to discourage any less determined man, one day his experienced eye discovered, in a lucky "GOPHER HOLE," an unusual quantity of specimens of gold bearing quartz. Inspired with renewed hope the young man plied his pick and shovel, and at a distance of three feet below the surface uncovered the long sought vein, now known as the "Union Mine," whence he derived the foundation of his fortune, and from which his successors, the New York Mining Company, to whom he sold—to enable him to prospect further—will continue to obtain untold millions. It is said that this mine alone contains ore enough to employ a thousand men in digging for a hundred years. Whitlach, however, continued his investigations, and opened other mines equally rich, procured stamping mills and batteries, enlisted new capital and enterprise, incited emigration to Helena—then a little collection of miners' huts—and to-day at the age of twenty-six, is worth a million of dollars.

THE ECONOMY BUTTER CO.

ask the attention of all interested in the reduction of the extravagant cost of Butter, to their practical and economical system of making pure prime Butter by the aid of the

EXTRACT OF BUTTER PLANT.

A brief allusion to the origin of this important discovery may not prove uninteresting. Among the authenticated records of the renowned Captain Cook's voyage around the world, is found the statement, that while sojourning for a short time on the Brazilian Coast of South America, he observed the natives using, in the preparation of their food, a peculiar oil, which, upon examination, he found to possess the appearance, taste and flavor of Butter; upon further inquiry, however, he ascertained that it was simply a substance that the natives distilled in a crude and imperfect manner, from a rich and luxurious plant that grew spontaneously and abundantly in that warm tropical country. A few years since an eminent French chemist, while on a professional visit to the tropics, made numerous experiments with this remarkable production of nature, and succeeded in extracting a concentrated essence of the plant. The formula for its preparation and the sole right for its sale in this country are the exclusive property of this Company, by whom it was purchased from the original discoverer. We claim for this remarkable, yet simple and perfectly harmless preparation—

1st.—That by its use a net gain of from 50 to 800 per cent. is made in the manufacture of Butter.

2d.—That Butter, which from age or whatever cause, may be strong, rancid, streaked or coarse-grained, and comparatively useless for general use, by the aid of this Extract, is restored to its original freshness and sweetness, fine-grain, and even color.

3d.—By the use of this Extract, one pound of delicious, fresh Butter is actually made from one pint of milk.

4th.—That a pure and excellent table Butter can be made, at a cost of from 18 to 30 cents per pound. The chief expense, wherein being Butter, which is the essential base.

5th.—That Butter manufactured by the aid of this Extract is equally every respect to the best Butter made by the ordinary method.

6th.—The Extract after thorough analysis, by able chemists, is pronounced perfectly free from any deleterious substance, the ingredients being purely of a vegetable nature.

7th.—In proof of the foregoing assertions, the factory of this Company is making one ton of Butter per day, which meets with ready sale in the New York Market, and is consumed from the tables of the first Hotels, Restaurants and Private families in this city and elsewhere.

A sample package of the Extract sufficient to make 50 lbs. of Butter, with full directions for use, will be sent to any address on receipt of $1.

CAUTION.—As articles of real merit are subject to spurious imitations, we would specially caution the public against counterfeits and worthless imitations, advertised as powders, compounds, &c., as the Extract of the Butter Plant is prepared and sold only by
