Agricultural.

Agricultural Notes for December.

In Northern latitudes, the watchword will be, during several successive months—"Prepare for winter—stop up the cracks—keep out the cold air." A fair supply of fresh air is a source of life and health to people and to all kinds of domestic animals.—But too much of this good thing is as fatal to life and health, as the water of the briny deep will be to the famishing mariner, when clinging to a portion of his wrecked vessel, longing for water, when nothing but a boundless sea surrounds him.

Stop the cracks in the stable floor, the large cracks in the wainscoting, and the cracks about the stable doors. But, cut a large hole down through the mow, and open the windows in the attic of the stable, to let out the foul air, and to admit pure air. If the boards on the barn or stable have shrunk, so that large open cracks let in a torrent of cold air, cut off the nails with a sharp cold chisl, some warm day, joint the boards and nail them on again. This will require a few hours work and a few pounds of nails. But the profits may be set down in figures representing the value of the health of horses, and hundreds of pounds of meal and hay.—Horses contract cold, sometimes, as readily as a person, when cold air falls on them; and a current of cold air on a milch cow, will be the means of appropriating much of the material that would make rich milk, to keeping her body comfortably warm.

Stopping the cracks with mortar, in the cellar wall, will sometimes subserve the same purpose of a protection made of manure or straw on the outside. Whenever it is difficult to keep the temperature of a cellar above the freezing point, the better way is to put fire in a small stove in the cellar, during the coldest weather. If all the cracks are properly stopped, a very little fire will keep everything from freezing. All kinds of fruit and vegetables should be kept where the atmosphere is as cold as it can be, without freezing such articles as will be injured by frost.

In some dwelling houses, the window sashes were fitted very loosely, so that they often rattle, during a windy night, as if a band of midnight robbers were making desperate efforts to effect an entrance.

Many people erect a small temporary vestibule, say four feet square, around the outside door; and others hang a second door on the outside of the casing, to keep out the cold, both of which will be the means of saving much fuel, during the dreary winters of the Northern States.

If all fruit trees and bushes that bear fruit have not been properly protected, let them not be neglected. Last winter, thousands upon thousands of large fruit trees in full bearing were girdled by mice, so that they died. The surest way to save trees from the depredations of mice and rabbits in winter is, to raise a mound of earth a few inches high, around each tree, and wrap a few thicknesses of newspaper or coarse wrapping paper around the body of each tree, and secure it with coarse wrapping yarn, and apply a coat of coal tar to the paper. This will be found a complete security; and the tar will not injure the trees. But, if tar be applied directly to the bark of fruit trees, it is liable to injure, or kill them.

Grape vines in latitudes north of New York city—except in certain localities—should be cut loose from the trellises, and covered with earth. In many localities south of New York, it will pay exceedingly well to lay down grape vines, raspberry bushes and blackberry bushes. We have seen hundreds of grape vines, in different parts of New Jersey, during the past summer, that would have yielded more than twice the quantity that did grow on them, if they had been laid down during the winter.

Raise a little wheat. Almost every farmer in the New England States might raise wheat enough for his own family, by proper management. If the land is too wet, drain it. Then, plow the ground deep, at any time during the winter. If the stratum of mould be thin, turn the soil with a common plow as deep as the mould extends. Then, bank up the substratum with a subsoil plow, which will pulverize the seed bed without turning the mould beneath the cold, stubborn subsoil. Apply a liberal dressing of fine manure, and harrow it in. The best soil should always be kept on the surface. There is no difficulty in growing a fair crop of wheat, provided the seed has been well selected from year to year, and provided also, the ground is thoroughly cultivated and fertilized with rich manure, that will make grain rather than straw. Manure that has been made of nothing but hay and straw, will produce a bountiful crop of grass and a large yield of wheat straw.—But, straw will not make wheat.

Mingling various kinds of fodder together is an excellent practice.—Neat cattle and sheep will eat more straw in a day, if they are fed some hay and a small quantity of grain, than if they were confined solely to straw. Sheep will thrive satisfactorily on bright straw if they get a pound of grain each per day, with a few mouthfuls of turnips, or potatoes and water. Lambs should have not less than half a pound daily of grain. Oats and Indian corn will make excellent food for lambs. But, whatever may be the food of sheep or lambs, they need a dry place, day and night. A shelter that lets a portion of the rain through the roof, and a yard that is not dry, will make a very unprofitable place for sheep of any kind.

Improve the mild and favorable weather to top-dress lawns; to pick stones and sticks from meadows; to cut timber to be hauled after snow has fallen; to cut up and grub up hedges of various kinds of bushes; and to consumate numerous small jobs that were necessarily neglected when the labors of the field were urgent. Much labor may be performed during the winter months, in the garden and on the farm, if the management is timely and judicious.

DEWITT & DITTRICH'S

TEMPLE OF MUSIC!

TOWANDA, PA.

NEW INVENTION IN PIANOS!

The MATHUSHEK PIANOS, recently invented by Mr. Frederick Mathushek (author of the principal improvements in pianos), differ from all others in having the strings cross the frame in both directions. This equalizes the strain upon the frame, and insures greater durability and longer continuance in tune than can be had by any other method. The Bridge, also, runs the whole length of the sounding-board, an entirely new feature, which gives greater power and better tone than is found in any other instruments.

The smallest size square, the Colibri, four feet nine inches long, seven octaves, equals in all respects the full size of other makers; while the full size, the Orchestral, is equal to any Concert Grand.

Franz Schloutér, the eminent pianist, says. "The Colibri I consider the chef d'onvre in this musical world. Its tone is not equalled by the largest sized square or upright pianos of any factory in this country."

H. Mollenhauer, of the Conservatory of Music, says: "I with great pleasure bear my unqualified testimony to the great superiority of the Mathushek Pianos over all others." Many other testimonials, equally strong, have been freely given. Please call and examine, or send for descriptive circulars.

It is universally admitted that Haines Bros are the cheapest first class Piano made, and DeWitt & Dittrich by dealing largely in them can furnish an elegant Rosewood Piano for $375. Send for circular. Handsome Piano Stools and Covers, Organs and Melodeons of the best quality at the most reasonable prices.—Large stock of Sheet Music constantly on hand, sent by mail on receipt of marked price.
