Agricultural.

Two Hints for Horsemen: 1. To prevent chafing the breats of horses. The common practice of using pads or sheepskins under collars is objectionable, especially in warm weather, because it accumulates heat and makes the breast tender. A better way is to take a piece of thick and smooth leather, cut out just the size of the collar, or a little wider, and let it lie flat on the neck and shoulders of the horse. This will lie smooth on the neck, while the collar itself moves without chafing. In addition to this, let the breasts of working horses be washed off every night with clean water.

2. In reference to blanketing horses in winter. It is doubtless true that blanketing keeps a horse's coat smoother in winter. And hence, fine carriage horses and saddle horses will doubtless continue to be blanketed. But where horses are kept more for service than for show, we think they had better dispense with the blanket. Keeping them constantly covered makes them tender and liable to take cold. Better give them a warm, stable, plenty of straw for bedding, and good food. When they are to stand for any length of time out of doors on a cold winter's day, they should have blankets. And so when they come in from work steaming hot, they should be allowed to stand a short time until they have partially cooled off; then the blanket should be put on for an hour. Be careful and not delay putting on the blanket until they have become chilled.—Rural American.

Animals that Chew the Cud.—Ruminating animals gather their food rapidly, give it a few cuts with their teeth, and swallow it. It goes to an interior receptacle, where it is moistened; this is very essential if it be the dry hay. When the animal has filled himself, he masticates the food thus stowed away in his stomach, raising it cud by cud. When a portion is completely masticated, it passes into another receptable, and the process of digestion goes on. Thus an ox, if left to himself, will raise and masticate all the food thus stowed away in his stomach. If he be pushed and worked hard, and does not have much time to masticate, he falls of in flesh, his health is poor, his digestion is incomplete. The horse, on the contrary, however much he may be in a hurry, he must masticate each mouthful before he swallows it. A hungry ox let into a meadow will fill himself in twenty minutes, while a horse would want at least an hour and twenty minutes to take the same amount of grass. The deer, sheep, goat, chamois, and rabbit, being the natural prey of ferocious beasts, are endowed with the extra stomach in which hastily to stow away his food without mastication. This may be regarded as a wise provision of nature, enabling them to sally forth where the food is plenty, and in a short time fill themselves and retire to a place of safety, to ruminate their food at their leisure.

Boiled Potatoes.—Not one housekeeper out of ten knows how to boil potatoes properly. Here is an Irish method, one of the best we know of. Clean wash the potatoes, and leave the skin on; then bring the water to a boil, and throw them in. As soon as boiled soft enough for a fork to be easily thrust through them, dash some cold water in the pot, let the potatoes remain two minutes, and then pour off the water. This done, half remove the pot-lid, and let the potatoes remain over a slow fire till the steam is evaporated, then peel, and set them on the table in an open dish. Potatoes of a good kind, thus cooked, will always be sweet, dry, and mealy. A covered dish is bad for potatoes, as it keeps the steam in and makes them soft and watery.

Sheep should have dry sheds, sunny yards, and be fed from racks and troughs. Graining should commence as grass fails, and the flocks should be so divided that those placed together are of about equal strength. The high price of linseed cake and meal will prevent their use to a great extent. Corn is the natural substitute, and a good one, but it must be used with great caution. Keep sheep constantly and gradually gaining. Ewes served in November will yearn in April; that is, 150 days.

To make a cake without eggs, take two cups of sugar, dissolved in three cups of buttermilk; sift one quart of flour, and work into it two large table-spoonfuls of butter, (or good sweet lard with a little salt); one teaspoonful of finely pulverized soda. Stir these to a smooth batter; flavor with extract of lemon or vanilla, and bake in a quick oven. This will keep three days, and is better the second day than the first, if it is put in a stone jar and covered close as soon as cold.

Rats in Oats.—A Southern paper says that the rats may be effectually kept from oats in the stack, or in the barn, by sprinkling wood ashes pretty freely among the bundles.

The ashes get into the nose and eyes of the rats, producting a disagreeable sensation, and they leave the premises.

The ashes at the same time will be beneficial to the stock.

Cisterns should be cleaned and put in order to be filled for winter. It is well also to look after the arrangements for supplying the farm stock with water during the winter. If there is not a supply in the barnyard, perhaps a few dollars expended rightly will bring down an unfailing stream from a spring.

We see it stated that coal or gas tar applied about a corn-crib will keep the grain from devastation by rats.

If you would not have your horses acquire the habit of hanging in the halter, do not strike him in front when young.

The best food for fattening fowls is said to be ground oats mixed to a dough with water or milk. The latter is the best.

Professor Spooner objects to sawing off or shortening the horns of cattle. It gives pain to the animal and impairs its strength.

An item of importance in plowing, to see, before begining, if there is any defect in the surface of the ground that can be modified or corrected.

The Norfolk Chronicle condemns the use of check reins on horse. They spoil their mouths, impare their tempers, and render them generally uneasy.

ROSENBERG & WOLFF,

Would respectfully announce to the citizens of Towanda and vicinity, that they have opened the above store, under the name of "The Towanda Regulator," with a splendid assortment

OF READY MADE CLOTHING!

Gents Furnishing Goods, Hats, Caps, &c., &c., which they assure the said citizens cannot be excelled in style or elegance, and that the prices are so low as to astonish everybody.—Rosenberg & Wolff hope that by strict attention, and fair dealing with the people of Towanda, they will obtain their patronage and support. They also beg to subjoin the following Commandments for their guidance.

COME ONE! COME ALL!

At Rosenberg & Wolff's One Price Regulator, Main Street, Towanda, Pa.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS,

Keep them, and Happy will be Thy Days.

1. Thou shalt have no other place to buy clothing except Rosenberg & Wolff's One Price Regulator, Main Street.

2. Thou shalt not choose any other merchant: though shalt not listen to their speeches, for Rosenberg & Wolff are no Chatham-st. dealers, but sell at one price, and reliable, and will serve you unto the third and fourth generation.

3. Thou shalt not seek in vain any more for cheap raiment, for they can be found at Rosenberg & Wolff's One Price Store.

4. Thou shalt bear in mind that we sell only on six days of the week, and don't desecrate the Sabbath by keeping our doors open and hangin out a show, for, on the seventh day, Rosenberg & Wolff, and their clerks, desire to rest from their labors.

5. Thou shalt honor the way Rosenberg & Wolff deal, and long may be thy days to enjoy its benefits.

6. Thou shalt not commit an impropriety—of buying of Chatham st. Dealers, but come direct to Rosenberg & Wolff's One Price Regulator, Main street.

7. Thou shalt not seek in vain for goods of Foreign make, for Rosenberg, & Wolff keep a large variety.

8. Thou shalt not purloin from the Regulator for Rosenberg & Wolff sell so cheap it would be a sin.

9. Thou shalt not bear false witness, but honestly acknowledge that you can get better suited and for less money, at Rosenberg & Wolff's than any other store.

10. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbors goods or his bargains, for Rosenberg & Wolff can give them to you likewise; therefore, take counsel, and buy only of Rosenberg & Wolff the Once Price Men.
