The Preservative Power of Ferns.

For many years, in England, ferns have been employed as a means of preserving fruit which is to be transported to any distance. Their use tends to prevent mould and decay. They are also used in packing fish to send from the coast to London; also to line the hampers which contain fresh vegetables for the city markets.

In this country there is, comparatively speaking, but little use made of them. Our fields and hillsides are covered with their bright-green plumes; and in the economy of nature, there surely must be found some gap for them to fill. We believe that there is no plant growing on the earth which has not its utility.

There can be but little doubt but what ferns contain some peculiar preservative power. Both the bracken and the male fern abound in alkaline matter which was formerly used by soap and glass manufacturers in England; and their stringent properties are well known to the dressers of leather.

The aroma of this genus of plants is repugnant to most insects, and inimical to the growth of that species of fungi known as mould; hence, the leaves could not but be of use in packing those fruits liable to its attack.

They might be made available by our peach growers in sending their fruit to market. If the baskets were lined with the leaves, and they were laid between the fruit, we think it would arrive at its destination in good order, and there would be no complaints about its decay.

The peculiar odor thrown off by ferns is familiar to all who have gathered and pressed their fronds. It is slightly aromatic, and very agreeable. Is it due to an essential oil contained therein? All of us who dabble in paste know well that a few drops of essential oil of any kind will prevent, to a great extent, the growth of fungi upon its surface. Would not fern leaves boiled in it prove equally preservative?

The root of the male fern (Lastrea filix mas), when administered in the form of a powder, is a prompt anthelmintic, and, it is said, will destroy even the tape worm.

In some parts of Germany and Denmark, beech leaves are used to stuff mattresses, because fleas and bugs cannot exist among them. Would not the dried leaves of the bracken and fern which abound in all our farming districts be found a great improvement upon the rye.

They would certainly be preferable to the split corn-husks and the "Excelsior" stuffing so extensively employed by the upholsterers.

If they would prove deadly to bugs and moths, they would certainly create a new era in bedding and furniture.

The young fronds of the male fern, when cooked and served on toast, like asparagus, are said to greatly resemble that vegetable. Dried ferns would also be a valuable protection against cold, and would preserve delicate shrubs and roses, as well as the hemlock-branches, which are so extensively used for that purpose.

In Somerset county, England, they are in great request for covering potato "buries," in lieu of straw, and are said to resist all mould and dampness. We hope our readers in the coming season will test their preservative power, and secure this valuable remedy against the pests of mildew, moth, and mould.—Hearth and Home.

Recipes.

LEMON RICE PUDDING.—Two quarts of milk, one cup of rice; set it on the stove and boil until soft, stirring all the time to keep from scorching. Then add one coffee-cup of sugar, some butter, one lemon cut very fine, the yolks of three eggs—then bake. When done, beat the whites to a froth, add a little white sugar spread on evenly, and set in the oven, not long enough to brown. A dip of some kind, if you choose.

LEMON PIE.—Take one lemon, peel and mash the lemon with one cup of sugar; chop a part of the peel very fine; one-half cup of water, one table-spoon of flour, the yolks of three eggs—beat all together—then turn in a tin with a nice crust. When done, beat the whites to a froth, add some sugar spread on evenly, set in the oven until done; don't brown it.

BERRY SHORTCAKE.—Three eggs, one cup of sour cream, half teaspoon soda, a little salt; add flour enough to make a thick batter; put a layer of batter in your tin, then your berries; cover with batter and bake. To be eaten with sweetened cream.

—FRUIT TREES.—The following respecting fruit will be found interesting.

1. When fruit threes occupy the ground nothing else should—except very short grass.

2. Fruitfulness and growth of tree cannot be expected the same year.

3. There is no plum that the curculio will not take, though any kind may sometimes escape for one year in one place.

4. Peach borers will not do much damage when stiff clay is heaped up around the tree a foot high.

5. Pear blight still puzzles the greatest men. The best remedy known is to plant two for every one that dies.

6. If you dont know how to prune, don't hire a man from the other side of the sea who knows less than you.

7. Don't cut off a big lower limb unless you are a renter, and don't care what becomes of the tree when your time is out.

8. A tree with limbs coming out near the ground is worth two trees trimmed up five feet, and worth four trees trimmed up ten feet, and so on till they are not worth anything.

9. Trim down, not up.

10. Shorten in, not lengthen up.

11. If you had your arm cut off, you would feel it to your heart—a tree will not feel, but rot to the heart.

12. When anybody tells you of a gardner that understands all about horticulture and agriculture, and that he can be hired, don't believe a word of it, for there are no such to be hired. Such a man can make more than you can afford to give him, and if he has sense enough to understand the business, he will also have enough to know this.

AN OLD stable-builder in Baltimore has come to the conclusion, after twenty-five years' trial, that a two-inch white pine plank floor, laid level, with a square iron two-by-two and a half grating, so placed as to receive the urine, is the best arrangment for a horse. Clay, stones, concrete, etc., he rejects. The width of a horse-stall should be four feet-nine inches.

Keep them, and Happy will be Thy Days.

1. Thou shalt have no other place to buy clothing except Rosenberg & Wolff's One Price Regulator, Main Street.

2. Thou shalt not choose any other merchant; thou shalt not listen to their speeches, for Rosenburg & Wolff are no Chatham-st. dealers, but sell at one price, and reliable, and will serve you unto the third and fourth generation.

3. Thou shalt not seek in vain any more for cheap raiment, for they can be found at Rosenberg & Wolff's One Price Store.

4. Thou shalt bear in mind that we sell only on six days of the week, and don't desecrate the Sabbath by keeping our doors open and hanging out a show, for, on the seventh day, Rosenberg & Wolff, and their clerks, desire to rest from their labors.

5. Thou shalt honor the way Rosenberg & Wolff deal, and long may be thy days to enjoy its benefits.

6. Thou shalt not commit an impropriety—of buying of Chatham-st. Dealers, but come directly to Rosenberg & Wolff's One Price Regulator, Main street.

7. Thou shalt not seek in vain for goods of Foreign make, for Rosenberg & Wolff keep a large variety.

8. Thou shalt not purloin from the Regulator for Rosenberg & Wolff sell so cheap it would be a sin.

9. Thou shalt not bear false witness, but honestly acknowledge that you can get better suited and for less money, at Rosenberg and Wolff's, than any other store.

10. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's goods, or his bargains, for Rosenberg & Wolff can give them to you likewise; therefore, take counsel, and buy only of Rosenberg & Wolff, the One Price Men.
