[For the REPORTER.]

Chester White Pigs.

Mr. EDITOR: Last Summer I wrote to a gentleman largely engaged in the breeding of the celebrated Chester White Pigs, in Chester county, this State, and learned that a pair could be purchased for $25, I paying for boxing and express charges. But as I was about to send my order I learned from an advertisement in your paper, that A. B. SMITH of Ulster, was engaged in their propagation, and that they could be easily obtained by him at a much less expense. I accordingly visited Mr. SMITH on his farm in Ulster, and found all correct which the BRADFORD REPORTER had stated.

Mr. SMITH had at that time between forty and fifty of the finest Chester Whites I had ever seen, of all ages and sizes, the largest one being estimated by him and other good judges to weigh when dressed 700 pounds.

We would say to farmers and others who are engaged in raising hogs for their own use, or for market, that they can be mixed with our common breed to great advantage and profit. A pair can be obtained of Mr. SMITH from four to six weeks old for $10. They grow faster and larger, mature earlier and take less food than our common breed, and always keep fat and healthier. They were originally imported from England by a gentleman of wealth and enterprise, from which the stock in the county has sprung.

Mr. SMITH is not an afternoon farmer, as his fat stock and well cultivated farm clearly indicates, showing an abundant thrift and enterprise. He takes the American Agriculturist, as every enterprising farmer should. In fact, he is a live practical man superintending all the details of Agriculture, and is consequently largely remunerated for labor.

I shall take occasion to visit other leading farmers in the country from time to time, and report to you my interviews and observations.

Bedding or no Bedding.

In an article on the subject of dry earth for bedding by J. Wilkinson, in the American Farmer, the writer says that the construction and management of stables has been an important branch of his vocation for many years. I am fond of experiment, and have tested in stable economy a great variety of systems of feeding, bedding, ventilating, etc. I have thorongly tested the use of dry earth—that is, dried clay, and clay loam, dried muck, sawdust, spent tan, long and short straw, and have used, in conjunction with all the different qualities of good gypsum. I have, after thirty years experience with the use of all the different kinds of material for bedding in stables, arrived at the conclusion that no bedding of any description is required if stable floors are arranged as they should be, and that both horses and cattle can be made as comfortable and healthful with as bedding than with.

Every observing person knows that many of the most intelligent and valuable horses have the habit of pawing their bedding on the bare floor. The writer has known dozens of instances of this kind, and where the stall floors were in a smooth condition no ill effects resulted.

Sailors accustomed to a plank bed never complain of its being hard and uncomfortable, and certainly a good bed for a man should not be objectionable to a beast. I also recommend a frequent application of dry earth to the contents of the manure pit, or house, but I do not recommend its use in stables, either in small or large quantities preferring a slight dusting of gypsum on stable floors.

I also recommend so constructing the floors of stables that the liquid excrement will pass directly through them, where I conduct it to the regular manure pit or house, and that solid excrement will mainly fall through the floor into the gutter under it, the balance being pressed through the grated floor, into the gutter, as soon as the animal steps on it, said gutter being so arranged as to be convenient of access for the purpose of cleaning it.

How the Chinese Make Dwarf Trees.

We have all known from childhood how the Chinese cramp their women's feet, and so manage to make them "keepers at home;" but how they contrive to grow miniature pines and oaks in flower pots for half a century has always been much of a secret. It is the product chiefly of skillful, long-continued root pruning. They begin at the beginning. Taking a young plant (say a seedling or cutting of a cedar,) when only two or three inches high, they cut off its tap as soon as it has other rootlets enough to live upon, and replant in a shallow pot or pan. The end of the tap root is generally made to rest upon the bottom of the pan, or on a flat stone within it. Alluvial clay is then put into the pot, much of it in bits the size of beans, and just enough in kind and quantity to furnish a scanty nourishment to the plant. Water enough is given to keep it in growth, but not enough is given to excite a vigorous habit. So likewise, in the application of light and heat. As the Chinese pride themselves also on the shape of their miniature trees, they use strings, wires and pegs, and various other mechanical contrivances, to promote symmetry of habit, or to fashion their pets into odd fancy figures. Then by use of very shallow pots, which they use, growth of the tap roots is out of the question; by the use of poor soil, and little water, strong growth is prevented. Then, too, the top and roots, being within easy reach of the gardener, are shortened by his pruning knife, or seared with his hot iron. So the little tree finds itself headed on every side, gives up the idea of strong growth, asking only for life, and just growth enough to live and look well. Accordingly, each new set of leaves becomes more and more stunted, the buds and rootlets are diminished in proportion, and at length a balance is established between every part of the tree, making it a dwarf in all respects. In some kinds of trees this end is reached in three or four years; in others ten or fifteen years are necessary. Such is the fancy horticulture of the Celestials.—Exchange.

PHILADELPHIA OPTICAL INSTITUTE,

For the manufacturing of the CONCAVE CONVEX, CRYSTAL LENSES, LONDON SMOKE AND TINTED GLASS FOR WEAK OR INFLAMED EYES.

The Concave Convex Crystal Spectacle is made by the above institute are now a long time before the public, and the rapid and increased demand for them combined with the universal acknowledgment of their advantages in vision and ease to the eye, shows plainly that they are superior to any other glasses in the market.

The majority of Spectacles are merely fancy and no matter how fine the frames, contain but a poor and worthless article of glasses, generally cast or pressed; they are made to be sold only, without any calculation respecting benefit to the eye, and therefore the great complaint of poor and weak sight. Thousands are using glasses now which tire and fatigue the eye, where the objects put thing after short usage, or require an intensely strong light and therefore destroying the sight, which, were they properly suited, would be preserved a life time.

The advantages derived for the Concave Convex Crystal glasses are the following:

The Lenses are ground of the best material, pure and hard, and made only for optical purposes, they are therefore not liable to get scratched or dim.

They confer a brilliant and distinct sense of vision not found in any other glass.

They can be used equally well by day, or candle light without tiring or fatiguing the eye.

They are ground mathematically true in the concave convex mirror, according to the philosophy of nature, and shape of cornea of the eye, therefore assisting nature only instead of forcing it.

That the lenses are centered correct into the frames.

They can be used longer than any other glasses without changing to a higher power.

The frames are made strong and durable by experienced workmen and warranted to give satisfaction.

WM. A. CHAMBERLIN, Dealer in Watches, Jewelry and Silver Ware, Towanda, Pa., has the sole Agency for these glasses in Bradford county. No Peddlers employed.

SUSQUEHANNA COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

TOWANDA, BRADFORD COUNTY, PA.

This institution has just been thoroughly repaired and improved, and will be reopened TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1870, under the charge of G. W. Ryan and E. E. Quinlan, Associate Principals, who will devote their entire time to instruct in the various departments and to the general supervision and management of the school. They will be assisted by excellent and experienced teachers in all the departments.

The course of instruction are Preparatory and Graduating English, Normal, Commercial, Scientific Classical and Ornamental.

The Preparatory is designed to thoroughly qualify the smaller pupils for the studies of the English Graduating Course, which comprises all academic studies, languages excepted.

The first year of the course completed, they can enter either of the other courses. The Normal course affords thorough instruction in Common School studies and Theory and Practice of Teaching. Students in the Commercial Departments have all the advantages of the best commercial schools in addition to thorough drill in necessary academic branches.

The Scientific Course in addition to the studies of the Graduating English, French and German, comprises special instruction in the Sciences illustrated by an excellent collection of Apparatus recently provided.

The first two years of the Classical Course are intended to prepare students well for College; the third year to fit for advanced classes in College or to combine classics with a special course in the Sciences.

The Ornamental, Modern Languages, Music, Drawing and Painting, will be taught by competent instructors.

Board and rooms are provided in the Institute. For further particulars address
