FALL HERE; TO GET COOL

To-day's the first of autumn. Weather Forecaster E. R. Demain says a low pressure, now central over Illinois and Wisconsin, is creating storms in this locality. Cold weather may be expected by the latter part of the week, caused by a high pressure area moving over the Western States.

ADVERTISING HAS GREAT VALUE NOW

Head of Big Automobile Concern Says Times Should Not Lessen Advertising Appropriations

By R. D. CHAPIN
President Hudson Motor Car Company.

Custom, in the use of any article, makes it difficult to establish new goods. For that reason America has not been able to get even a fair share of South America's trade. Now that competition is unable to deliver the goods needed in these foreign markets, those who formerly would not consider our wares are begging us to supply them with their wants.

By a play of fate our competitors for a time are forced out of the markets which they held so firmly. Salesmanship is not needed to capture these new markets for American goods, for necessity is forcing the trade we have so long wanted to seek our sources of supply.

America is the only manufacturing nation in the world not at war.

The United States is the only nation at peace in the world with a supply of food on hand in excess of her own requirements.

Our crops are more bountiful than ever before.

Our factories have never participated largely in worldwide commerce.

We have helped to feed and clothe the world, but we have never been large factors in supplying the world with manufactured goods. What we have taken from the nations now at war has been our luxuries—not our necessities.

Our wheat has been shipped to Europe to be ground by European mills into flour which in turn has been shipped to other countries for consumption.

American cotton has been shipped to England and Germany, there to be spun into textiles that were returned to America and shipped to other countries.

The copper from our mines has been shipped to Europe, there to be made into wire and into electrical machinery, which is then shipped to the Orient, South America and other places where we have secured no place in the world's trade.

Aside from a few specialties such as typewriters, adding machines, cash registers, etc., we are producing and dealers, so far as the world is concerned, in raw products.

New Markets Now Open

We are in the position of the merchant who has goods to sell, but who, because his rivals are more firmly established and have a satisfactory prestige, is unable to secure a fair share of the trade, and who awakens some morning to find out that the stocks of all his rivals have been destroyed by fire. In consequence buyers enter his store who never before had considered him as a supplier of their wants.

The cotton which has been shipped to Europe to be made into textiles for use in South America, in the Orient and in Europe, must now be shipped to New England to be woven into textiles for use in markets we have never intimately known.

No matter how soon war may be terminated, damages have been done to the scheme of manufacture and distribution that cannot be repaired until after America will have had an opportunity to change the buying habits of nations that have given us slight consideration in the past.

The world undoubtedly will be less extravagant in its use of food and other necessities than it was last July. It will be less prosperous, but with 18,000,000 wealth makers suddenly transformed into so many wealth consumers, we find that our competition is removed in other markets and that competition itself becomes a user of a greater variety of our goods.

This increased money means he will buy better things for his family. It means new buildings, more furniture, better clothing, farm machinery and automobiles.

It means that the domestic trade in America will be greater, for America must produce a greater share for the world's needs. That will mean a greater activity than we now know and the profits on our increased export business will sooner or later find their way into domestic circulation.

If advertising means planting the seed for new and great business, then now is the time to do it, when the timid, through being less aggressive, make your advertising more productive, and when the keenness of the public for news increases the value of the advertising pages.

GERMANS CONTINUE TO FIRE ON RHEIMS

Kaiser's Forces Give Ground in Hand-to-Hand Battle With French

Chalons-Sur-Marne, via Paris, Sept. 21, 1.20 A. M.—The Germans continued bombarding the principal buildings of Rheims yesterday and last night. Debris and crumbling walls are all that is left of the thirteenth century cathedral, the most remarkable example that was left of early Gothic architecture. In addition to the cathedral the museum, the hospitals and the city hall were for the great part destroyed. Several inhabitants of the city were killed.

In spite of the bombardment and their repeated attacks upon it the Germans have been unable to take Rheims, which they evidently desire so as to obtain command of the railways leading to Charleville, Verdun and Chalons. The allies have repulsed the German attacks and made several impetuous counter movements in which their infantry charged with magnificent bravery regardless of the terrible storm of shrapnel.

First Ranks Suffer

The first ranks suffered terribly, but as fast as the men fell others rushed up to take their places, and when the enemy's lines were reached there were hand-to-hand encounters, in which the Germans were forced to give ground, except on the heights of Brimon, which, owing to the overwhelming fire of machine guns, the Germans recaptured. At the same time the French made a fierce assault on the heights of La Pompelle, which they carried at the point of the bayonet. The struggle here was a desperate one and after the retirement of the Germans Turcos were found dead from bayonet wounds with their arms clasped in such vice-like grips around the necks of antagonists that they literally had to be pried open.

Difficult to Describe

Persons who have returned here from Rheims say that it is difficult to find words to describe these attacks and counter-attacks of infantry amid showers of shot and shell and in a deluge of rain. The Germans, they declare, seem in a desperate hurry to finish their task and are enraged at the stubborn resistance of the French. The Germans, they say, had all the best of the position at the opening of the battle, but the situation is now changed, and the French have been able to gain positions on high ground that will enable them to fight on even terms and declare the Germans will never be able to break their lines at Rheims.

Covered With Mud

Soldiers are coming back here covered with mud and drenched to the skin by the heavy rains which continue to fall. The chalky clay ground north of Rheims has been so softened, they say, that it will be impossible for a retreating army to get away its artillery. To this fact they attribute the desperation with which the Germans are fighting.

Floods caused by the continuous rains are greatly impeding military operations and especially in the east, where the streams are beginning to overflow their banks. The river Sovaureuz already is out of its banks and some habitations are isolated. While rescuing a family M. Goublet, the administrator at Belfort, was seriously injured. He was mentioned in the order of the day for bravery by the general in command.

Mount Joy, Pa., Sept. 21. — Mrs. Anna Geistwhite and her daughter, Mrs. Ella Miller, both died on Sunday evening within an hour's time at the Geistwhite home in Elizabethtown. Mrs. Miller was nursing her mother, who had been suffering from dropsy, and was apparently in good health and died from a paralytic stroke. The sudden shock caused her mother's death within an hour.
