Conspiracy against the Czar.

From a letter published in the Paris papers, and containing the most circumstantial details, it appears that at St. Petersburg a tragedy was on the point of being enacted, the effects of which, had it been accomplished, would have spread at least over one half of Europe. A plot against the life of the Emperor Alexander, as well as against the lives of the different members of the Imperial family, has lately been discovered, in which some of the highest members of the nobility and state functionaries were implicated. For some time past the house of a great functionary was the rendezvous of a large number of persons, who assembled there under divers pretexts. They were for the greater part government functionaries, retired officers, landed proprietors, discontented with the late reforms, and individuals belonging to the different coteries into which the court is now divided. These personages, it is stated, became the centre of a conspiracy which aimed at the lives of the Emperor and his children as well as the establishment of a constitution. The complicity of two ladies of the highest rank shows whom the conspirators had in view as their future Czar.

Relations were also formed with some exiles, who were brought round by the promise of the immediate proclamation of a liberal constitution; a Senator, who on account of the favor he enjoyed at court, was considered to be the most fitting intermediary between the different malcontents; and the correspondence on the subject was carried on through him. However, the frequency of the meetings drew the attention of a servant to them, and a gossiping propensity on his part was the means of putting the police on the track, which they pursued, by the Emperor's orders, with the greatest circumspection. The letter further states that several persons who visited the re-unions were suddenly dismissed from their situations. This had the effect of at once arousing misgivings that they were discovered. Some strove to quit the country, and the ringleader in the plot became utterly deprived of reason.

When all this was known to Government, M. Patkul, the Chief of the Russian police, paid a domiciliary visit to the house of the Senator, for the purpose of seizing all his papers. While doing so, a Colonel in the Russian army, and Secretary to one of the ladies in question, came and displayed an order which empowered him to take possession of the treasonable correspondence. A warm contest ensued; but Patkul was the victor, and in the letters which he found was discovered the clue to the conspiracy. The two ladies were immediately ordered to leave St. Petersburg, and also forbidden ever to return there. But the fate of all the others has not yet transpired.

The red men of the forest are gathering to the standard of the South. Albert Pike, the Indian's friend, acting as commissioner of the Confederate States, is forming alliances with the most noted tribes of the West. Even the wild Camanches, heretofore untamable, are about to be brought under the protection and influence of the confederate government, and mustered into the service of the Confederate States. It will be a grand sight to see a cavalry brigade of those wild and fierce horsemen of the desert, subjected to the discipline of civilized warfare, fighting the battles of the South. Our Indian army will strike terror into the craven hearts of our mercenary invaders.—[Memphis Avalanche, Aug. 20.

BEAUREGARD'S lying proclamation about "beauty and booty" justly roused the indignation of the whole North. It is an enemy now employing wild Camanche Indians, fighting with tomahawks and scalping knives, which pretends to teach us the humanities of warfare.—[N. Y. World.

A LATE reverend doctor had a somewhat lofty manner of expressing himself. In the course of visiting his parish he called at the cottage of an elderly female, who familiarly invited him to "come in, boy, and sit down." The doctor, who expected a more respectful salutation, said, in stately tones, intended to check any further attempt at familiarity: "Woman, I am a servant of the Lord, and I come to speak to you on the concerns of your soul." "Then you'll be humble, like your Master," admirably rejoined the cottager. The doctor felt the reproof deeply, and never again sought to magnify himself at the expense of his office.

THING EACH OTHER.—They have a story in Chicago about a drunken captain in camp who met a private of his company in the same condition. The captain ordered him to "halt," and endeavoring in vain to assume a firm position on his feet and to speak with dignified severity, exclaimed: "Private Jones I give you(hic) four clock to gissober in." "Cap'n," replied the soldier, "as you'r (hic) drunk as I am, I'll give you til (hic) five clock to gissober in."

THE success which has attended the new loan is the most extraordinary in the history of financial affairs. Already, even before the notes are ready, thirty-seven hundred applications have been made for it in New York city. From the millionaire down to the servant girl, and the old woman with her "stocking of gold," the applicants are thronging by hundreds to the Sub Treasury.

RICHARDSON'S
IRISH LINENS,
DAMASKS, DIAPERS, &C.
CONSUMERS OF RICHARDSON'S LINENS, and those desirous of obtaining the GENUINE GOODS, should see that the articles they purchase are sealed with the full name of the firm,
J. N. RICHARDSON, FOWN & CO.,
as a guarantee of the soundness and durability of the linen.
This caution is rendered essentially necessary, as large quantities of inferior and defective Linens are prepared, sealed after season and sealed with the name of RICHARDSON, by Irish Houses, who, regardless of the injury thus inflicted alike on the American consumer and the manufacturers of the genuine Goods, will not readily abandon a business so profitable, while purchasers can be imposed upon with Goods of a worthless character.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, is a constitutional disease, a corruption of the blood, by which this fluid becomes vitiated, weak, and poor. Being in the circulation, it pervades the whole body, and may burst out from its attacks, nor is there one which it may not destroy. The scrofulous taint is variously caused by mercurial disease, low living, disordered or unhealthy food, impure air, filth and filthy habits, the depressing vices, and, above all, by the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin; it is hereditary in the constitution, descending "from parents to children unto the third and fourth generation;" indeed, it seems to be the rod of Him who says, "I will visit the iniquities of the fathers upon their children."

Its effects commence by deposition from the blood of corrupt or ulcerous matter, which, in the lungs, liver, and internal organs, is termed tubercles; in the glands, swellings; and on the surface, eruptions or sores. This foul corruption, which genders in the blood, depresses the energies of life, so that scrofulous constitutions not only suffer from scrofulous complaints, but they have far less power to withstand the attacks of other diseases; consequently vast numbers perish by disorders which, although not scrofulous in their nature, are still rendered fatal by this taint in the system. Most of the consumption which decimates the human family has its origin directly in this scrofulous contamination; and many destructive diseases of the liver, kidneys, brain, and, indeed, of all the organ
