Agricultural.

Sheltering Stock.

Fodder is scarce—partly from the summer drouth, partly from the early spasmodic winter, partly from inattention to climate changes and dilatoriness on the part of farmers themselves.

It is heart-rending to see the dumb animals turned out into the fields, or on the roadside, shivering and shaking under the hedge rows and in the fence corners, or prowling about the frozen, snowy fields in an effort to find some grub to make up for short commons by browsing the frozen herbage. That the animal economy requires air and exercise nobody will deny. But that the animal can get any adequate, proper profitable subsistance in a frozen field is an economy of the animal nature which everybody must deny. The savants tell us that proper shelter and protection in this climate reduces the food requirement one-third to winter an animal and keep it in an average profitable condition. This may be taken as a fact admitted by practical men of sense on all side.

From the portico of this hospitably house, in all directions are to be seen the hungry, discontented cattle browsing about the fields, except those of my host. His are in comfortable yards, each class by itself, and all protected by a large barn and spacious hovel on the north, flanked east and west by comfortable and ample shedding. Comfort is visible on every side, as the animals chew the cud of quiet satisfaction to themselves and profitable expectancy to their owner. All around, in every direction, is wanting this economical provision, while the animals, coming in from the frozen fields to have their hungry stomachs aggravated by a few bunches of frozen stalks thrown on the ground, must find shelter on the lee side of a stack or a fence, or if there be, as in some cases there is, an attempt at some shedding, it is not at all sufficient, and two or three of the master animals will occupy the whole, leaving the weaker out in the cold. An empty stomach in man or beast is a ruthless thing. Remember that the Master, before he preached to the multitude in the wilderness, fed them.

This carelessness, to say the least of it, on the part of the average farmer, in regard to sheltering, stabling and foddering stock, is extravagant, wasteful, inhuman and cruel; more, it is wicked: and it is astonishing to see such a state of things in an old settled country, and by a generation who have had the advantages that this one has enjoyed. Half a century ago there may have been some excuse, but now there is none. The farmer as a class is too well off—too independent in these days—to plead poverty as an excuse. Even where he cannot afford a building, he can afford a few posts, some poles, with straw and stalks enough for a comparatively comfortable shelter for his dumb animals, as a matter of profit to himself, as well as some moral satisfaction. Much better be doing this than leaving their cattle shivering in the fields, while they are loafing around the stove of the grocery and road-side groggery, too many of which and too much of which are all around us.

Be persuaded, brethren, you who are careless in this wise, to mend your ways, and after experiencing the good effects of even such inadequate shelter, you will come to complete sheltering too, when the race of scrub cattle will disappear forever, and in its place we shall see all around us an animal "as is an animal," as Sam Slick would say, while the Country Gentleman tells you and has been telling you for forty odd years, "Shelter your stock." B. W. H. Livingston Co., N. Y.

BREEDS OF FOWLS.—The recent publication of a new edition of Tegetmeier's Poultry Book, has called out a lengthy review of the book by the London Saturday Review, from which we condense the following as Tegetmeier's opinion of the different breeds now principally kept in England:

Two data are given from which to estimate the value of a fowl for the table or market. "A table fowl should be all breast, with short limbs and small bones." Also, that fowls are in perfection for the table only before they have attained maturity. Therefore a cross of the Malay, with its long, snaky neck, and plump, high-flavored breast, with the short-legged Dorking, will produce an extraordinary table fowl. He objects to the Spanish on account of their dark legs, so objectionable in market. The Games have the drawback of a yellow skin, though the flesh is well flavored. The Polish and Hamburgh, though excellent in flavor, are small in size and are delicate to rear. The Cochin develops the leg at the expense of the breast, but, although a little coarse, is a good table fowl for home use, but not for shipping. Mated with the large French breeds, the cross is white skinned, of good size, and attains maturity rapidly. The Brahma is the largest and finest of domestic fowls; with full, broad, prominent breast; a back short and broad between the shoulders and across the hips; a curved, slender neck and wings small and tight. The true Brahma is a good fattener, a first rate table fowl, early ripe, and at maturity of enormous proportions. A cross between the Brahma and Dorking is also a profitable market bird, being less impatient of restraint in feeding grounds than the pure Dorking. The Houdan is put in equal rank with the Brahma and Dorking as a meritorious fowl. Large, heavy, small-boned, and a minimum of offal, they are hardy and mature rapidly. The chickens are fit for the table at four months, and the flesh is white and fine: "On the whole, as a few hardy breeds are better than many of various merit and degrees of constitution, we should gather from Tegetmeier, as well as from our own observations, that Brahmas, Dorkings and Houdans are the best investment, taken all in all, for the poultry yard."

COAL ASHES.—The follow experiments of M. Lebouf of Argentenil on the value of coal ashes, shows that in the ashes alone, without the admixture of soil or manure, plants may grow and come to maturity. Thus, having filled three pots with ashes, he planted in the first wheat, in the second oats, and in the third strawberries. The growth was accomplished during the Summer, the wheat and oats ripening and producing full heavy grains. The straw of the wheat attained a height of about four feet six inches, while that of the oats grew about three feet six inches. These experiments have been several times repeated, with the same success.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,

FOR ALL THE PURPOSES OF A FAMILY PHYSIC,

Curing Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetters, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and Purifying the Blood, are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasent to take, but powerful in cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action; and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every day complaints of every body, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skilful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens, send certificates of cures performed and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable they are entirely harmless.

TO THE PUBLIC!

The undersigned would most respectfully say they are now prepared in every way to attend to the

UNDERTAKING BUSINESS

In all its branches. And we trust an give satisfaction, the services of any one in that line.

Having spared no expense or trouble in procuring from the shop of H. Stulen & Co., of our place, a hearse which cannot be surpassed—even equaled in elegance, this side of our largest cities. We have also secured the services of a most reliable, careful and gentlemanly person to attend to this branch of the business.

J. S. ALLYN, one of our firm, will be found at Furniture Store, on Bridge street, and C. M. Manville, the other member of the firm, at his residence on Third street, or about the shop of Dr. L. D. Peck, a very reliable and celebrated physician, whose office is on Park street, near the Elmira House.

Towanda, J. S. ALLYN,

C. M. MANVILLE.
