Butter and Cheese.

An examination of the United States census for the years 1850, 1860 and 1870 furnishes some interesting facts with reference to the progress of the butter and cheese interests of the country. It appears that from 1850 to 1860 the percentage of increase in the amount of butter was 450 in Iowa, 274½ in Wisconsin 124 in Illinois, 119½ in Michigan, 47 in Pennsylvania, 42 in Indiana, 41 in Ohio, 31 in Vermont, 14 in North Carolina, and 26½ in Maine. From 1860 to 1870, the increase was 130 per cent. in Iowa, 65 in Wisconsin, 57 in Michigan, 28½ in Illinois, 25 in Indiana, 4 in New York and 12 in Vermont. There was a loss of 21 per cent. in Massachusetts, 14 in New Hampshire and 9 in North Carolina. In the first decade the remarkable increase appears to have been the result of the diffusion of population along the railways built in that period and the rapid progress of agriculture in the interior. From the 1st of January 1850, to the 31st of December, 1850, the number of miles of railroad built was 21,427, chiefly in the middle and western States.

The second decade showed a general decline because the progress of settlement was slower. In that decade 18,465 miles of railway were built; the civil war raged, and the armies consumed the force that would have gone into new settlements. The production of cheese showed an increase from 1850 to 1860 of 338 per cent. in Iowa, 176 per cent. in Wisconsin, 62 per cent. in Michigan, 11 per cent. in Illinois, 4 per cent. in Ohio, and a loss of 47 per cent. in North Carolina, 30 per cent. in New Hampshire, 26 per cent. in Maine, 25 per cent. in Massachusetts, 6 per cent. in Vermont, 3 per cent. in Indiana, and 2½ in New York. From 1860 to 1870 there was an increase of 212 per cent. in Illinois, 198 per cent. in Wisconsin, 107½ in New York, 46 in Iowa, 41½ in Michigan, 12 in Ohio, and 11 in Pennsylvania, and a loss of 42½ in North Carolina, 61 in New Hampshire, 36 in Maine, 34½ in Indiana, 22 in Massachusetts, and 5 in Vermont. It would thus seem that a considerable portion of the apparent increase in the production of cheese is merely a shifting of the scene from east to west. In the aggregate there was an increase of 47 per cent. in the butter product from 1850 to 1860, and a decrease of 2 per cent. in the cheese product. From 1870 the increased production of butter was 12 per cent. and of cheese 57 per cent. Taking the period from 1850 to 1870, the increase was 54 per cent. in cheese, and 64 per cent. in butter, while the increase of population was 66 per cent. So that both lines of industry were behind as compared with the increase of population.

But these statements are frequently cited as to the wonderful increase in the production of butter and cheese in particular States, are wholly fallacious, neither interest keeping pace with population, and therefore it cannot be a matter of surprise that the prices remain high. The Agricultural Department speaks of "the growth of the cheese interest from 1860 to 1870," as "consequent on the rise and extension of the cheese factory system." But it is in strange contrast with this statement that the percentage of increase was less in this decade than the general increase in other industries resulting from the impulse of an improved financial system and a protective tariff. The heavy loss in six States seems to show that the cheese factories got control of the markets and that the small farmers gradually gave up making cheese, perhaps because they could not compete with the factories. Cheese however, has become a great staple export, the annual average export during the ten years, ending June 30, 1870, having been 43,641,796 pounds, against an average of 1,863,383 pounds for the preceding decade, and the exports of 1871 and 1872 average nearly 65,000,000 pounds.

In 1870 there were 1313 cheese factories, with an annual product of 109,455,229 pounds being an average of 83,363 pounds per factory, New York State, the centre of this interest, had 818 factories, averaging 94,362 pounds of cheese each. Each factory consumes, on an average, the milk of 307 cows, and the report of the American Dairymen's Association averages 400 pounds of cheese per cow. The tables of the last three census enumerations show the home consumption to be from three to four pounds per annum for each person on an average. In the cities the average is about four pounds, at which rate the consumption of cheese in Philadelphia, for 800,000 people ought to be 3,200,000 pounds yearly, and of Pennsylvania some 14,000,000 pounds. But Philadelphia being the cheese market for about 1,700,000 people, ought to sell yearly some 6,800,000 pounds of cheese. The consumption of butter ranges from 13½ to 14½ pounds per head yearly. Taking it at 14 the consumption of Philadelphia would be about 11,200,000 pounds, and the market ought to dispose of a much larger quantity. The factory system has been introduced into the production of butter, and is making rapid headway. In Pennsylvania this system is somewhat a novelty both for butter and cheese, and though it has made some progress in eastern Pennsylvania and along the northern border, it is still somewhat of an exotic. South of Pennsylvania and of the Ohio river it has made no progress at all. Yet there is no dairy region in America that has a grass equal to that of eastern Pennsylvania, and the butter and cheese of this district have long been famous.

A Few Handy Helps.—There are some things which a farmer wants but once a year, and there are others which he always should have ready. No tool comes oftener into play than a hammer for example. Every new or old wooden tool or wooden part of a tool should be oiled. Have a barrel or keg or can of crude petroleum always ready in your shop. Keep every thing well anointed. The crude oil goes right into the pores, and makes any wood durable as cedar. Keep it constantly on hand. Again, save every piece of rope, cord and leather strap. They will be useful for repairing. The next time you go to a hardware store, get fifty cents or a dollars' worth of copper wire and copper straps. Copper wire is a great deal better than iron wire, because it is so much more flexible, like cord, and copper straps are capital for repairing any fracture in woodwork, it may be so easily wrapped around, or nailed on with small nails. Then again, always have a pound or two of wrought or annealed nails of different sizes, that will clinch readily when you use them. (You will remember that in driving these or any other nails into hard wood, they will go in more easily, by first touching the points with a little grease, but don't let the grease get on the face of the hammer.)

APPLETONS' AMERICAN CYCLOPEDIA. LARGEST AND BEST
NEW REVISED EDITION.
Entirely rewritten by the ablest writers on every subject. Printed from new type, and illustrated with Several Thousand engravings and Maps.
THE ORIGINALLY published under the title of THE NEW AMERICAN CYCLOPEDIA, was completed in 1863, since which time the wide circulation which it has attained in all parts of the United States, and the signal developments which have taken place in every branch of science, literature and art, have induced the editors and publishers to submit it to an exact and thorough revision, and to issue a new edition entitled THE AMERICAN CYCLOPEDIA.
Within the last ten years the progress of discovery in every department of knowledge, has made a new work of reference an imperative want.
The movement of political affairs has kept pace with the discoveries of science, and their fruitful application to the industrial and useful arts and the convenience and refinement of social life. Great wars and consequent revolutions have occurred, involving national changes of peculiar moment. The civil war of our own country, which was at its height when the last volume of the old work appeared, has happily been ended, and a new course of commercial and industrial activity has been commenced.
Large accessions to our geographical knowledge have been made by the indefatigable explorers of Africa.
The great political revolutions of the last decade, with the natural result of the lapse of time, have brought into public view a multitude of new men, whose names are in every one's mouth, and of whose lives every one is curious to know the particulars. Great battles have been fought and important sieges maintained, of which the details are as yet preserved only in the newspapers or in the transient publications of the day, but which ought now to take their place in permanent and authentic history.
In preparing the present edition for the press, it has accordingly been the aim of the editors to bring down the information to the latest possible dates, and to furnish an accurate account of the most recent discoveries in science, of every fresh production in literature, and of the newest inventions in the practical arts, as well as to give a succinct and original record of the progress of political and historical events.
The work has been begun after long and careful preliminary labor, and with the most ample resources for carrying it on to a successful termination.
None of the original stereotype plates have been used, but every page has been printed on new type, forming in fact a new Cyclopædia, with the same plan and compass as its predecessor, but with a far greater pecuniary expenditure, and with such improvements in its composition as have been suggested by longer experience and enlarged knowledge.
The illustrations which are introduced for the first time in the present edition, have been added, not for the sake of pictorial effect, but to give greater lucidity and force to the explanations in the text. They embrace all branches of science and of natural history, and depict the most famous and remarkable features of scenery, architecture and art, as well as the various processes of mechanics and manufactures. Although intended for instruction rather than embellishment, no pains have been spared to insure their artistic excellence; the cost of their execution is enormous, and it is believed they will find a welcome reception as an admirable feature of the Cyclopædia, and worthy of its high character.
This work is sold to Subscribers only, payable on delivery of each volume. It will be completed in sixteen large octavo volumes, each containing about 800 pages, fully illustrated with several thousand Wood Engravings, and with numerous colored Lithographic Maps.
