The news to-day, as given in our dispatches, contains matter of more importance than any one day for months past—than any day, perhaps, since the commencement of the war—has brought us. We leave out of view, in speaking thus, the repulse of Banks at Port Hudson—a repulse that, at the worst, can only amount to a temporary check, or a postponement of the taking of Port Hudson until GRANT has taken Vicksburg. Nor do we regard the self refuting story the rebels have published in a Richmond paper, about BUCKNER having defeated BURNSIDE, but on finding himself flanked by the latter, that he was falling back to save Knoxville.

All this, and the accounts of the progress of affairs at Vicksburg, and of ROSECRANS' army being in motion at last—which alone would be ample as a field of speculation, and quite sufficient to enchain our most interested attention at any other time—we now turn away from, attracted by the more powerful interest we feel in the exciting and imminent situation of affairs in the east.

As events in that quarter are so rapidly evolving, no review of the relative position of the forces to be engaged so soon in deadly conflict—no statement of the facts already reported, however carefully made up to this hour of writing—would probably represent the actual situation even when these lines would come into the hands of our readers, so it is better to await results than to hasten on to that favorite fool's-play of some of our prophetic and oracular Bunsbys of the press, speculation.

We prefer to add just this statement of a matter of fact, to whatever other statements may be forthcoming in our dispatches to-night—that Gen. HOOKER's army, when it crossed the Potomac, to force LEE to fight on the north side of that river, numbered just twice what we have heard some confident arithmeticians reckon it up at, for several weeks past, and that he will certainly receive large reinforcements at once.

—And now, we say with a New York contemporary, that if the rebel army, which LEE has just led across the Potomac, gets back again safely, as it did last year, "it will be a disgraceful event for us!"

"A Word to Pennsylvania."

Is it so that all the brave men of the State are in the army? for really it looks like it. A formidable invading army has been suffered to enter the State and penetrate almost to the capital without the loss of a man. It is a disgrace—it is a blot upon our record that ages will not take away or efface, unless it is done before it fixes itself more deeply; unless it is done at once by a spirited and universal rising of those who claim to be men on election days, and by the immediate expulsion or capture of the invading host. But if, as these audacious rebels have threatened, they shall actually dare to come to the Susquehanna or the Schuylkill—less than their capture or destruction would not redeem the good name of Pennsylvania. Let HOOKER's army constitute one jaw of the vice, and the men at home the other, and LEE can never again recross the Potomac with an army. But if we are to rely solely upon the army of the Potomac, we may have the desolations that have made Eastern Virginia a desert visited upon us. It is a matter of choice. If Pennsylvania is desolated, it will be because she would not prevent it, not because she could not.

We shall now let the New York Times speak "A word to Pennsylvania." Perhaps that "word" may reach the manhood of some. It says:

"The State of Pennsylvania has a population of three millions. She has something like a hundred thousand soldiers in the armies of the Union. She is believed to be threatened by a rebel force estimated at ninety thousand strong. It is, undoubtedly, very desirable that the army of General HOOKER should save her from the danger of rebel invasion. But it is impossible at present, it seems, to prevent invasion altogether—though it does not seem unlikely that Pennsylvania may, for a time, be made the battle field for contending armies.

"Under these circumstances, and to prevent the bloody horrors that threaten the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, one would imagine that her people would rush to arms en masse to drive the invaders from her soil before they obtain a foothold upon it. Beside the large and splendid force she has contributed to the National army, she ought still to be able to raise out of her population, at least two hundred thousand fighting men. One out of ten in the population is certainly not too large a draft to make from her resources in case of actual invasion. If there were two hundred thousand men on the soil of Pennsylvania awaiting the advent of LEE's army, we venture to say that that rebel would at once have given up the idea of capturing the State Capital, or quartering his army in the State.

"It is now a fortnight since the rebels began their operations in Pennsylvania. There was but a small invading force at first, it is true, but the Pennsylvanians, like ourselves, believed there was a very large one, and might have been expected to act accordingly. But whether the first force was large or small, it gave the State a sufficient warning of what was, or might be coming. It showed that invasion was possible, and with the facts before them and us, neither they nor we had any right to act otherwise than if it were sure.

"We are amazed at the apathy that seems to prevail among the people of Pennsylvania. Panic and apathy, apathy and panic, are the burden of the successive telegrams and letters that reach us. At the first approach of the danger, the whole State seems to have been thrown on its back—we are glad it did not fall on its belly. When he disappeared, they rubbed their eyes and fell again into unconcern. When he reappeared, they were once more struck. And now that they have had time to gather up their wits and brace themselves for work, we see those of them who cannot be said to be altogether apathetic, engaged in paltry arguments as to whether their term of service shall be a week or two, or a month or two, more or less.

"The fortnight they have already lost has been invaluable to the enemy. It should have brought at least a hundred thousand armed Pennsylvanians to Harrisburg. Within four days after New York had heard the news of the invasion, this State had sent nineteen regiments to help her southern sister—fifteen of which were from this city. We have not heard of fifteen regiments being sent from Philadelphia, nor half of fifteen, nor five. We doubt if all Pennsylvania has yet fifteen regiments in the field. We do not say this invidiously. This is no time for invidious feelings or remark. This metropolis will send fifty regiments, beside the fifteen already sent to Pennsylvania, if she needs them. But we should like to see a more patriotic, energetic, warlike feeling in Pennsylvania, when she is invaded. We hear painful tales of the rebels harrying the farmers, plundering the towns, and galloping to and fro at their pleasure. Yet even this does not seem to arouse the State—nor even the neighborhoods which the rebels are ravaging. We even hear of old military companies disbanding, for fear they shall be called to the field. Our Harrisburg correspondent of this morning mentions that sixty men have enlisted from the single neighborhood, where there are twenty-five thousand people.

"What is the cause of this? Is it fear of the rebels, or confidence in HOOKER's army, or indifference? Fear of the rebels would be pusillanimous and disgraceful in a populous State like Pennsylvania. It is well to have confidence in HOOKER's army but events have proved that it will not do to confide entirely in it for the defence of the North.

"We call on the Pennsylvanians to wake up, arm, organize, and help to drive the rebels at once from their soil. But perhaps it is hardly worth while to call, when even the trumpet of invasion does not wake up the State."

Explanation of Governor Parker's Recal of the New Jersey Troops.

The following explanation of the action of Gov. PARKER, in recalling the New Jersey troops from Pennsylvania, for which he has been hastily censured by some journals, has been published, we presume, by authority:

The call on Gov. Parker for aid came from the Governor of Pennsylvania, and not from the National Government. The President did not include the State of New Jersey in his Proclamation calling for 100,000 six months' volunteers. The forwarding of New Jersey troops to Pennsylvania was simply the act of one State voluntarily helping another State in an emergency. Gov. Parker acted under the State laws of New Jersey, and under them the militia cannot be called out for over sixty days, except in case of the actual invasion of New Jersey. When, however, the New Jersey troops reached Pennsylvania, they were refused acceptance unless they would be sworn into the United States service for six months, under the President's Proclamation. The Governor of Pennsylvania moreover instructed his transportation agents at Philadelphia to forward no troops to Harrisburgh who would not enter the United States service under the six months' call. This was not what the New Jersey troops had offered to do, nor what Gov. Parker had called on them to do, nor what he had any authority by State law to require them to do. And therefore he ordered them home, the entire expense of his volunteer services, it seems, falling on the State of New Jersey.

The expression in Gov. Parker's Proclamation, that "the emergency was past" to meet which the New Jersey troops were offered, was justified by the dispatches from Pennsylvania on the 22d inst., the date of the issue of the proclamation. It was announced on that day that all the rebels had withdrawn from Pennsylvania, and that no further use remained for the troops that had been hastened forward to repel the invasion of that State.

Destitution in North Carolina.

A letter from Newbern says:

The women and children, numbering some fifteen hundred persons, on Cape Hatteras Banks, are in a very destitute condition and threatened with starvation. Every man and boy among them capable of doing military duty has voluntarily taken up arms in defence of the Union, which leaves no one at home to care for the innocent and needy. Being a very religious people they have not called upon the government for a mouthful of food, believing it wicked and dishonorable to do so while the nation is struggling to maintain its existence. Not even a clergyman or doctor remains.

It is earnestly hoped that some benevolent Christian association of the North will immediately dispatch hither a representative with clothing and other necessaries to relieve the pressing wants of these devoted Union-loving people, whose prayers are constantly ascending to Heaven for the success of our righteous cause.

The wives and children of the 1st North Carolina Volunteers and the 1st North Carolina Artillery are also suffering for the want of proper clothing, and require immediate assistance, having been driven from their homes in a destitute condition.

From Pleasanton's Command--Cavalry Reconnoitering--Incidents.

A correspondent with Pleasanton's Cavalry, in a letter from Middleburg, Va., dated the 23d, gives the following interesting experience:

Writing of Ewell's command reminds me of an event that transpired one week ago last Saturday night. Wyndham's brigade—now commanded by Col. Taylor—was ordered to Warrenton; among these, the First New Jersey cavalry, Maj Beaumont, was ordered to proceed to Waterloo, and just as far as possible toward Amissville. At Carter's Creek we found the bridge destroyed, but through the agency of a reliable contraband, a crossing was effected at 1 o'clock a. m. A squadron was then detached to cross Hedgeman's river, and feel its way toward Amissville. At the fording place the picket fired several shots, but no notice was taken of it, and the squadron pushed on. When near Amissville, a rebel soldier ran up and innocently inquired to what Division the party belonged. Maj. Beaumont responded by asking where headquarters were at Amissville, and was told that "Lieut. Gen. Ewell is at Amissville, and his troops are all about here in the woods." True enough, we were in the heart of the enemy's camp. It is hardly necessary to say that the squadron got across Hedgeman's river just about as quick as circumstances would permit.

The officers relate many interesting incidents of their experience while cutting their way through the enemy's lines. Lieutenant Chedell was shot from his horse, and fell in the road. The rebel officer in charge of the pursuing force, to his credit be it said, told his men to go to the right, as there was a wounded officer in the road, and he was compelled to use his sword to enforce the order. Lieut. Chedell has not been seen since. Capt. A. H. Bixby and Lieut Sawyer were nearly captured at the time. An officer came up to Capt. Bixby and said, "It is no use, you had better surrender; you will all be captured." Capt. Bixby replied that he could not see it. Both had pistols drawn, but neither seemed disposed to fire, and Capt. Bixby dashed off. He was subsequently wounded twice, in the thigh and right side, while being closely pursued. Lieut. Sawyer's horse kicked up, and both feet came down inside Capt. Bixby's reins. Bixby told Sawyer to cut the reins. The latter felt in his pockets, but could find no knife. B. then searched his own pockets, but he had no knife. Just at this moment B. heard a man say, "Here are two officers—surrender, you Yankee ——— ———" at the same moment firing. One ball struck Lieut. Sawyer's horse in the neck, and the animal dashed off, clearing himself very readily from the bridle rein without the use of a knife. Both officers escaped capture. Bixby has been wounded four times before.

AUTHORIZED DISPATCHES FROM HARRISBURG.—We learn from our correspondent at Harrisburg that a regular systematic way of publishing military news has been ordered by Gen. Couch in his Department. He has, in an order just issued, appointed Col. Coppes, formerly Professor of Girard College, to collect from official dispatches all the information that is not contraband. He is to make up two dispatches each day for the use of the reporters.

THE Nashville Union of a recent date says: "A gentleman who has just arrived in this city from Lebanon, Tennessee, informs us that the wheat crop of Wilson county is large and very fine. But little of it has been harvested, in consequence of the scarcity of farm hands. Farmers are offering to divide their crops equally with any person who will gather them. It is not probable that more than half of the wheat will be harvested, unless the army undertakes the job for the benefit of the government."

Having accepted the Agency for the sale of the SEMPLE CLAY, mined near St. Louis, Mo., I invite the attention of Glass and Steel Manufacturers to the Analysis given above as reported by Profs. A. A. Hayes of Boston, and J. G. Rogers, of Philadelphia, which, together with the test of actual experience by manufacturers in Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis, determine it to be the purest and most valuable Clay now known, whether Foreign or American. Pots made from it have stood in the Glass Furnace from ⅝ to 9 months.
The Analysis is of the Clay as taken from the mine, without any washing or preparation whatever. It possesses great advantages and peculiarity, which are not shown by the Analysis, and which admit of the admixture of a large proportion of ground-fire-clay.
I am now prepared to fill orders for the above Clay, to be shipped from St. Louis or delivered here.

NORTH-WESTERN CHIMNEY SUPPLY MANUFACTURING COMPANY.—This Company, chartered by the last General Assembly of the State of Illinois, with ample and liberal powers, has opened books for the subscription of stock at their office in the city of Galena, Illinois.
The manufacture of Sugar from Sorghum or the Chinese sugar Cane, and the yield of molasses, if not fraught with profit from the article even at ordinary market rates, are facts which now admit of the fullest demonstration. As Southern Illinois, in point of climate and soil, is admirably adapted for the growth of the cane, and as the cultivation of the cane already forms a great feature in the agricultural pursuits of the people, the success of the Sorghum for the factory will be readily conceded.
It is the purpose of the Company to erect and have in operation a large factory before the close of the present season; and with a view to aid in that particular, subscriptions of stock are solicited on the following terms: Shares One Hundred Dollars each; twenty-five dollars at the time of subscription, and the balance in quarterly payments. A receipt will be given for each installment, and when the full sum is paid a certificate of stock, bearing the signatures of the President and Secretary of the Company, will be issued.
The success of this enterprise, when once started, is beyond question. The President of the Company has had much experience in European countries, skilled in the erection of factories and the manufacture of sugar, and is abundantly satisfied that no field of operation he has ever seen promises better than this. He fully satisfied is he of success, that he will oppose the sale of a single share of stock at any price, however high, after enough has been taken to erect and put in operation the first factory.
Office of the Company, Commercial Avenue, near the Post Office, Cairo, Illinois.
Agent, D. W. HIRSCH.

FORTIFY! FORTIFY!
A town fearing siege held a consultation,
Which was the best method of fortification.
A sturdy stone mason gave as his opinion,
That nothing but STONE could save the Dominion.
A carpenter's said, though the last was well spoke,
'Twas better by far to defend it with oak.
A cousin, wiser than both these together,
Said, try what you please, there's nothing like leather.
While a "WATER RESERVE" MERCHANT replied,
Just as you please,
'Tis clear as a sun beam, there is nothing like—CHESS!
Which has been supplied by the ton, with several tons still in reserve, to be supplied at low rates by
