Turning Dairy Cows to Pasture.

In turning cows to pasture in the spring, there is a wide difference in the practice of dairymen. Some allow the stock to range over pastures very early in the season and before grass has started, and no attempt is made to keep it off the ground at any time during spring. We have had it even urged that there is some advantage in this, as the old tuft of grass left from last year's growth are not wholly wanting in nutrition—that cattle will feed upon them more or less, thus saving fodder, while at the same time the grazing of the old grass gets it out of the way and is of advantage to the new crop.

There is serious objections to allowing cows to roam over pastures during early spring, while the frost is out of the ground and while it is in a soft and unsettled state. The land is poached up by the tread of cattle and the grasses killed out or very much injured in these places. Again, the long continuance of the diet of dry fodder during winter renders the animal in spring eager to get a taste of anything savoring of green herbage, and they gnaw down in the ground and pull the grass up by the roots, which is easily effected, as the land is loose and the roots not held firmly in the soil.

This practice is a fruitful source of pastures running out, and must be condemned as altogether too injurious and unprofitable, since the small amount of nutrition obtained from the forage will not much more than supply the waste of the system from the extra work of travel and of roaming about in search of green food.

The opposite course practised is to keep stock yarded until pastures have obtained a good growth of grass, and the argument urged for this course is that unless pastures get a fair start, the stock will eat it down close, keeping it short all the season, and thus the yield will not be less, but during the season an insufficient amount of food is supplied. The objection to this course is that where cows are kept from the pasture until it has a large growth and are then turned in they over-feed, and the sudden change from dry to green food, affects the health of the animal not unfrequently causing serious troubles. And again, the grass often gets such a start that a considerable portion in places becomes hard and woody before it is cropped and is left unappropriated.

The best results from pastures is where they are kept in moderate growth, or so that the animals can get a good bite of grass and all parts of the field are eaten over, from week to week. The grass must be sweet, nutritious and palatable, and this state is best secured it has acquired a high growth and is approaching maturity.

The bests results obtained is when a middle course is practical. Let the animals be kept in the yard until the ground is well settled and the grasses have made a fair start; then allow the stock to go to pasture at first, but a short time during the day, but not long enough to fill themselves. This should be continued for several days, or until they have become accustomed to the change of food, when they may be turned to pasture for the whole time; but hay should be fed in small quantities at least once a day so long as the cows have desire for it.

Pastures should not be over-stocked, since over-stocking not only decreases greatly the average yield of milk from the whole herd, but it seriously damages the productiveness and permanency of pastures, causing the grass to be eradicated and leaving the space thus left to be occupied by weeds, which, from not being cropped, accumulate, and spread with wonderful rapidity. The most productive pastures are those which are thickly set with a variety of grasses, forming a thick, smooth sward, with no intervening spaces for the lodgment of weeds or otherwise, and if proper attention be given to such lands, the bests results will be obtained not only in the amount of food yielded, but also that of milk from the herds grazing upon them.—Moores Rural.

Old Potatoes.—Potatoes to be good should never be exposed to the light, but be kept in as dark a place as possible. After they begin to sprout in the spring they should be taken up from the bins or heaps and be kept in boxes or barrels. If you have a few barrels saved out for family use, instead of picking them over and turning them over and spreading them every few weeks, put them into enough barrels, so that you can turn from one into another. Have one extra barrel, and once every week turn them all from one barrel to another. This keeps them moving so often that the sprouts which come out from the potato use up the nourishment it contains, and leave it soft, watery and insipid. By treating them as proposed above, they may be kept in condition for the table several weeks longer than by sprouting them, and at the same time save a great deal of work.

Cows and Calves.—As the feed falls off, two quarts of corn meal a day will help keep up the quantity and richness of the milk. Calves and yearlings should not be allowed to fall off in condition at this season.

To Remove Mildew.—Wet the cloth mildewed with soft soap and salt; let it lie a short time, then wash it in good suds and lay it out to bleach. Or rub on soap, then scrape fine chalk on it, rub it in well, lay it on the grass; as it dries wet it a little, repeat the process and the mildew will disappear.

Coal Ashes for Pear Trees.—Coal ashes have a wonderful effect upon pear trees, especially those growing in light soil. Our ashes of last winter were used around trees in liberal quantities, and those thus treated have outgrown anything in the orchard. Some that were even sickly, and apparently ready to give up their hold on life, have been restored to perfect health by these remedies.—Peninsula News.

Potatoes in Cream.—Pare down old potatoes to a small size, throw them into salted boiling water and boil ten minutes; drain them, lay them in a napkin, and steam them ten minutes more; then sprinkle salt on them, put them in a pan, cover with cream, and heat, gradually five or ten minutes longer. Serve them in the cream. Thus prepared they are exceedingly good.

TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Bradford County Teachers' Association met at the Presbyterian Church, in Rome, June 9, 1876, Vice President G. W. Ryan in the chair. Devotional exercises conducted by Rev. Mr. Keatley.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved. The following persons were appointed as a business committee: Messrs. Keatley, Young, Seeley, and Misses Cora Heath, and Lucy Alger.

Afternoon session opened by singing. The following resolutions were reported during the session for discussion:

1st, That all teachers should have written examinations daily, and record the results.

2nd, That young scholars should not be required to commit definitions to memory.

3d, That pupils should be instructed in grammar previous to geography.

4th, That the use of a spelling book is of no benefit in teaching children orthography.

5th, That pupils should be required to thoroughly commit the multiplication table before commencing the study of written (or practical) arithmetic.

6th, That physiology should be a common school study, and that pupils be required to study it before they commence the study of algebra.

7th, That the number of school houses should be diminished and made into graded schools.

8th, That all children between the ages of 9 and 17 should be required to attend school at least nine months of each year.

9th, That corporal punishment should be prohibited in our public schools.

10th, that in the majority of cases insubordination in scholars is chargeable more to parents than teachers.

11th, That directors, by refusing to allow teachers their time while attending Associations, are materially injuring the usefulness of our Associations, if not tending to their abandonment.

12th, What are the prominent causes of failures in teaching?

13th, That the inefficiency of our school ystem is to be attributed more to the indifference of parents and directors than to the incompetency of teachers.

14th, That indifference and laziness are more prominent causes of failure in teachers than incompetency.

15th, What are the best methods of attaining success in teaching various branches?

First resolution discussed by Messrs. Peet, Keeney, Crawford, Smith, Ryan, and Eliott. Adopted.

Second resolution discussed by Messrs. Keeney, Champlin, Peet, and Crawford. Adopted.

Music. Recitation by Miss Lola Wilson.

Third resolution discussed by Messrs. Keeney, Crawford, Keatley, Peet, Ryan, and Champlin. Lost.

Fourth resolution discussed by Messrs. Keatley, Keeney and Crawford. Lost.

EVENING SESSION.

Music. Rev. Mr. Keatley conducted devotional exercises. Music. Declamation by H. W. Champlin.

Fifth resolution discussed by Messrs. Keeney, Peet, Crawford, Smith, Keatley. Lost.

Music. Mr. Keatley then entertained the Association with a short address, full of interest and encouragement. On motion a vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Keatley. Singing. Benediction pronounced by Mr. Keatley.

SATURDAY MORNING.

Singing. Devotional exercises conducted by Prof. E. E. Quinlan.

Eighth resolution discussed by Messrs. Keeney, Peet, Head, Ryan, Quinlan, Crawford, and Keatley.

The following substitute was offered by Prof. Ryan: That parents be compelled to have such of their children as are physically and mentally capable, qualified to pass an examination in such common school branches as are adapted to their age and capacity. Substitute adopted.

Music. Declamation by Mr. Frisbie.

Herrick was decided on as the next place of meeting, and the following appointments were made:

Lecturer, Hon. Geo. Landon; papers, H. K. Smith, A. Head, I. Crawford, and Mr. Peet; essays, Miss Susia Hillis and Miss Metta Crawford; recitation, Belle Hillis; declamations, F. A. Thompson, L. F. Camp, Bennie Landon; Business Committee, J. F. Elliott, T. S. Camp, I. W. Caswell, Lucinda Blocher, and Ellen Durand.

Report of the treasurer accepted. On motion, A. A. Keeney was appointed a committee to confer with the editor of Reporter with reference to settlement of bill for printing, the president and secretary being instructed to sign order for the amount reported by the committee.

On motion the following was adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of this association be tendered to the people of Rome for their generous hospitality in providing for us, and the encouragement given by their presence; to the trustees of this church for its use, and to Rev. Mr. Keatley for his interesting address, and for the interest he so kindly manifested.

After singing the doxology, and benediction by Rev. Keatley, the Association adjourned to meet at Herrick the second Friday in September.

Ella A. Spalding, Sec'y.

Whatever else is done looking to the introduction of new books into the schools of the county, we hope to see Monroe's Speller take the place of Sanders', the one now in use. The time has come when the people demand a speller which contains the words in common use in the language, instead of a compilation of words which are never seen outside of the dictionary, and are only curious in setting at defiance all the ordinary rules of orthography.

Rev. Father Dunn, of Troy, was present and assisted in the examination of classes, at the close of the school year in Canton. Would it not be well if some of the Protestant clergymen of the county who are so afraid of Catholicism undermining our school system and kicking up a rumpus in the country generally, would occasionally visit the "people's colleges," and thus emulate the example of Father Dunn?

The recent session of the County Teachers' Association, at Rome, though not so largely attended as it should have been, was a success upon the whole. The next meeting is to be held at Herrick in September, and we promise all who attend a good time. Hon. Geo. Landon has been appointed Lecturer, and although of late somewhat disinclined to go away from home to speak, he will undoubtedly spend on this occasion.
