THE DAILY POST.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JULY 17.

Particulars of the Battle at Florida and Monroe Station.

The officers and passengers on the train that arrived at 12 o'clock last night, on the North Missouri road give the following particulars of the affair at Monroe, which being gathered from parties that were present, may be considered substantially correct. On Monday, Colonel Smith, hearing that the State troops, under Gen. Harris, were encamped near Florida, left Monroe Station with a force of 500 men, to disperse them. After passing Florida, and when a short distance north of one of the fords of Salt river, on the other side of which the State troops were encamped, his force was suddenly fired on from the roadside by about two hundred of Harris' command. At this spot there was an open field, lying to the right of the road, and about eighty yards in width. The State troops, who were a mounted scouting party, had left their horses a short distance back in the woods, and fired in ambush from the opposite side of the field. The only person injured by the fire was Capt. McAllister, of the Sixteenth Illinois Regiment, who was mortally wounded. The Federal forces returned the fire without effect, and retired towards Monroe Station to await reinforcements, the balance of Harris' command having crossed the ford and commenced a system of guerilla warfare. After retreating a few miles the Federal forces encamped till the next day, when they again retired towards Monroe Station. A short skirmish here engaged in, without loss to either side. In the meantime no guard having been left at Monroe, Capt. Owen entered the place with about 200 of the State forces, and burned the depot and some cars.

The officers on the Hannibal and St. Joseph road report thirteen passenger and seventeen freight cars destroyed, and another station house burned a short distance from Monroe. Colonel Smith, as soon as he reached the latter place, threw his entire force into a large building used as an academy. Harris' command, some 2,500 in number surrounded him and brought two six pound cannon to bear on the building. Owing to the distance at which they were placed and the unskilful working they did no execution.

During the constant interchange of shots that took place, two men, not connected with either side but residents of Monroe, were killed. The name of one was Hotchkess.

Day before yesterday strong reinforcements arrived from Hannibal and the West to the aid of Colonel Smith. General Harris, seeing that his men were incapable of making effectual resistance, being armed with shot guns and common rifles, ordered them to leave and look out for their own safety.

He also ordered them to assemble as speedily as possible, in the northern part of Callaway county, where he intended making another stand. Yesterday, Harris, with fifty men was about ten miles from Mexico, the balance of his force being scattered over the surrounding country. On his side there are none reported killed, and only three slightly wounded. On the Federal side only those already mentioned.

Gen. Harris intends making another stand in Callaway county. The excitement through the country is great, young men leaving with what arms they could obtain, and in parties of tens and twenties. Hundreds of them yesterday passed through Mexico, and it is estimated that Gen. Harris' force when reassembled were several thousand men. The road master on the Hannibal and St. Joseph road reports the Salt River bridge destroyed, and the remains now lying in the bed of the stream, and all the culverts destroyed between Palmyra and Salt River.

A provision train from Hudson City for Monroe was thrown from the track yesterday, by a rail being displaced.—Between Hudson City and Monroe there is a large amount of track torn up, and the officers of the North Missouri Road report that no train arrived at Hudson yesterday, or will be able to under some days.—St. Louis Republican, of Saturday.

F. F. V.'s—Fleet Footed Virginians.

The boast of aristocratic Virginians that Pocahontas founded their families, is but one among the boys around the brows of the F. F. V.'s. The F. F. V. has a reputation not only great but growing. He is renowned for his affection for sherry cobblers, and his aversion to anything calculated to induce either weariness or perspiration. If all the world were F. F. V.'s, the doom of labor upon man would never have been fulfilled. Let him alone, and the cassimeres of the F. F. V. would grow a crop of mushrooms, when two small boys would be necessary to pull his mouth open whenever he wished to gap. Since the F. F. V.'s have shaken off their indolence and taken to fighting, they show that some things can be done as well as others, and that when propelled by the proper kind of fear, an F. F. V. possesses an ability to get over nearly as much ground in a given time as a dummy locomotive. For this reason, a poetical friend suggests that the F. F. V.'s have lately entitled themselves also to fresh laurels as "Fleet Footed Virginians." In their recent retreats, beginning at Philippi and ending with the last battle, they have shown an ability to do up their miles with a loseseness only to be surpassed by F. F. V.'s when Pennsylvania bayonets are perforating their coat tails. Eye witnesses of these retreats inform us that the speed on these occasions, of the Fleet Footed Vamosers, would have done no discredit to an equal number of hound-yard curs, each with its tail inserted in the cleft of a split stick. Think of it, an F. F. V. six inches in advance of a Pennsylvania bayonet, passing mile-stones at the rate of twenty per hour. Where's John Randolph? Where's Pocahontas? and how now about the sacred soil of Virginia?
