THE CONVENTION.

Yesterday was the worst possible day for a Mass Convention. It commenced raining early in the morning, and at the time fixed for the procession to form, it was pouring down, and continued to rain throughout the morning.

Yet, wet and disagreeable as it was, the ardor of our friends was not dampened. The blood of the people was up and could not be cooled off in this way. They had come in droves to take part in this display, and their irrepressible zeal was proof against the pluvious state of the atmosphere. They had come in to show their hands for the Union, and they were going to do it, rain or no rain.

So in spite of heavy showers and muddy streets, the procession was formed, and truly it was, under the circumstances, a formidable and highly creditable demonstration. What it would have been had the weather been fine, it is impossible, of course, to say. Doubtless it would have been much more formidable; but as it was, taking the depressing influences of the weather into consideration, it was one of the finest displays of the kind ever witnessed here. The procession was nearly an hour in passing the corner of Smithfield and Fifth streets, and instead of being a failure, as the Copperheads fondly anticipated, it was a grand success.

This turn out has shown conclusively that our people are thoroughly awake to their duty in this canvass, and hard at work. General Apathy was nowhere to be seen, yesterday. General Activity has taken his place, and we have seen enough to assure us that every part of the country will do its duty on the second Tuesday of October.

We refer to our local columns for a full report of the Convention.

ARE YOU ASSESSED?

This is a pertinent inquiry to every one. Answer it for yourself and then ask your neighbor. Let the local Vigilance Committees see to it, also. To-morrow is the last day upon which assessments can be made for the October Election. The following is the list of Assessors in the various districts in and around the city.

Valleybingham on McClellan.

Vallandigham trips, after all, taken the stump for McClellan. He made a speech at Sidney, Ohio, a few days since, in which he announced that he should support McClellan. He said:

"That there may be no misapprehension, let me say to you that I intend to vote on the 8th of November, and sentiment to support, according to the measure of my zeal and ability, the nominees of the Chicago Convention—George B. McClellan and Geo. H. Pendleton. Speaking thus distinctly upon that point, I am here to discuss, not the personal qualifications of the gentlemen named—one of whom is my personal friend—but to discuss demorable principles."

And then he went on to say that General McClellan's letter made no difference, and was of no more importance than any other individual's letter. He said:

"They are the private opinions, if you please, of General McClellan, which no has a perfect right to entertain and publish. I, having an equal and perfect right to dissent from them, reject them."

"I not only entertain the opinions expressed in the Chicago platform, but I recognise that platform as containing the law and the prophets of the democratic party."

Speaking of McClellan's letter, he said:

The two principal points in that letter of acceptance to which I object were before that Committee. The one containing the threat of future war was unanimously rejected. The other, to the effect that, until the States and people of the South had returned to the Union, we would not exhaust these arts of "statesmanship," as they are called, received but three votes in that Committee, though presented a second in the very words of the letter itself.

From this it would seem that McClellan's letter, in advance, was before the committee on resolutions. If that be the case, the fraud perpetrated by the party is even more deliberate than at first supposed.

There is nothing of any interest in the speech, beyond these references to McCLELLAN. He concluded by urging the people to vote for McCLELLAN, assuring them that McCLELLAN was a true man and he knew the General would abide by the principles of the Democracy.

Severe Punishment for Endeavoring to Obtain a substitute in Canada.

We learn from a gentleman of Ontario county the particulars of a costly attempt to escape the draft by fleeing to Canada and endeavoring to obtain a substitute there. Two young men named Jorvis and Gifford Bowerman, belonging to a wealthy family at Farmington, stepped over into Canada just before the 6th of September to await the "eventualities" of the draft. The latter was drawn and set about hiring a Canadian substitute. He engaged his man and was ready to leave with him, when the authorities, who had been apprised of the proceedings, arrested him on the charge of violating their law against foreign enlistments. He was tried, found guilty and sentenced to a term of eighteen years imprisonment. The young man was, doubtless, not aware of the penalty he incurred in endeavoring to secure a substitute in Canada. His case will serve as a warning to others who may have visited Canada under like circumstances. Mr. Bowerman, we understand, leaves a wife and one child at Farmington.—Rochester Union.

The number of physicians in the United States is 22,453, of lawyers, 37,153; of clergymen, 37,453.

The Great Chicago and Richmond Compromise.

The St. Louis Democrat says that in the compromise meeting proposed by the Chicago Democrats, the two parties would discourse as follows:

The Democrats would say to Jeff Davis, "We are determined that the Union shall be restored by any means except one; that is, we will not fight you." But Jeff would reply, "If you do not intend to fight us, why not remove your armies from our soil, for otherwise we we will fight you."

Democratic Party—"Oh, that is the very idea—that will be done instantly."

Mr. Davis—"Then you will let us alone—that is all we want."

Democrat—"No; the North and South must live together. We are unswervingly for the Union."

Mr. Davis—"But we don't want to live with you, and according to the doctrine of State sovereignty, we have a right to do as we please."

Democrat—"But, listen, Mr. Davis, the Union must be restored, but you may make your own terms. We are unswervingly for the Union."

Mr. Davis—"Very well, then. Depose your President, and let Richmond be the Confederate capital for all the States, you joining us, whom you admit you have so outrageously wronged."

Democrat—"But would you not consent to make the city of Washington the Capital?"

Mr. Davis—"What is the difference, so the Union is restored? Nevertheless, I will consent to make the change when you have deposed of McClellan and his adherents."

Democrat—"Oh! he is with us. He is ready to do your bidding. We are unswervingly for the Union on any terms but fighting for it."

Mr. Davis—"But what about the runaway negroes?"

Democrat—"We will catch them for you."

Mr. Davis—"What about our war debt?"

Democrat—"We will pay it."

Mr. Davis—"And our ruined homes?"

Democrat—"We will restore all by the labor of our hard-fisted yeomanry."

Mr. Davis—"Will you deliver to us the hundreds of thousands of slaves whom the war has made free?"

Democrat—"We will."

Mr. Davis—"Then I will consent to be President of the United States. But you, plebian scoundrels, take care how you, again, by your rabdill majorities, attempt to thwart the will of the aristocracy of the land and assail the divinity of slavery."

General Dix on the Chicago Platform.

General Dix made a speech at Sandusky on the 26th, in which he defined his position. He is "foremost" the Chicago platform, it will be seen, as all loyal men are. The Sandusky, Ohio, Register, of the 27th inst, says:

"It soon being noised abroad last evening that General Dix was in the city, a crowd collected at the West House, and on Columbus avenue, in front of it. The Union band of Sandusky repaired to the house and played several airs, when the crowd, which was by this time very large, began calling for 'Dix.' 'Dix,' when he came out upon the balcony of the hotel, and was introduced to the crowd by Captain Steiner as the man who early in the war uttered that nob's sentiment—'If any man dares pull down the American flag shoot him on the spot.'

"He was received with three loud cheers, and briefly addressed the people, saying:

"Fellow-citizens: I am very thankful to you for the honor you have done me. As I arrived here late to-night, am engaged in public business, and shall depart at an early hour in the morning, I know you will excuse me if I limit what I have to say to a simple acknowledgment of your kindness and courtesy.

"I will say one word, however, on the subject which lies nearest the heart of every loyal man—I mean the rebellion. It has been my conviction from the beginning that we can have no honorable peace until the insurgent armies are dispersed and the leaders of the rebellion expelled from the country. [Loud cheers.] I believe that a cessation of hostilities would lead inevitably and directly to a recognition of the insurgent States; and when I say this I need hardly add that I can have no part in any political movement of which the Chicago platform is the basis. [Renewed cheering and applause.] No, fellow-citizens, the only hope of securing an honorable peace—a peace which shall restore the Union and the Constitution, lies in steadily persistent and unremitting prosecution of the war [great applause]; and I believe the judgment of every right-thinking man will soon bring him to this conviction.

"With these few remarks, and renewing the expression of my thanks for your kindness, I bid you all good night."

Death of the Traveller Spke.

The literary world and all admirers of bold adventure will hear with regret that Speke, the distinguished African explorer, is dead. The information is brought by the Asia, which arrived off Cape Race yesterday, but no particulars or dates are given.

To Speke belongs the honor of having solved that great problem of ages, the source of the Nile. His explorations have been made known to the world by his remarkable book of travels published in England about a year ago and republished here by Harper Brothers. It is probable that through his sad death Captain Speke may have laid the seeds of the disease which has carried him off.—N. Y. Ev. Post.

A CHEMIST HERE says: "In the present high price of kerosene lamp wicks, people can make a better wick than they buy by taking cotton flannel, of which all have pieces, and folding it up three thicknesses, just wide enough to go into the tube, and catching the edge with coarse stitches. The wick will burn well, and can always be easily rolled up and dried."

A MERCHANT in Boston, named Conant, who failed in 1861 for $75,000, paid off his creditors on Saturday, both principal and interest.
