The Boldest Oil Swindle on Record.

There have been many huge swindles perpetrated in oil operations during the past few months, but the following, which is noticed in the Titusville Reporter, eclipses anything in the swindling line which we have yet seen. It appears that certain parties who had been engaged in boring near Franklin, visited the town one day last week, stated that they had struck oil, that their well was yielding one hundred barrels per day, and that they would sell out the whole thing for $70,000 cash. A couple of gentlemen were dispatched to look at the well, and on arriving there, found everything as represented, the machinery in perfect operation, and the well pumping into a huge tank a very good quality of oil, at fully the rate indicated. The visitors agreed to invest, but wanted a few hours for deliberation. They accordingly returned to Franklin and consulted some of the best "oil men," to ascertain the value of such a "supposable" investment, and were assured that it would be worth $300,000 at the least. This settled the question, and they hurried back to the owners, closed the bargain, planked the cash, and prepared to make their fortunes without delay. The next day it was found that the old employees of the company had left, but others were promptly installed, and the pumping resumed. Judge the astonishment of the purchasers upon discovering that, notwithstanding the continual pumping and flow of oil, it did not rise in the tank! In other words, there were "surface indications" of a big leakage. The pump was stopped, and an excavation commenced at the side of the tank. A few feet below, a smaller tank was found, communicating with the upper by a small tube, through which the oil was conducted. From the lower tank another tube descended diagonally to the well, about eighteen feet below the surface, and at a still lower depth the well was plugged. This device for securing an inexhaustible well could not well be improved. But the victims "couldn't see it." They went back to Franklin in search of the sharpers, but the latter were non est, and up to the present they have not been arrested.

A Rat Story.

A Philadelphia cotemporary relates the following singular adventure with a rat: In a drinking saloon on Chestnut street, above Twelfth, the other night, a terrier started a rat. The rat dashed out of the door, up the steps to the street, and then straight across. A lady was walking up. She was just in front of the Chestnut street Theatre, when the rat ran up the steps of the cellar on the opposite side of the street. The rat was running for his life; the dog in pursuit of him was running for a good dinner. The rat, when about a dozen lengths ahead, sprang upon the ladies dress, ran up under her cloak and nestled close upon her sleeve. The lady shrieked with horror and dismay. So piercing was her cry that a gentleman ran hurriedly to her relief. She pointed to her arm, said "a rat in my sleeve," and again gave utterance to a piercing shriek. The gentleman boldly grasped the protuberance, and made a vigorous squeeze. A better squeeze never yet was made upon a lemon by a first-class bartender. The rat felt through the intervening clothing into the gentleman's hand, with a painful bicuspidal incision. The grip upon the beast, however, was too vigorous. His life was crushed out, he fell to the ground, and the lady, with faint, unintelligible moroldness, clinging any further assistance, wended her way homeward.

PLAGIARISM.—Eds. Gazette: An evening contemporary, in its issue of last Thursday, contained a daming letter purporting to have been written by a "special correspondent" from the oil regions of West Virginia, but an observing friend of ours has discovered that in some parts the letter is a gross plagiarism from one of the able letters of Mr. William Wright, the special of the New York Times, which was published in the latter paper on the 18th inst. Fair play in all things, even among newspaper correspondents, and if Mr. Wright is the author of the "Geological formation" article, he certainly should have been credited with the honor by the filching "special." ACCIDENT TO A SOLDIER.—A German named John Locker, was severely injured on Monday, by being caught between the car and the platform, in the rear end of the depot of the Pennsylvania railroad, on Liberty street. He was a new recruit, from Philadelphia, and on his way to join the 78th Regiment, to which he had been assigned. He was sent to the United States Hospital.

PASSENGER RAILWAY FARE INCREASED.—The fare on the Manchester Passenger Railway has been increased from five to seven cents. There is considerable grumbling among some of the patrons of the road, but the majority of them pay the advance as philosophically as though the two cents were being added to a pound of beef or sugar.

PASTOR CALLED.—The First Baptist church of this city has given a unanimous call to the Rev. J. S. Dickerson, of the Second church, Wilmington, Delaware.

M'LLE. DEMOREST FOR APRIL.—Won't the ladies be pleased to hear that M'lle. Demorest has arrived? Of course. You can get it at Pitcock's.

ENOCH ARDEN—Get it at Pitcock's.

EXACTLY.—An exchange, speaking of an old gentleman living in its vicinity, aged 89 years, who was still as active, hale and hearty as most men of fifty, says: He invariably takes a glass of Pinkerton's Wahoo and Calisaya Bitters with his meals. He also rides a great deal, and to the above popular beverage and healthful exercise he attribut
